REOPENING OF ENTIRE ARMED MERCHANTMEN CONTROVERSY IS CERTAIN IF MARINA WAS ARMED

WHETHER ARMS FOR DEFENSE IS LEGAL IS NOT SETTLED

Question Which Arose in Lusitania Negotiations Has Been Permitted to Lapse Into Obscurity

SAY AID REFUSED BOATS

Marina Survivors State Submarine Followed Boats for Half Hour; Say Second Torpedo Fired

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Reopening of the armed merchantmen controversy between this government and Germany is certain if it is proved the British steamer Marina was armed at the time she was sunk by a German submarine, statements of Secretary Lansing indicated Thursday.

Whether merchantmen have a right to arm for defense is still an open question between this government and Germany, Lansing admitted. This question will be the principal one if negotiations develop with Germany over the death of six Americans on board the Marina, it was stated.

While this government has maintained the right of merchantmen to arm for defense, Germany has never admitted it. The question first arose when the Lusitania was sunk. This government has insisted that merchantmen may arm with any guns not over six inches in calibre. When discussion of this point arose during the Lusitania negotiations, the state department showed the Lusitania was unarmed. Without a recession by this government from its position or an admission by Germany that merchantmen might arm, the question was permitted to lapse.

Claim No Aid Given
LONDON, Nov. 2.—The submarine that sank the British steamer Marina with the probable loss of six American lives followed the ship's boats for half an hour after the Marina went down, but offered no assistance, American survivors reported.

A Devlin of Norfolk and P. S. Famlin of Baltimore, among the Americans landed at Dublin, told practically the same story. The submarine was submerged when she fired the first torpedo, they said, but came to the surface and after seeing that the steamer remained afloat shot another torpedo into the port side.

Dispatches from Queenstown on Thursday said the missing members of the Marina's crew have been given up as lost. Practically all patrol boats that might have picked them up have been reported.

Consul Frost was to telegraph summaries of the affidavits he obtained from American survivors and also depositions of the surviving officers Thursday.

H. B. Middleton of Fredericksburg, Va., reported in press dispatches to have perished, was saved. Consul Frost telegraphed on Thursday. The name of the sixth American victim reported Wednesday to be "Brue" is true, the consul reported.

Information Incomplete
WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The state department continued gathering the facts in the Marina case and withholding what it learned from all inquirers save President Wilson.

The president was kept in constant touch with every development, at his own request. He will be the first advised when Berlin's response comes to the department's request for information the German admiral may have concerning the disaster that cost six American lives.

From the American embassy at London and the consulate at Queenstown the state department sought data not only on the question of whether the Marina received warning before she was torpedoed, but as to the armament she carried and her relation to the British admiralty.

Bernstorff Calls on Berlin
Ambassador Bernstorff Wednesday afternoon said he had sent a wireless message to Berlin asking for all information that may be obtained there concerning the sinking of the Marina.

He expressed his own disbelief in the reports thus far received, which indicate that the submarine gave the Marina no warning.

FURUSETH DROPS SPEAKING TOUR TO VISIT SISTER

Famous Union Leader Is Brought Back to Neighborhood by Tour and Goes to Mrs. Dittinger

HE HAS HALF A DAY Goes from Blair via Galesville to Lewis Valley Farm Where Lost Sister Awaits

Whirled back to the vicinity of La Crosse by the wheel of his speaking engagements, Andrew Furuseth, famous father of the La Follette Seaman's act, was scheduled on Wednesday to take a little side trip up Lewis Valley on a matter entirely unconnected with politics or union affairs. It was to meet the sister he never saw, Mrs. Olina Dittinger, whom The TRIBUNE found for him a fortnight ago, after he had been carried out of reach by his speaking engagements.

Mr. Furuseth spoke Wednesday night at Blair. He was to have come to La Crosse at noon Thursday with half-day free from engagements, in which his friends were going to whisk him by auto up the county past Holmen, to where his sister was waiting in her little farm home. At 2 o'clock, however, he had not arrived, and it was believed that he had gone from Blair to the Dittinger farm via Galesville, in order to have a longer time to spend with his sister. This would be much the shorter route, and with his visit rigidly curtailed by his speaking dates, it was believed that Mr. Furuseth had availed himself of the quickest way, in order to spend all the time possible with his lost sister.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 2.—Manufacturers eye this city hopefully, awaiting the meeting of railroad chiefs here Friday with Interstate Commerce Commissioner McCord, when an attempt will be made to solve the coal famine problems.

BUSINESS SECTION OF TOWN BURNED

DONNELLY, Minn., Nov. 2.—Three hundred thousand dollars damage was done by a fire Thursday that destroyed the business district here.

NEENAH SWITCHMEN BRING INVESTIGATION OF HOURS OF LABOR

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 2.—A statewide investigation of hours and conditions of labor for railroad switchmen may result from the hearing to be held in Neenah Thursday by the railroad commission on November 9 in the case of the complaint of the E. R. Knowlton Lodge No. 357 of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, against the conditions existing in the Soo yards at Neenah and Menasha.

It is charged in the complaint by the railroad men that there are only two crews of two men each employed in the Neenah-Menasha yards and that this is an insufficient number to protect life, health and safety of the men and the public.

HUGHES AT HALLOWEEN PARTY

ON BOARD THE HUGHES SPECIAL, BATAVIA, N. Both entered into the spirit of the festivities, wore fancy caps and blew horns.

Dr. Haffner, Physician of Chihuahua, Knocked Senseless; Relief Train Hurries from Juarez

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 2.—Twenty-eight Mexican de facto soldiers, forming the escort to a train on the Mexican Central railway line, were butchered in cold blood, four hundred passengers were lined up and robbed and a German subject beaten senseless by two hundred Villista bandits at Laguna last Monday, when the railway line was cut by the Villistas.

Official announcement to this effect was made here Thursday by Consul Soriano Brevo.

The town of Laguna is about 150 miles straight south of the American border. An official bulletin giving meager details of the butchery reached the border when the wires were reopened Thursday.

Bandit Chiefs Murga and Quesado, allied with Villa and noted for their cruelty, were in command of the Villista detachment.

Train Crowded
The train, which left Juarez Monday, was crowded with passengers. All were ordered from the cars, lined up and robbed of the valuables and in some cases of their clothing and shoes.

Dr. Haffner, a German physician of Chihuahua City, was returning from El Paso to his home. One bandit struck him over the head with a rifle butt, rendering him unconscious, according to advice received at the Carranza consulate. Few other passengers were harmed, it is believed, unless they resisted.

As information of the affair reached Chihuahua City, a military train with 400 de facto soldiers aboard was hurried north to Sanz in an attempt to strike the raiders.

The consulate's announcement tacitly admitted that the railway line is still severed at several points and Chihuahua City still isolated. No trains were leaving Juarez Thursday.

The official bulleting continues: "The main column of General Maycotte reached Ortiz, about eighty miles south of Chihuahua City yesterday, on the way to Santa Rosalia. San Buena Ventura and Namiquipa recaptured by government troops. Three bandits executed at Namiquipa."

By isolating Chihuahua City from all food supplies, munitions and troop reinforcements, Villa plans to force an evacuation of the city by Carranzistas, military men here believe. Unless the break in railway lines is repaired within a very short time, it is generally conceded General Trevino will be pushed to the extremity of leaving the capital.

The city has a heavy garrison of Carranzistas and a large civil population dependent upon food supplies from the north and south.

Officials of the Mexican de facto government announced Thursday that two military trains have been sent out from Chihuahua City with several hundred de facto soldiers to guard the operations of the repair train in the effort to throw up temporary bridges in place of those burned by Villistas. Officials declared trains would be running again in a few days.

From reliable sources it was learned that a Villista raiding party under command of General Salazar was hurried farther north to destroy more bridges and harass trains, if any were sent out.

WILSON, "BOB" AND WILLIAMS VICTORS IN SCHOOL BALLOT

Wilson Leads Hughes by Nearly 150 Out of Thousand Votes Cast by Pupils and Faculty

JOLIVETTE AND WEBER

Lunde, Tetley, Kleber, Schlachbach, Thompson and Lueth Lead for County Offices

If the sentiment at the La Crosse high school accurately reflects the sentiment at large in the city, the vote next Tuesday, so far as La Crosse is concerned, will result in the victory for the following:

Woodrow Wilson.
"Bob" La Follette.
Burt Williams.

Close to a thousand votes were cast in the high school poll which concluded Wednesday evening, following a hot campaign inside the walls of the institution, in which mass meetings, literature, posters and all the machinery of a regular campaign were employed.

As a result, Wilson received 496 to Hughes 359. Williams beat Philip 477 to 377. La Follette defeated Wolfe 491 to 372.

The County Race
An interesting angle of the high school vote is the outcome of the contests for county offices, about which there is considerable speculation. According to the high school showing, Ole Lunde, John Weber, W. L. Tetley, Leonard Kleber, Bert Jolivette, Otto Schlachbach, Andrew E. Thompson and Henry Lueth are in the lead.

John J. Esch was given a two to one vote over Herman Grothofhorst for congress. Carl Kutenacker, assisted by J. C. Wolford for the assembly in the first district, and R. W. Davis trimmed Henry Freehoff by the narrow margin of four votes in the second district. N. C. Bachellor defeated E. F. Clark 430 to 412.

The ballots used were prepared by the printers from the same type as the official ballots to be used next Tuesday. The biggest vote polled by any candidate was 580. Bert Jolivette, democratic candidate for county clerk, and John J. Esch, republican candidate for member of congress, both polled this total. The results are as follows:

For President
Wilson, 496; Hanley, 6; Hughes, 359; Benson, 21.

SAYS WILSON FEARS SHIFT

WICHITA, Kas., Nov. 2.—"President Wilson's campaign managers," said Allan Benson, socialist candidate for president, before 8,000 persons Wednesday night, "are resorting to desperate measures in an attempt to stop the heavy shifting of voters that they know has already started from the democratic party to the socialist party."

KOENIG HOPES TO LAND $10,000,000 CARGO FROM DIVER

Deutschland's Load Said to Contain Jewels, Besides Possibly Stocks and Bonds

THE CREW IS IDOLIZED

Sailors Escape Townswomen Only by Signing Photos of the Merchant Diver

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 2.—Smiling Captain Koenig, skipper of the green German submarine freighter Deutschland, confidently thought Thursday he would be able to unload his $10,000,000 cargo without interference from the United States.

He claimed there was no hitch about this, but Collector of Port McGovern of Connecticut, evidently thought different, for he hastened to Hartford Wednesday to confer with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, presumably about the jewels and the stocks and bonds said to be aboard.

Town Aroused
Sporadic New London is wider awake now than it has been since the days when the British sneaked up the channel, captured the fort atop the Groton hills and slew the brave American commander.

Captain Koenig and his crew are cheered every time they appear on the street. A sixteen-year-old member of the crew, with several sturdy fellow members narrowly escaped em-

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 2.—"We'll probably turn the Deutschland into a museum after the war and charge ten cents admission," said Captain Koenig, her commander, Thursday.

"Just now, though, we're planning to have no visitors aboard except the mayor of New London."

The story goes that when the Scott greeted the Deutschland and inquired if it wanted a tow, a voice from aboard the submarine answered "No, we want beer."

Anti-American Feeling Strong
Captain Koenig's talk with newspapermen left the impression that anti-American feeling is still rather strong in Germany, though he hesitatingly said it wasn't "very."

Scoffs at Blockade
"It's only a spy system, a chain of commercial agents," he said, "and if the British navy comes out, why we'll be ready for them, though, frankly, we cannot catch up to England's naval strength during the war."

"Germany thinks the war will last at least another year and it is confident of the outcome."

"The submarine is the vessel of the future. Battleships are no good any more and anybody who doesn't see that must wear blinders. I think the United States is beginning to realize it."

EX-CONVICT A SUICIDE

BELOIT, Wis., Nov. 2.—Edward Fulton, ex-convict, committed suicide here Thursday by jumping off the central river bridge. He had just completed serving a three year sentence on a charge of attempting to shoot and kill a former sweetheart.

ALUMNI ROOTER-KINGS

LEAD FOOTBALL MARCH BEFORE BIGGEST GAME

Downtown La Crosse will rock with cheers and music Friday evening. It will not, however, be related to the presidential campaign. It will be an outpouring of high school spirit preparatory to the big game of the 1916 football season—Saturday's contest with Riverside High of Milwaukee. Upon the outcome of the Riverside game depends La Crosse's claim to a second state championship. Moreover, the Red and Black team has been undefeated for two years and is going into the game determined to keep its record clear.

Led by a band and illuminated by red fire and torches, the parade will start from the high school at 7 o'clock Friday evening. Myron S. Locke, advertising manager of the Doerflinger store, but once a famous cheer leader of the high school, and John Robinson, also a former rooter king alumnus, will be the drum majors of the march, and many alumni of the high school are expected to join in the procession and add their voices to the familiar yells.

The parade will march from the high school down Sixteenth street to Main, west on Main to Third street, north to State, west to Second, south to Main, east to Third. At Third and Main streets the parade will mass for a rooting session.

From Third and Main the march will continue to Pearl street, east on Pearl to Fourth, north to State street. At Fourth and State streets there will be another demonstration, and from there the parade will go up State to Fifth and south to the La Crosse theater, where there will be more cheers. The parade will disband at Fifth and King streets.

BERLIN ADMITS FALL OF LAST VERDUN FORT IN HANDS OF GERMANS

MACKENSEN HALTS DOBRUDJA ADVANCE, PETROGRAD CLAIMS

SAY RUMANIANS HOLD ON

Austro-Germans Checked in Advance on Campolung, But Continue Attacks on Alt Valley

PETROGRAD, Nov. 2.—Field Marshal Mackensen has halted his advance in Dobrudja, apparently because of a shortage of men to protect his long line along the river Danube.

Dispatches from Bucharest declare that Mackensen has been forced to send several regiments to the Transylvanian front to aid Falkenhayn. The withdrawal of these troops is said to have checked his offensive operations.

Practically everywhere along the Transylvania front except south of Red Tower pass, the Rumanians are holding their own. The Austro-Germans have been checked in their advance on Campolung, but are continuing their heavy attacks in the Alt valley, where the loss of two villages by the Rumanians was officially conceded Wednesday.

Constanza Shelled
BERLIN, via Wireless to Sayville, Nov. 2.—Enemy warships have shelled the Rumanian black seaport of Constanza recently captured by the Germans and Bulgars, without success, it was officially announced on Thursday.

"Rumanian attacks against the Austro-German troops that had advanced beyond Altschanz and Predel pass failed under loss," the war office stated. "We captured eight officers and two hundred men. South of Red Tower pass engagements which are favorable to us continue."

"On the Macedonian front, Serbian advances in the Gerna bend and north of Nidze Planina were repulsed. "On the Strumitza front there have been active foreground engagements."

SCHOOL HACK HIT; THREE HURT
MUNCIE, Ind., Nov. 2.—Three young school girls were probably fatally hurt, Peter Knott, driver of a school hack, badly injured, and seven other school children less seriously hurt when a line car on the Portland division of the Indiana Union Traction line crashed into the school hack at Como, near Portland, Ind., about 7 a. m., Thursday.

Claim Defeat of Russians
"In the eastern war theater Prince Leopold's front, in the army group of General von Linnsingen, Westfalian and East Prussian troops under Major General von Dittfurth's command stormed Russian advanced positions near and south of Vitonitz, on the left bank of the Stochod. Besides suffering heavy losses, the enemy left twenty-two officers and 1,508 men in our hands. We captured ten machine guns and three mine throwers. Our losses were small."

HATCHING MACHINE FOR FISH
Because of the increasing demand for fish to stock ponds and streams, the United States bureau has been compelled to devise a machine to facilitate hatching. It is an automatic hatching par of cylindrical shape and round bottom supported on glass knobs. It contains two outlets into which glass tubes are fitted. Fresh water flows in through one tube and waste water out through the other. Two quarts of water passes through the tubes each minute at a pressure of eight pounds to the square inch. In high temperature eggs may be hatched in three days although eight is the usual time. The hatching jar can hold 100,000 fish at a time.

DIGGING FOR THE BURIED ISSUES

Election day is at hand, and the net result of party efforts to date is to complicate the situation with confusion to which both parties have contributed. Beneath the surface of this campaign debris lie a few simple facts. Upon these facts must interpretation and decision depend, and it is the province of the independent newspaper to arrange the important truths that are involved before the voter in a manner so simple as to facilitate him in reaching his conclusion.

Elements in the decision will be the characters and past records of the men as well as what they propose for the future, and these are all things that can be definitely ascertained.

To begin with, the men:

President Wilson is an idealist of the practical type. He does not lack constructive ability of that caliber essential in the high office which he holds. He is honest, an indefatigable worker and intensely patriotic. He is scholarly, a great rhetorician, but the charge that he is too academic in his treatment of public questions cannot be demonstrated in a general way. That he frequently changes his mind in relation to large public matters is true, but it is at least tenable that the ability to change his mind was a valuable asset of a president who entered office with the habits of thought instilled by a century of peace, and who was suddenly confronted by a world war that made chaos of the precedents of peace. Humanity is strongly developed in his character, with considerable caution, and an underlying strain of pugnacity.

Mr. Hughes possesses the highest type of the legal mind. His training goes largely to action and efficiency. He has initiative for big enterprises and a wonderful capacity for detail. His mastery of economic problems has been demonstrated in three capacities: those of the attorney, the jurist and the executive. While less given to idealism than Mr. Wilson, the humanities occupy a large place in his character, and this side of his nature always manifests itself in his dealings with public questions. His is the vigorous type of patriotism, but is characterized by deliberation as well as force.

Here are a few chances for preference of the hair-line type, but the voter who must make his choice upon no other basis would find himself in the position of the admirer who wishes he might be alone with one of them, with "Oother dear charmer away". No fair citizen will question that both of these men are "presidential timber".

So much for the personalities of Woodrow Wilson and Charles Evans Hughes. Let us now turn to their public records.

Mr. Hughes' campaign, upon the retrospective side, is being conducted largely upon his record as governor of New York. In that capacity he fathered a compensation law, laws limiting the hours of labor for men in public utility service, a comprehensive line of child labor laws, a law for the semi-monthly payment of wages, and a legal program for welfare in workshops. He stopped race-track gambling and worked hard for a primary election law.

As governor Mr. Hughes vetoed the two-cent passenger fare law, five-cent Coney Island street car fare, equal pay for teachers bill; he publicly demanded the defeat of an income tax law.

Both his reasons for vetoing the latter measures and the efficiency of the laws which he did pass are debated. But considering the period in which his administration came the general conclusion must be that the trend of his work was decidedly progressive. It has an important bearing upon the matter that the first act of Mr. Hughes' administration was to throw out Boss Barnes and his satellites and to conduct public affairs in the open.

Somewhat later than Mr. Hughes, President Wilson became governor of a state. In New Jersey he found much the same situation that Mr. Hughes found in New York—a boss-ridden state wherein was a crying necessity for definite constructive reforms in the interest of the general public. There is a remarkable likeness between the state administrations of these two men. Mr. Wilson's first act was to annihilate bossism and to take his administration to the people. He prosecuted a program of reformation one of the big assets of which was a law to rehabilitate the states in the eyes of the nation. New Jersey had enacted a corporation law which invited trusts and combinations that desired to escape the regulation of other states to incorporate under the laws of New Jersey. Governor Wilson placed the corporation law of the state upon an honest basis.

Mr. Wilson's legislative program in New Jersey included employers' liability and workmen's compensation laws; child labor laws prohibiting employment of children under sixteen years between seven p. m. and seven a. m., and forbidding the employment of children during school hours; also establishing a fifty-eight hour week; a series of safety and health laws affecting labor; eight-hour day on state, county and municipal work; eliminating contract labor in prisons. No attack has been made by the president's opponents on any of this legislation and it is not alleged that his administration as governor was not in all essentials progressive.

There seems nothing deadly in this "deadly parallel", and one is forced to the conclusion that as state executives Wilson and Hughes created no divergence that can be made the basis of a serious campaign issue.

GERMANS CAMPAIGN TO MAKE GOVERNMENT MORE RESPONSIBLE TO PEOPLE

By CARL W. ACKERMAN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
BERLIN, Nov. 2.—Agitation for changes to make the German government more responsible to the representatives of the people is continuing in the German newspaper and the reichstag.

Writing in the Leipzig Tageblatt, Paul Junck, a member of the reichstag, demands that parliamentary under-secretaries be named to represent the government departments at all sittings of Germany's legislative body. He believes that these secretaries should be present to answer queries and keep the reichstag in closer touch with the government's policies.

THE TRIBUNE'S DAILY TRAVELETTE

MONROVIA
A dirty dilapidated little town is Monrovia, the capital of Liberia. The houses are built of wood, brick and corrugated iron. They are steep, narrow, shambling structures, with high pitched roofs and small balconies that are crumbling rapidly to pieces. The executive mansion, as the president's house is called, was evidently once a pretentious structure, but now it presents a rather sad appearance. Several of its windows are boarded and the window-panes have been broken and inside its elaborate furnishings are worn and faded.

The streets of Monrovia are merely crude footpaths through the jungle, occasionally bridged with cracker boxes and gin cases when lying over deep marshy ditches. Such a road leads to the big brick college where the Monroviens are supposed to receive their education, but because it is usually hopelessly impassable the majority remain at home on their balconies, lolling half-dressed in rickety chairs and lazily fanning mosquitoes.

The one word that describes Monrovia is "shifless." Here came the negro slave in the early eighties, backed by philanthropists who wanted to see him given a chance in his own country. And here is the negro slave today, idling away his life in the tropical luxuriance of the jungle, which feeds him without cultivation, and watching his one big chance fall to ruins.

After all, the negro can hardly be blamed if he fails in a task that has tried the nerve of white men. Colonizing Liberia has not been all a delightful experience. There are still many lions, panthers and snakes in the jungle, which make road building a dangerous occupation, and occasionally the interior tribes of negroes get obstreperous and eat a couple of their more cultured brethren.

Monrovia is pitiful, but not ugly. Over all its shabbiness and decay grow the scarlet hibiscus, pink oleanders and other tropical flowers decorating with their brilliant blossoms the corpse of a fine ideal.

Mrs. Von Loben Sels shook her pretty head. "No," said she slowly, "that is what I can not decide. Ought I write, or would it be best to say nothing and leave all in the hands of the committee?" She paused in sweet humility. Was it for her to question the decisions of that august body? But Miss Varney's glance was not acquiescent. She shook her head, as though in doubt.
"What would you do?" asked Mrs. Von Loben Sels plaintively.
"Oh," protested Miss Varney hastily, "you should consult a wiser person than I."

The door opened and the family straggled in like aimless sheep, looking for Miss Varney as the shepherdess who would provide their evening meal.
"Ask them," suggested Miss Varney quickly, as she rose to the seven melodious chimes of the old-fashioned clock.
"No, no," begged Mrs. Von Loben Sels in a whisper, catching Miss Varney's hand, "no, no, dear Miss Varney."

Miss Varney patted her hand reassuringly as to her own secrecy, and hurried to the door, nodding gaily at the others. In the doorway she paused and turned to them.
"Dinner should be ready," said she. "I am going to see what the trouble is."

She nodded merrily, turned to leave and as quickly turned back again. She stepped hastily into the room, softly closing the door behind her and glancing swiftly over the crowd. Her eyes caught Ricky's and sent him a plea for help; he responded quickly, and reassuringly.
"Dear people," said she in a low hurried voice, her delicate hands clasped, "Miss Appleby is coming down-stairs. She has done this to surprise us."

She paused. No one spoke. Each thought vaguely of that forty million yet to be distributed.
Miss Varney still hesitated and it was plain that she had something more to say. She had become grave and her sweet eyes were full of perplexity, an earnest plea for pardon if she hurt their feelings.
"Dear people," said she again, one hand behind her, reaching for the door-knob, "dear people, she does not—approve of—divorce."

In one last swift glance, her eyes sought Ricky's, then she turned and went quickly out and down the hall, leaving the door open behind her.
The room was very still, seeming to be full of a painful hush and none cared to look at his neighbor. Miss Appleby, the distributor of forty millions, did not approve of divorce. The announcement was appalling, astounding, hardly believable.
"If she does not approve of divorce, she is very ignorant of the higher ideals of womanhood," said Maude boldly, as a small boy whistled when passing a graveyard at night.
The others nodded feebly.

"Divorce, while no longer a disgrace, is indeed an honor," continued Maude, braver than the others, in the thankful thought that she was not divorced and Great-aunt Appleby could find no fault with her on that score. Forty millions would be a delightful addition to any one's bank account and Maude was as anxious as any of the others as to its ultimate disposal.

There was no time to say more. Miss Appleby appeared in the doorway, Miss Varney beside her. She was a sprightly, little woman, with a round, wrinkled face, gentle and kindly. Her white hair was arranged in a charming coiffure, softening the outlines of her face and counteracting the deep wrinkles of sickness under her eyes and around her mouth. There was a flush of excitement on each old cheek and her eyes were bright. Her short breath and the evident nervous twitching of her hands betrayed how sick she had been and still was.

She entered eagerly in her haste to greet her relatives, a bit in advance of her companion. In the doorway she paused in frank astonishment and glanced around the great room which was full of men and women where she had expected only a few. Could it be a surprise party? Had the neighbors received word that she was coming down that evening—but no, that was silly—no one, not even Miss Varney, knew that she planned to come. Besides, these were strangers and mostly young. Her neighbors were old and wrinkled and sick like herself. She glanced at Miss Varney and laid one hand nervously on the younger woman's arm.

Henry Appleby came forward, his hand out. "Well, auntie," said he gaily, "you don't look a day older than when I saw you last."
The old lady laughed in relief at the sight of the familiar face. She laid her hand in his and clung to it eagerly.

"How long ago was that, Henry?" she asked.
"That was—let's see—five years ago last fall," answered Henry Appleby, drawing her to him and kissing one wrinkled old cheek.
"I remember," cried the old lady. "May was too sick to come with you; you said."
"She was," said Appleby, and retrained from glancing anywhere save at his aunt. Mrs. Morgan—May—strove not to blush. Seeing her, Miss Appleby dropped Henry's arm and hurried forward.
"And here is May," she cried. "Is not this May?" hesitating, then beamed as Mrs. Morgan kissed her. "I remember you when you were a

NEWS NOTES—MOVIELAND

"Hidden Valley" is the title of a five-reel picture starring Valkyrien, otherwise known as the Baroness Dewitz, early in November. Boyd Marshall is the leading man in the feature, which is the story of a heathen tribe in South Africa that captures an American girl and makes her their "white goddess." Valkyrien plays the part of the American girl although in real life she is a Danish baroness.

Mme. Petrova Has New Leading Man

Earle Fox, who won fame in the "legitimate" as well as in motion pictures, is supporting Mme. Petrova in her new production. In the play now being produced Fox is seen as a weakling who falls in everything he attempts because he is unable to control a craving for drugs.
Mr. Fox was born in Oxford, Ohio. He attended the Miami Military Academy and Ohio State University, and went on the stage eleven years ago with a stock company in Cincinnati. Next he was seen in stock at the College Theater, Chicago.
William Hawtrey saw him acting, was deeply impressed by his acting and engaged him to appear in "Dear Old Billy." He went to London with Mr. Hawtrey, and returning joined the "Third Degree" in Chicago. Afterward he was seen with Annie Russell, Wilton Lackey and Douglas Fairbanks. Four years ago Mr. Fox became a motion picture actor.

Art Lovers to See Ethelmary's Portrait

Little Ethelmary Oakland, the diminutive Thanhouser-Pathe star, has just finished posing for a full-length portrait by Emil Fuchs, who until the war broke out, was portrait painter to the King of England. This painting of Ethelmary shows the beautiful blonde child in one of her serious moods, with hands crossed in her lap, looking dreamily into space. She is dressed in a shimmery olive-green silk old-fashioned mother-of-pearl gown with a quaint tam-o-shanter of the same color and material, edged in fur. The portrait will be sent to Mr. Fuchs' exhibition in Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, and several other cities, and will then

The latest bulletin in connection with Olga Petrova is that the Beaux Arts Corporation, of Chicago, has offered her $3,000 a week for the first year and $1,000 a week for the second. It is further bulletined that the Beaux Arts people have deposited $250,000 in bank to guarantee the star's salary just as an evidence of good faith.

The Fox studios are glad to welcome William Farnum back. He was absent from his work for about six weeks, being quite ill. But though he looks a bit pale and not quite as powerful, he says he feels fine, and will put as much realism as ever in his new picture, "Fires of Conscience."

bride, my child, and Henry brought you down to see me. And now, who is this?" turning to Mrs. Fisher.
Mrs. Fisher, with the density of one who did not belong to the family and was without hope of a share in the forty millions, had not been impressed by the grim warning Miss Varney had given them. She took the old lady's hand and kissed her, saying gaily, "I feel that through Harold, you are my auntie, too."
"Harold, my dear?" questioned the old lady.
"My husband's little boy," explained Mrs. Fisher, trying to make up to Mrs. Parker for her former mistake by constantly repeating the name of Harold.
"And who is your husband?" asked Miss Appleby, her nervousness increasing with her perplexity, a worried expression creeping into her eyes as she tried to understand.
"Harold Montague Fisher," replied Mrs. Fisher. "Little Harold was named after him, you know."
"And what relation is Harold to me?" I can't remember a Fisher in the family."
"Oh, no, Mr. Fisher himself is no relation," Mrs. Fisher was also getting nervous. She felt by the way the others were watching her that she had done something else wrong. The atmosphere had become strained.
"No, Harold is your great-nephew on his mother's side."
"But aren't you his mother?" questioned Miss Appleby.
"No, oh, no," protested Mrs. Fisher, floundering helplessly now under the cold glances directed at her, aware that she had blundered, but not sure how.
"Is his mother dead?" asked Miss Appleby in a daze.
"No," Mrs. Allison Drake Fisher Parker could stand it no longer. "I am Harold's mother, aunt."
Miss Appleby turned. "Why, Allison," Meekly she permitted herself to be kissed, and as one stunned she questioned on "I thought that you had married a Drake."

Hope Almost Abandoned When She Found Remedy

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Relieves Chronic Case of Long Standing.

After a long period of suffering with liver and bowel trouble that brought on piles, during which she had tried many remedies without obtaining relief, Mrs. Mary J. Jewell, of Berrien Springs, Mich., heard of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and obtained a bottle from her druggist. This simple, inexpensive, laxative compound brought almost immediate relief and Mrs. Jewell wrote to Dr. Caldwell about her case.
In her letter Mrs. Jewell says, "I had tried so many things for the piles, without being helped at all, I had about given up hope of ever being any better. I knew it was the condition of my bowels that caused them, and after I had taken a bottle of your Syrup Pepsin I knew it was just the medicine I needed. I am very grateful to you for sending me the little book—the advice and instructions it gives would teach anyone how to get well and how to keep well."
Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, free from opiate or narcotic drugs and is mild and gentle in its action, bringing relief in an easy, natural way, without griping, or other pain or discomfort.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for fifty cents a bottle. To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure you get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. LABOR

Do You Want Freedom or Do You Want Slavery?

American labor was enslaved. The injunction was its yoke. Woodrow Wilson destroyed the yoke and set labor free.

Woodrow Wilson was the first president to give labor a place in his cabinet. He made William B. Wilson, a union miner, secretary of labor.

A republican advertisement, seeking to paint Hughes as a friend of labor, quoted "Legislative News", published by the New York State Federation of Labor, as follows: "He (Hughes) was the greatest friend of labor laws that ever occupied the governor's chair in Albany."

That was in 1910. Let us see what "Legislative News" thinks about Mr. Hughes now. On October 31, 1916, Editor John M. O'Hanlan said:

"I am supporting President Wilson both personally and in 'Legislative News'. As a candidate for president x x x x Mr. Hughes has attacked the sincerity and intelligence of organized labor. x x x x The entire labor movement of the state of New York, almost without exception, is in favor of the re-election of President Wilson. No wage earner should fail to support him."

Thomas E. Ryan, chairman of the New York State Board of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, in his official report says:

"As governor Charles E. Hughes vetoed these labor measures: A FULL CREW BILL; A VESTIBULE BILL; AN ANTI-STRIKEBREAKERS' BILL; AN ANTI-COLLISION BILL; A CONEY ISLAND FIVE-CENT FARE BILL."

Following is the statement of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor:

"In my experience with United States Congresses during two score years I have not seen anything like the fine spirit toward labor, toward the rights and welfare of all the people, pervading all the branches of the Wilson administration. Labor has been recognized neither in the spirit of deference on the one hand, nor of patronage on the other.

"But the spirit of recognition has been the right one: that labor should be made part of the National Councils; that its patriotism should be conceded, and that its knowledge of its own needs should give it paramount voice in legislation directly and peculiarly affecting its own rights.

"This fundamental right spirit has guided the Wilson administration to wise and righteous labor legislation. Because of that spirit and its results in definite laws and policies, how can liberty-loving Americans loyal to the Republic and its ideals fail to sustain an Executive who has done so much for their realization?"

SAMUEL GOMPERS,
President, American Federation of Labor.
Washington, D. C., August 25, 1916.

The following labor leaders have publicly endorsed President Wilson for re-election:

ANDREW FURUSETH, president International Seamen's Union of America.

JOHN B. LENNON, treasurer American Federation of Labor.

PAUL SCHARRENBURG, secretary California State Federation of Labor.

T. A. HANSON, Secretary - treasurer International Seamen's Union of America.

JOHN R. ALPINE, president United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters.

Against the word of all these great leaders of labor Mr. Hughes brings to sustain his claim for labor support ONLY THE STATEMENT OF A SINGLE LABOR leader made in 1910, but now emphatically REPUDIATED by its author.

So much for what men think; what men do is of greater importance. Over the shoulders of the Adamson bill, which he condemns and declares unconstitutional, Mr. Hughes is attacking the Wilson labor program consisting of forty-two labor laws constituting LABOR'S CHARTER OF FREEDOM. Had he remained a justice of the supreme court, MR. HUGHES WOULD HAVE VOTED TO DESTROY THE ADAMSON LAW. What would he do as president?

Men, what shall it be: FORWARD WITH FREE LABOR, UNDER WILSON OR BACKWARD TO SLAVE LABOR, UNDER HUGHES?

Cedar Rapids, Ia., boys, spent some time in McGregor Tuesday. On the sixth of October they shipped their canoe and outfit to Blue Earth, Minnesota. From that place they paddled down the Blue Earth river to where it joins the Minnesota river to Mankato, then down the Minnesota to a point above St. Paul where they entered the Mississippi. They expect to finish their trip at Dubuque, taking train from there for home. They had a somewhat exciting time on the Blue Earth river on account of low water and rapids, were held up on the Minnesota river by a snowstorm and had a stormy crossing of Lake Pepin but otherwise say the trip was fine despite the lateness of the season.

Special for Candidate

The special train with Democratic Nominee for Governor E. T. Meredith, National Committeeman W. Marsh, United States Attorney Porter, Maurice Connolly and other prominent speakers aboard will reach McGregor from Mason City at 1:55 p. m. Friday and leave McGregor at 2:35 giving forty minutes time for the speakers to make short addresses. The Iowa State Band, the finest band in the state, will be on the train and will play at both towns. The local committee is billing the country around McGregor and it is expected a crowd will be here to greet and hear Mr. Meredith and his distinguished party. The train will make ten minute stops in Clayton county at Luana, Monona, Clayton, Guttenberg and Buena Vista.

Books Show Advance

As an evidence of the problem that all bakers in the United States are facing at the present time the books of the Bickel Baking company of McGregor, a concern that is doing a large business in Northern Iowa, Southern Minnesota and Southwestern Wisconsin, show the following extreme advance in materials since 1914. At the beginning of the war in July, 1914 flour was $4.25 per barrel; it is now $10.00 to $10.50. Sugar, 100 pounds was $4.50; it is now $7.85. Lard, 100 pounds, was $10.00; it is now $17.00. Sweet con-

it is now $11.00. Raisins per pound were 6 1/2c; they are now 12c. Besides the advance in the ingredients used in making bread, box materials and bread wrappers have advanced seventy-five per cent.

Elwell Reports

W. H. C. Elwell who represented McGregor at the convention of the Mississippi Valley Improvement association in La Crosse will give the Commercial club here a report of the speeches and work of the convention.

DUTIES, CONSIDERED PROHIBITIVE, ARE IN EFFECT IN MEXICO

JUAREZ, Mexico, Nov. 2.—A new scale of duties on imports into Mexico went into effect Thursday, under a decree issued recently by First Chief Carranza. Duties on many staples, including food and clothing, have been raised to almost prohibitive figures and it was predicted importation of some articles would be stopped altogether.

The duty on oats, of which large quantities are being shipped to the American expedition, has been raised to $7.50 per ton. Wheat, corn and hay, however, are free.

The heaviest duties have been placed on milk at twenty cents per kilo (two and a half pounds), ten cents per kilo on soap and flour and twenty cents per kilo on canned meats.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Vanish

(Helps to Beauty)

A safe, reliable home-treatment for the quick removal of superfluous hairs from your face or neck is as follows: Mix a stiff paste with some water and powdered delatone, apply to objectionable hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This simple treatment is unfailing and no pain or inconvenience attends its use, but to avoid disappointment be certain you get genuine delatone.

Save Your "Jits" Intrinsic Value Is Seven Cents

A nickel, at the present prices in the silver market, is worth between six and seven cents, according to the statement of a normal school pedagogogue who recently took the trouble to assay one of Uncle Sam's jitneys. Hence, if you have twenty nickels, you have nearer a dollar and a quarter than a dollar, in actual value. The normal prof., however, did not mention any way by which the increased value of the despised "jit" can be realized. Inquiry at the banks discovered that they are still taking Uncle Sam's word for it that a nickel is only five cents' worth.

Bullion in a nickel is ordinarily worth something less than five cents. A silver dollar, in normal times, is only worth about 87 cents. The only time you can be sure of having exactly a dollar is when you possess twenty-two and a fraction grains of gold.

Sawdust Extinguishes Fires.

Spreading over burning gasoline a mixture of 10 pounds of bicarbonate of soda and 12 pounds of common sawdust has been found by the British Fire Prevention committee the most effective method of extinguishing a small fire of this kind. The sawdust, though not necessarily wet, must be free from shavings and chips, and even alone proves better than such materials as sand. It is explained that the coating of sawdust excludes the oxygen of the air from the liquid, while the carbonic acid set free from the salt by the heat tends further to stifle the flame.

DEUTSCHLAND CAME THROUGH CORDON OF HOSTILE BOATS

Submarine Submerged for Considerable Distance to Avoid Contact with British Warships

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 2.—Plunging and diving—at times in the teeth of a storm—the German merchant submarine Deutschland made her second trip to the United States through a veritable lane of allied warships. She came out of the darkness and the waves during the early morning hours on Wednesday. Nosing her way up the sound she was quickly warped in alongside her "mother-ship" the Willehad, and with her sailors at liberty some of the details of her second remarkable voyage were learned.

Avoid Hostile Craft

At one time the submersa freighter was submerged for ten hours in mid-ocean. The Deutschland was forced to spend this time beneath the waves owing to the presence of hostile war craft lurking nearby, one of the crew declared. Captain Koenig, the smiling commander, who brought the Deutschland on her first voyage, was again in command, but up to an early hour Wednesday afternoon had been so busily engaged with officials of the company operating the merchant submersible he had not been able to tell his story of the second trip.

"We saw lots and lots of hostile ships," said one of the Deutschland's sailors. He was a big six-foot German, smiling good-naturedly he told in German snippets of the story of the trip which again brought the Deutschland over and under the ocean.

"There were many more enemy warships out than we saw on the first voyage," he went on. "There seemed to be a regular lane of cruisers and ships of other types."

Submerged Great Deal

"I do not know how much of the trip was under water, but the longest continuous period we were submerged was ten hours. This was somewhere in about mid-ocean. Hostile ships were sighted and we were forced to drop out of sight."

"But, it's about the same old story now. Not much difference between this trip and the first one except the enemy ships," the sailor concluded.

The TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

BETROTHE D

By ELIZABETH SHIELDS

(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

It was two weeks before Hilda's wedding day. She looked thin and unhappy and a wistful smile trembled at the corners of her mouth. Dreamy-eyed, she watched her mother select her trousseau.

"You act as if you were not interested in your gowns," complained her mother.

"It's taking an awful lot of time and energy," reflected Hilda.

"Well, I never!" gasped her mother. "And I'm sure I'm doing everything I can to save you." Her tone was hesitant, a little hurt. "Of course it takes time to get the finest and best that is in the shops."

Her mother turned to her, mutely beseeching. Speech was impossible. "O, well," laughed Hilda, "something might happen, you know."

"You're acting very much as though you hoped something would," her mother gazed helplessly at her. Half-heartedly Hilda undid the wrappings of numerous bundles. Both gowns and hats were tossed aside in an indifferent heap.

"Your actions are very unbecoming," remonstrated her mother. "You are one of the very fortunate girls. Think of becoming a bride of such a man as Stuart Dale!"

Hilda wished people, her mother included, would stop singing Stuart's praises. During the three swift months she had been engaged, she had listened desperately to it. None of her friends, had they known her state, would have been able to find any possible reason for her discontent, except of course that Pete O'Neill affair. But they would have laughed at that.

Stuart was the one perfect man the town boasted. Like Hilda's family, his wealth was great. The homes

HAVE YOU A FRIEND WITH SKIN TROUBLE?

If you have a friend suffering with eczema or some such itching, burning eruption, what greater kindness could you do him than to say:

"Why don't you try Resinol Ointment? I know you have experimented with a dozen treatments, but I believe Resinol is different. In the first place, doctors have prescribed it for years. And then, Resinol does not claim to be a 'cure-all'—simply a soothing, healing dressing, free from all harsh drugs, that USUAL-LY proves successful in just such cases as yours."

of the parents of both young people were the pride of Claremont. In social position, in money and fashions, every other family in the town meekly followed. Stuart was handsome, with just proper width of shoulders. His brow was called noble. He had a perfect chin and mouth. His hair was black and smooth. Immediately following the announcement of their engagement, Hilda was showered with entertainment. Now parties were all over and the last moments were ardently given over to the trousseau.

Again she picked up the filmy lace and tulle garments. She stared dreamily into space. Her mother sighed.

"Weren't you the least bit uncertain about marrying father," she questioned her mother.

"I've never been uncertain about anything after I made up my mind to do it. Such talk is very upsetting, dear. I think you must be tired out. You're acting strangely, Hilda."

Hilda shook her head. "No I'm not," she responded cheerfully. But she left the room and the house. She hurried down the road towards the shipping district of the town. She walked along in a slowly dying sunset that threw orange and gray and violet lights on the trees. She went on and on, wrapped in a sweetly confusing mood. She reviewed the short, eager courtship of Stuart's. They had known each other always. Then his feeling of companionship had suddenly changed to a consuming devotion. When he had won her the thrilling devotion had reduced itself, queerly, to a sort of perfectly flawless companionship, just like everything about Stuart. A bewildered, helpless look flashed into her eyes.

She had expected Stuart's love to make so much difference in her life. But it did not. She had her memories still to combat as acutely as if Stuart's love was not now part of her life. She hurried steadily on toward Main street, as if she would run away from the haunting thoughts of that night long before Stuart had asked her to be his wife. That one happy hour! Stolen happiness that belonged to her alone!

At this point in her thought her eyes trailed upward to a familiar sign above one of the store doors. "O'Neill's Feed and Grain Store" it read. She had been reading that sign all her lifetime, but she stopped as if fascinated at the words. Through the open doorway she encountered the eager questioning face of Pete O'Neill. She caught her lips between her teeth. In a panic she turned to run. A moment later Peter swung up to her. His blue eyes were ablaze.

"So you're engaged to that fellow Dale?" He swallowed hard.

"We're to be married two weeks from today. In the morning at ten," defiantly she gave him all the details. He stared steadily into her brown eyes. Her lids fluttered beneath his look.

"You can't marry him," he told her. "You haven't forgotten me."

"I'm marrying the man I—love," her voice wavered. She turned to him entreatingly.

"You're marrying a man of your own kind, who can keep you in good style. You're afraid to trust yourself—"

"He is the man of my choice," she interrupted him.

"But you can't forget me, Hilda. You're remembering now, that last night we met up there," he motioned in the direction of the hill.

Hilda was not looking at him now. "I don't know what night you're talking about," she said.

"Look at me, dear," he rushed on feverishly, "you don't belong to him. Why, you could not be a wife to him. You belong to me."

"You're talking about things that happened ages ago," said Hilda slowly. Her face was white.

"Why, girl, you were my sweetheart when you were 10 and you used to laugh at him. Maybe I'm not your kind, but I've always been your lover." He laughed bitterly.

The corners of Hilda's mouth quivered. "I'm to marry another man. You can't talk like that to me—now."

"But you won't marry him. You're going to marry me, now, tonight," he said steadily.

"You're mad, Pete," Hilda lifted her eyes, fascinated. Pete always thrilled her. "That's all over between us. You must go away, go quickly."

Coming close to her, Pete whispered, "You could not be his wife, because you love me. You gave yourself to me that night, up there."

White and shaken, Hilda pushed him away with quivering fingers. "Almost sobbing, she whispered, 'Go, please go. You deserted me cruelly for weeks after that night.'"

"Deserted?" echoed Pete. "You never came to the meeting place again. I watched for you there everywhere. You avoided me. Then I heard of your engagement."

She looked up piteously. "I was afraid to come to you again."

CARRIERS SUED BY COAL OPERATORS FOR SHORTAGE OF CARS

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Coal users here are hoping that the steady advance in the price of coal would be checked by the suits on file in federal court here Thursday, in which the Santa Fe and 141 other railroads are charged by twenty-eight coal companies with diverting and misusing coal cars and thereby preventing the rapid shipment of coal from the mines. An injunction is asked. It is said that the shortage of cars holds the price of coal up. Coal dealers predicted increases of 25 to 30 cents a ton shortly unless the car situation is relieved.

CHARITY BALL TICKETS

Tickets for the Charity ball were issued yesterday, being sent not only to La Crosse citizens, but to Onalaska, West Salem and Sparta people as well. It is the hope of the committees in charge that the ball will this year surpass in attendance as well as beauty any ball of past years. Local stores have had for the past few weeks special exhibits of party frocks, and the modistes of the city are being rushed to the limit to deliver Charity Ball gowns in time, all of which indicates unusual interest in the party this year.

YEOMEN EVENTS

The Halloween party given by the Brotherhood of American Yeomen was largely attended and greatly enjoyed by those present. The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion with corn stalks, pumpkins, Jack o'lanterns, skeletons, witches, etc., and the Yeomen orchestra furnished excellent music for the occasion. In the afternoon the Rowena circle entertained at cards. Prizes were awarded to Mesdames Sheets, Schaeffer, Krueger, Welch, Drake and Falb. Owing to the Charity Ball coming on the night set for the Yeomen class adoption and making it impossible for some of the candidates to be present, the class adoption has been postponed until Thursday, November 16.

The Yeomen will hold its regular meeting next Tuesday evening.

A program of lively games was provided, including several distinctly Halloween stunts. Elaborate refreshments were served in cafeteria style, the announcement of these being made in a unique way by Richard Rasmussen. The guests entered heartily in the fun and the hour of leaving came all too soon. Forty guests were entertained.

Then they were passed on to be met by another ghost with an electric shock. Among the guests were seen several witches, ghosts, Grandpa Hornbeak, Grandma Sleepyhead, Charlie Chaplin and a Chinese lady. Games and Halloween stunts provided amusement, among them being a pumpkin alphabet, a raisin test and fortune telling, a booth for the latter diversion being arranged in the dining room. At half-past ten the guests unmasked and refreshments were served, the menu including brown bread sandwiches, pickles, coffee, devil's food, coconut kisses, marshmallows and popcorn. THE MONTH IN MUSIC

CHRISTMAS CLASSIC MAGNIFICENTLY SUNG BY CARUSO

Other Masterpieces of Song, Hawaiian Guitar Duets, Brilliant Instrumental Pieces, Supreme Orchestral and Operatic Selections

Each nation has its distinctive Christmas music. England her carols and "Messiah," and Germany the simple hymns to the Christ-child. While France prefers noble songs of great composers, such as the superb "Holy Night" by Adolphe Adam, one of the foremost French writers. This timely feature of the new Victor Records for November is eminently suited to the glorious voice of Caruso, who sings with characteristic simplicity and dignity the beautiful and inspiring lines.

Three charming little French songs for children are sung by Emma Calve with such evident enjoyment, that in "Au Claire de la Lune" we can almost see Pierrette at Pierrot's door asking for warmth and shelter. One of the few composers of saloon music who has achieved success without sacrifice of quality is Meyer-Helmund. His well-marked and ingratiating rhythm in "Emilio de Gogorza," that the distinguished singer now gives us one of the best of them, the "Magic Song," sometimes called "The Magic of Thy Voice."

Gluck and Zimbalist in "Sing Me to Sleep" offer an appealing presentation of the simple and natural melody that is so widely popular. The emotional effect of the soprano's touching rendition is heightened by the thrilling notes of Zimbalist's obligato. Remarkable skill in coloratura singing is evidenced in Mabel Garrison's rendering of the beautiful "Bell Song" from Delibes' romantic opera Lakme.

A new record of the favorite song "Where is My Boy Tonight" has been added by request to the Red Seal list. Needless to say, Louise Homer gives this loving cry of the bereaved mother with new tenderness and beauty of expression. Encouraging rhythm is the great success of his "Caprice Viennois" as a violin piece, Fritz Kreisler has arranged it as a "Cradle Song" for voice with piano accompaniment, and John McCormack sings it exquisitely.

Instrumental Favorites

For the violin, a notable solo is charmingly played by Maud Powell in "Guitarrero" by Franz Drdla, with piano by Arthur Loesser. All the well-marked and ingratiating rhythm is brought out by our favorite American violinist. The second movement of Beethoven's splendid Fifth Symphony now follows the first of the series of four records on which this orchestral gem is to be interpreted. The melody which enriches this Andante is as beautiful as its expression of consolation and renewed faith in life is inspiring. Herold's opera comique, Zampa, is best known in America for its brilliant and unfeeling overture. This is for the first time given in complete form by the New Symphony orchestra of London.

Conway's band has made a magnificent record of this appropriate number, and of the famous "Napoleon's Last Charge" based on the charge of the intrepid cuirassiers at Waterloo.

In order to encourage the national movement for general singing in the home, school and public gatherings, the Victor offers the first in a series of hand accompaniments to four well-known songs. "My Old Kentucky Home," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms" and "Home, Sweet Home" are especially arranged for use in schools, social organizations and fraternal societies where chorus singing is a part of the program. Two favorite old ballads which the Victor revives in instrumental form, are "Sweet Genevieve" and "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," presented by the ever popular McKee Trio. To say that "The Morning Saxophone Rag" made a hit last year is inadequately stating the case. So Brown Brothers Sextette give us another "moaning" record in "Saxophone Sobs," a lively fox trot as full of "sobs" as its name implies. It is accompanied by that big hit, "Walkin' the Dog."

Greatest favorite among Sousa marches and voicing the popular sentiment of the day is "Stars and Stripes Forever March." A splendid rendition of this, with the fine veldt "Love's Power" on the reverse, is given by the Hurlado Brothers Royal Marimba band. This fascinating musical novelty is a unique Central American product, as unlike the usual conception of a "band" as its music surpasses in mellowness, finish and attractive beauty. The performance by Pietro of the "Poet and Peasant" and "Pique Dame" overtures are really virtuoso.

"On With the Dance" Conway's band furnishes a large proportion of the month's dance music, and lively music it is. This comprises three new fox trots which are all the rage, "Under the Rambling Roses," "Bantam Step," "The Clown Dance," with a dreamy waltz, "Poet's Vision" by Deutsch. The Victor band contributes two attractive medleys,

"The Big Show" collection of hits of the new Hippodrome production, and the "She is the Sunshine of Virginia" one-step medley. McKee's orchestra displays the style that has made this organization famous, in two beautiful waltzes "Yearning for You," and "Irresistible Waltz." As always, Victor Records for dancing are the best to be found anywhere. They are used and recommended by the foremost authorities, including Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, besides the overwhelming majority of dancers throughout the world.

An unusual list of popular songs affords the cream of the month's vocal "gems" of rag, romance and patriotism. "The Two-Keg Rag" and "Honest Injun" by Collins and Harlan, are as fine samples of Victor recording, singers and careful selection, as are the Avon Comedy Four's "On a Summer Night" and "Way Out Yonder in the Golden West." The tremendous vogue of the popular song section of the Victor supplement is no less explained by a quartet of songs of the southland "Mississippi Rag," "Dancing Down in Dixieland," "In Florida Among the Palms" and "I'm Gonna Make Hay While the Sun Shines in Virginia." The Peerless Quartet also gives us the finely patriotic, "When Uncle Sammy Leads the Band," to which Henry Burr responds with "L-I-B-E-R-T-Y." Mr. Burr also collaborates with A. Campbell in "Moonshine Sally" and "You Were Just Made to Order for Me," and sings "The Eyes of Heaven" solo. Whether or not you agree with Billy Murray that "There's a Little Bit of Bud in Every Good Little Girl" you certainly will enjoy this corking good song. Equally effective is Marion Harris in "I Ain't Got Nobody Much."

The combination which is offered this month in the Hawaiian list might properly be called an "all star" one. Wright and Dietrich, fresh from their big vaudeville success, present two fascinating Hawaiian duets with ukulele and guitar accompaniment by Louise and Ferrer, entitled "On the Beach at Waikiki" and "My Luau Girl." Our old friends Golden and Marlowe are back again with two side-splitting darky dialect conversations. In "The Hospital" Billy has just recovered from an attack of "a pin in de elctus," while "The Liars' Contest" will doubtless be pronounced a draw. Ade Roeske, the popular English music hall artist, "puts over" two of her best songs, "Foolish Questions," an amusing topical ditty, and "Father's Little Man" with its touch of pathos. Two new Harigan-Hart-Braham medleys carefully selected from such successful Harigan plays as "Old Lavender," "The Major" and others, are issued in the "Songs of the Past" series by the Victor Mixed Chorus.

Charming Songs: Old and New. Marguerite Farrell's success in "Step This Way" will make exceedingly welcome another of her admired Irish songs, "You've Got Me Going With Your Irish Eyes," accompanied by a new Victor number which looks like a big hit.

Another of Tenyson's songs, composed by Nevil in "Blow Trumpet, for the World is White With May," whose martial spirit is well expressed by the unaccompanied male voices of the Orpheus Quartet. The other member of this double number is the "Bereave" from the opera "Jocelyn," sung by Olive Kilne. Marguerite Dunlop and Elizabeth Wheeler with "Hello, You're Irish," "Tommy Lad," "Reinold Werrerauth well depicts the varied emotions of the father who tells his hopes to his wee little "Tommy," and he is charmingly proficient in Florence Aylward's beautiful "The House of Memories," a setting of the Adcock verses of that name.

GREAT VICE FILM BREAKS RECORDS

More than 18,000 persons saw "Is Any Girl Safe?" during the first eight days of its run at the Shubert theater in Minneapolis. In reviewing the film, which was produced by the Anti-Film Motion Picture company of New York city, the Minneapolis Tribune said:

"In the presence of a crowd which filled the Shubert theater to overflowing last night, 'Is Any Girl Safe?' a sensational five-part anti-vice motion picture drama was shown for the first time in the west, the initial exhibition of the film, which was produced by the Anti-Film Motion Picture company of New York, having taken place in the Maxine Elliott theater in that city.

The film is a visualized sermon of exposure concerning the traps set for innocent girls by members of the white slave crowd. Hal Reid, author of the scenario, has succeeded in laying bare the insidious and subtle manner in which girls are delivered into bondage and yet he has handled this delicate subject without offense, but with so much power that it is difficult to understand how an adult could leave the theater without a little healthier respect for the sacredness of womanhood and with considerable more anxiety regarding the vice conditions which recent developments have brought to light.

"The film is one of intense interest and abounds in heart throbs from the moment the two young villains begin in the first reel their machinations to 'barter souls for gold,' until the closing reel when Bill Kerns, one of the villains, triumphs, after his warped conscience has awakened, in saving his own sister, from the clutches of his 'pal,' and another young woman he had himself sought to sell into slavery into slavery. The fight he puts up, after his reformation takes place, is the big scene of the picture."

BESSIE BARRISCALE IN "PLAIN JANE"

Bessie Barriscale, than whom there is no bigger favorite on the Thomas H. Ince list of stars, has a modern Cinderella part in "Plain Jane," Triangle hit opening a week-end engagement at the Majestic Thursday.

She is the drudge in a cheap boarding house in a college town and worships the very ground a certain college man walks on. He spurns her affection. Then "Plain Jane" reverses matters by going to college herself. Silks take the place of the smudge gingham and her beauty is brought out in a flash that in itself, makes "Plain Jane" a distinctive success as a photoplay.

Particularly does the picture bring to La Crosse audiences Miss Barriscale's power of versatility. Although the film may be called heavy in spots, it is spiced freely with splendid comedy. The story is a strong one, Ince having worked it out to perfection.

The original Triangle style of photography adds a charm to the production, and it is a safe wager that both Triangle and Bessie Barriscale stock will rise before the end of the present week.

CHILD GETS SICK CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach or bowels.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore-throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

STAR OF MUSICAL COMEDY RECENTLY FROM MINNEAPOLIS

Miss Sylvia De Frankie of
"Fraternity Boys and Girls"
Fresh from Broadway

Sylvia De Frankie is featured in the tabloid musical comedy, "Fraternity Girls and Boys," opening its engagement to a pleased audience at the La Crosse theater Thursday afternoon. Miss De Frankie is well known in musical comedy circles in Chicago, New York and many other cities, having been with Ralph Herz in "Dr. De Luxe," Hyam and McIntire in "The Girl of My Dreams," and "When Love is Young," and "The Elopers," during its run at the La Salle in the Windy City. For the past two seasons she has been cast with Klaw and Erlanger's "Around the Map" at the Amsterdam theater. Miss De Frankie is a cute little miss who is not easily forgotten, and has a host of friends in the amusement world.

"Fraternity Girls and Boys," was well liked in Chicago. It is the production of E. P. Churchill, and promises to draw musical comedy lovers to the La Crosse for the balance of the week.

The show is so built that one good thing follows another so rapidly that there is little chance for big applause for individual hits, occurring frequently. The audience is kept in good humor all the time by comedy numbers, stage pictures, and novelties.

The music and singing are among the biggest features. The cast is composed of some very pretty girls, who can sing well. As for the songs they sing, they are chosen from the tried hits of the past season. The Golden Gate quartette adds a distinctive charm to the splendid entertainment, and were voted by the afternoon audience Thursday to possess faculties for making rare harmony. Costumes are pretty, and there is something about the whole production which stamps it thoroughly big.

"Goodnight Corns! We Use 'Gets-It!'"

3 Drops in 2 Seconds, That's All. "GETS-IT!" Does the Rest. Never Fails.

"Really, I never could see how so few people use the most difficult and painful way they can find to get rid of corns. They'll wrap their toes up with bandages until a package that fills their shoes full of feet and makes corns so painful they've got to walk sideways and wrinkle up their faces. Or they use salves that eat right into the toe and make it raw and sore, or they'll use plasters that make the corns bulge, or pick and gouge at their corns and make the toes bleed. Funny, isn't it? "GETS-IT!" is the simple, modern wonder for corns. Just put 3 drops on it. It dries instantly. No pain, fuss or trouble. The corn, callus or wart loosens and comes off. Millions use nothing else.

"GETS-IT!" is sold and recommended by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price, by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

FANNIE WARD IN NEW LASKY DRAMA

Having established herself as one of the most versatile actresses on the screen, Miss Fannie Ward, the beautiful Lasky star, will be seen at the Bijou on Friday, and Saturday of this week, in the Jesse L. Lasky production of "Each Pearl a Tear," written especially for her by Beatrice C. DeMille and Leighton Osmun, from the story by E. L. Sheldon. It is a Paramount picture.

For a number of years Miss Ward has been popular as a comedienne in the spoken drama. When the Lasky company induced her to join their coterie of stars, she was promised serious work, and this was given her in "The Cheat." In this sensational photodrama, she scored the greatest success of her career, and this she repeated in "Tennessee's Partner," in "For the Defense" and "The Gutter Magdalen," and it is said that "Each Pearl a Tear" is better than anything in which she has heretofore been seen.

The story of "Each Pearl a Tear" has to do with a young girl who is led to believe by an unscrupulous millionaire, that she has lost a valuable string of pearls. She is forced to work for him to repay this loss.

How she discovers that he still has the pearls, and uses them to wreck him financially, at the same time bringing wealth to her sweet heart, is brought about in an unusual and striking manner.

BROAD SURVEY OF ESSENTIALS IN WILSON ADMINISTRATION

NATIONAL OFFICER COVERS EVERY BIG CAMPAIGN FACTOR

William Wallace Jr.'s Holmen Speech a Complete Text Book of Hard-driven Facts

(By Wm. Wallace, Jr.)

1—A vote for Wilson is a vote:
a—For international security.
b—For continuance of prosperity.
c—For government helping the people in their daily lives.
d—For the protection of the people against the selfish aggression of privileged classes.
e—For a real international neutrality.

2—For the preservation of neutral rights and of humanities by persistent persuasion, rather than by plenty of powder.
3—For escape from war horrors through honorable peace policies commanding world-wide respect.
4—A protest against "hot-headed utterances" and "hazard-of-war" policies.

5—For the proper recognition of an honest and faithful public service.

6—The day of selfish class rule is over; it could not fool all the people all of the time. They have learned that what the special interests want is just what they, the people, do not want. Henceforth, the people will run their governmental affairs through faithful servants and the old guard is going to be mustered out with a military record of "dishonorable service."

The big question in this campaign is not, has the present administration done the best that it could have done, although on this issue it has the strongest kind of a case, but rather, has it so far failed the people and their interests, that the control of government should be returned to the invisible powers that held it in 1912.

This question is essentially not a mere party question. It strikes at the root of the object of government being a control of the strong, in behalf of the weak. The rank and file of every party is necessarily honest, for a party organized in open dishonesty would have no more credit with the citizenship of a country than would a religion bedded on immorality. As, however, the activities of a party are controlled wholly by its leaders, a party as such is never more trustworthy than they, and any party, whatever its name, long entrenched in control of government, invites the exploitation of corrupt men, who through its leadership, may work out by mental control, advantages and privileges for themselves, their followers and friends against the mass of the people. Such a state of affairs was believed to exist in 1912 in the Republican party, and its indictment in this respect came from a majority, nearly four million of its own voters. They probably tried to purify their own party within. To that end, in the 1912 Chicago convention, they went to the honest and influential men of their party, charged the selfish action of the old guard, and the special interests, pointed out the policies of party action that the people needed, but which the old guard refused to apply, and asked assistance to remove the old guard from party control. In this they failed; wherefore they organized a new party to accomplish the same purpose. Well knowing that they could not elect their candidate, but that their recession would defeat the candidate of the old guard, they pronounced a verdict by which, against the minority of their own party, they decreed that the interests of the country demanded a transfer of governmental control, and it was in this wise, and by over half the voters of the old Republican party that Woodrow Wilson was put in office, and he has never forgotten it. In New York, some months since, he said, "I am constantly compelled to remind myself that I am the servant of all the people, rather than of some of the people only."

The party platform written in 1912 of these progressive or receding Republicans was then and by their chief candidate described as the "greatest public document ever written since the days of Abraham Lincoln." It contained the policies that the progressives believed represented the interests of the people. Some of these policies had been long before suggested by Progressive Democrats for Mr. Hughes when campaigning for Mr. Taft in 1908 and speaking of the Income Tax idea, and some others set forth in the progressive platform, referred to them as the "quack-nostum" of old Dr. Bryan.

Mindful of the responsibility that they assumed to these four million Republican voters and the people of the country at large, as well as Democracy itself, and mindful that the policies were really progressive Democratic, the three and one-half years that they have administered this great trust, these men at Washington have put into law, ten of the principal demands in that platform, and have in process of legislation, consideration of all those demands save judicial recall. Among them are the tariff revision the tariff board, the federal reserve, the federal trade commission, the good trusts, the income and inheritance taxes, the abolishment of the interstate commerce court, the granting of power to the interstate commerce commission to value railroads, to the end that the people may pay only equitable freight and passenger rates, a governmental owned railroad in Alaska, all of which were asked for by the progressives, a parcel post, child's labor, a workmen's compensation, and a rural credits act, and many others. Of them all, there has been no complaint, save against two, and this of itself is the best evidence of their inherent worth; of them collectively, it may be said that no such volume of practical legislation in aid of the citizen in his every day life, was ever passed before. The parcel post and the rural credits have forced private enterprises operating along the same lines in each instance to meet the government standards, for it has come to my observation in Iowa, that within thirty days, circulars had been sent out by farm mortgage loan agencies announcing that they are prepared henceforth to negotiate farm loans on a twenty-year five per cent basis, with privilege of payments in installments of one hundred dollars or upwards in advance of maturity, which is exactly this scheme provided by the rural credits law; whereas the old method was five year loans upon an average of 7 1/2 per cent, throughout the United States without privilege of advance installment payments.

Through the federal trade commission and the several district attorneys of the country, inquiry has been made into the increased cost of living, specifically as to bread, coal, etc. An inquiry begun about July 1st of this year as to the increased cost of gasoline, has resulted in a reduction of the cost of that commodity so generally throughout the country of between six and seven cents a gallon. News-print paper investigation, affecting paper on which newspapers of the country are printed, it is believed will account for the apparent scarcity and lower the price of high price, which has recently caused a suppression of some country newspapers who have no long-time contracts for their supply.

Prosperity
Finding an organized opposition to the attempt to pass the federal reserve act in the very beginning of the administration, the president started a campaign of publicity, whereby he announced through the newspapers, the names of the men manipulating organized lobbies, their officers, and the nature of their organization, with the result that it created such an alarm, that many of these men who had their trenches impassable around the congress, discharged their forces and closed their offices in the capitol city, and have not been heard of in the open since.

Prosperity
We may remember the dire prophecy of ruin uttered by the Republican leaders of the house of representatives on the floor in the summer of 1912 conditioned upon the Democrats coming into power. The contrasting result is so pronounced, that you would not find the prophet's place in the country today, and demand seeing it with the prophecy in his hand, if you were to move from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, being unable to swim, would drown himself in the latter ocean before discovery. The unparalleled present prosperity is conceded. The deposits in all the banks of the country have increased since the inauguration of Mr. Wilson, that if there were to be withdrawn from the present total of these deposits a sum equal to the aggregate resources of the banks of England, France, Spain, Switzerland, The Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and the Imperial Bank of Japan, there would remain a larger volume of deposits than the same banks held at the first named date. In National banks alone this increase of deposits for the first three years of this administration has been four times what it was in the corresponding period of Mr. Roosevelt's last term, and three times that of the preceding period in Mr. Taft's term. The operation of the Federal Reserve Act, and the issue of three hundred eighty-six millions of emergency currency under it after November 15th, 1914, which took up the relief forty millions loaned by the secretary of the treasury to New York banks immediately after the declaration of the European war and replaced the fright-bid money until it was put back into circulation, and which emergency currency was all called in and mostly destroyed before June, 1915, was a demonstration that the making for panics in this country has been forever removed from our commercial life. In the first year of the operation of this act, National banks earned on their capitalization, sixteen per cent, just double what they had earned upon the same capitalization the year before it went into effect. In that first year, it cut down the unparalleled prosperity, so that their total liabilities of one failing bank were but three million eight hundred thousand, against ten times that amount or thirty-eight million nine hundred thousand dollars in the preceding year, and the estimated loss on those liabilities is fixed at a quarter of a million dollars or but one five-hundredth of one per cent of the total resources of the banks than engaged in active business. But it is said that this unparalleled prosperity is due to war. Examination of experts demonstrates that due to the loss to this mass of remedial legislation the business conditions of the country would have very materially improved had there been no war, but conceding that this prosperity is borne of the European war, none the less, it is true, that to have held it, we must have kept out of war.

Our Foreign Policies
Our international neutrality has been approved in Germany by Dr. Dernburg, who was here in Germany's interest during the early months of the war, and by Maximilian Hardin, the greatest economic writer of Germany and possibly of all Europe. Our treatment of the neutral powers, compared with the treatment of the allies, confirms our neutrality; of the former we asked the recall of Ambassador Dumba, and Attaches, Boycott, and Von Papen for objectionable interference. No one questioned the justice of this request which was complied with, and it is not an issue in the campaign. In addition, we demanded warning before sinking of belligerent powers, when those ships were carrying citizens of neutral countries. Of the allies, he indicted British agents recruiting for the allied armies in the United States, because such action was opposed to our laws. We administratively held against the allies in the inception of the steamer Appam case. We held against them in their claims as to the Deutschland, such claim being that although she was an unarmed submarine freight boat, she should be treated as a belligerent warship and our note of August 31st last, first published the 11th of October on this submarine issue sent to England, France, Russia and Japan was couched in as vigorous a speech as any language ever used in any note sent on the other phase of the submarine issue to Germany. We received the U. Boat 53 submarine in our ports on October 7th, and finally we protested against the seizure of our mails and cargoes by the allies, and have by the usual means, undertaken to compel a recognition of our asserted rights in that regard, and because the negotiations were not ended, congress just before adjournment, empowered the president in the event he should find it necessary to protect those rights to inaugurate retaliatory action even to embargo upon shipments if necessary. Our shipments of munitions and war supplies have been in strict accordance with the principles of international law, which obtained at the time of the commencement of the war, and it is a further rule of international law that those principles cannot be changed by belligerents during the progress of a particular war, the reason of the rule being that each belligerent may have relief and probably did rely on its rights to purchase such supplies and munitions from any neutral nation, and therefore made no preparation for their internal manufacture. The Deutschland case demonstrates that if sufficient volume of freight could be moved in the submarines, Germany would enjoy the privilege of purchasing of us as freely as have the allies by their control of the surface of the sea, and if in the great naval battle of July, off Jutland, Germany had been victorious and by destruction of the British fleet had herself gained control of the deep sea, the position would be reversed, and Germany today would receive war supplies and munitions from this country as freely as have the allied powers. The right to control such purchases was the normal prize belonging to the controller of the seas.

The Submarine Issue
In February, 1915, Germany first declared the war zone, and said that within its limits, she would sink if necessary without warning. As the leading neutral nation at the end of the same month, we answered that notice, advising that we would hold any nation to a strict accountability that so harmed American lives. On May 7, the Lusitania was sunk; no action could restore the lives there lost. The second note sent by our government immediately thereafter in May was so strong that Mr. Bryan believed it would produce war if sent and resigned rather than sign it. Germany awakened to the humanities on September 1, 1915, and gave the assurance of warning, and on the day following the Chicago Tribune, the leading Republican paper of the middle west, spoke in terms of the highest commendation of this achievement of President Wilson, as did other Republican papers in this as well as most of the independent papers of the country, while Mr. Bryan wired congratulations to the president telling him that he had not believed such a result was possible. The later sinkings of the Arabic, Sussex, etc., forced a final issue. The Gore and McElmore resolutions were introduced in congress in effect that they would have tied the president's hands, and required Americans to keep off from merchant ships of belligerent powers. They were laid on the table by the entire vote of the Democrats and a very substantial supporting Republican vote. Had they been passed, the president's efforts to preserve the rights of neutrality would have gone for naught. Independent of our limited shipping facilities, he was speaking for other neutral nations, whose citizens would have no recourse but to travel on belligerent merchant ships or to stay at home, and to surrender would have meant an abandonment of the rights of Americans in that regard for all the years to come. A threat to sever diplomatic relations was made after the sinking of the Sussex, and on May 4, 1916, Germany's final assurance was given, and it has since been strictly observed. We had to either write or fight; if the latter, we must fight with human lives. Mr. Wilson wrote first and won out. How stands the case on the other side? Mr. Hughes approved Mr. Roosevelt's main speech, and its very utterances. He repeated his statements made at Syracuse, N. Y., two days after the sinking of the Lusitania, in which he said that had he been president, he would have declared war on Germany within 48 hours. Mr. Roosevelt recently at Battle Creek also said that he would have seized every German ship, Italy with as many German ships interned in her ports did not attempt this until she declared war with Germany, and more than a year after she had entered on war with Austria. It would of itself have been an act of war.

Not until Oct. 12, 1916, one year and five months after the Lusitania sank, and not until four months after his own nomination, does Mr. Hughes arrive at a conclusion as to what he would have done. The Republicans have been criticizing Wilson as a note writer; Mr. Hughes says he would have written one more note than did Mr. Wilson; and though they say notes were idle, a school teacher's pastime—Mr. Hughes now claims that by a note he could have prevented the sinking of the ship. Their own candidate then believes in the efficiency of notes, and in plenty of them.

Also, he concedes that the words used in the first note "strict accountability" were just the words to have used at that time. For when asked by one of the audience, what he would have done when the Lusitania was sunk, he never did say what he would have done if it had been sunk, he did say—

1. He would have kept an impression abroad of strength in his dealings with Mexico.
2. He would have organized the State Department that words "strict accountability" would have had more meaning.
3. He would have made the published newspaper warning of Bernstein, the occasion of another note to Germany, warning her that if any Americans on the Lusitania were hurt, we would break off diplomatic relations with her and
4. Then (he says) the Lusitania would not have been sunk.

Let us examine this postmortem method developed only after a year and half's incubation, and with the aid of all the other events criticism and discussion.
As to No. 1.
A—Prior to July 25th, 1914 no man in the United States even imagined that a European war was at hand—much less that anything we might do as to Mexico would later have any bearing on our neutrality with warring Europe.
B—Nevertheless it happens that under ample provocation from followers of Huerta we had taken Vera Cruz—a forceful act indicating a capacity for iron purpose; and of which Republicans have said it was an unjustified forcible invasion of a neighbor country.
C—All during the first half of the year 1915, and particularly during the period between February when the German War Zone proclamation was issued, and May 7, when the Lusitania was sunk, Villa and Carranza were battling wholly on Mexican soil, and nothing occurred that would have given excuse for any positive action on our part.
D—Nothing that might then have been done as to Mexico could have had the remotest effect on the German submarine policy; and a post-mortem guess that it might, is of no value.
E—He does not indicate what he would have done under the conditions existing either then or at any time after the European war began.

As to No. 2 supra—
A—It is vague. He might as well have said he would have reorganized the whole government. He does not say how he would have changed to get the desired result.
B—The same general organization of trained subordinates had existed through previous administrations. Many hold places under civil service. Changes in subordinates would manifestly have produced no result as desired. He must refer to the head.
C—Mr. Bryan signed the first note which he says was a proper note, and in all respects was apace with the situation until his dread of war made him clash with the second note as too harsh. This after the sinking. Any change in the head would have been idle, however, for Mr. Bryan in fact withdrew, and yet neither the second note nor the fact of withdrawal moved Germany from its purpose of ruthless submarine warfare to intimidate her foes. It took a third note and until Sept. 1, to induce Germany to accept the humane idea.

D—The whole force of the U. S. was behind the first note, and under any other organization of the state department, its words could and would have had no more force than that behind them.

E—No one has ever hitherto suggested that a reorganization of the state department (whatever it means) would have added any force whatever to the meeting of the note.
As to No. 3 supra—
A—The Bernstein newspaper notice was signed personally and unofficially (?) and was addressed to private persons who might be intending to take passage on a foreign ship. It was not from the German government or to our government. To have treated it as such when it plainly was not, would have been an act unprecedented in national intercourse, and warranting the inference that we wanted excuse for war.
C—After the "strict accountability" note we would have weakened our position by volunteering another note, when Germany had not even said nor done anything since the first. After telling a man you will hold him strictly accountable for a threatened action, you don't add force to the threat by coming back and telling him if he does it you will never speak to him again, any more than you would be telling him you would "slap him on the wrist."
D—No one then really believed such a steamer would be torpedoed without warning. Also it was a common belief that they would sink if hit—at least not until there was ample time to get away. Moreover it was believed and even her captain boasted that he could outrun a submarine and that a torpedo could never reach his steamer. Men like Elbert Hubbard were because they really felt there was no risk.

When the Bernstein notice was published no living soul thought suggested that any official notice should be taken of it or especially that any such note should have been sent.
E—It would have been useless—
First—Because the Von Tirpitz element then in control had persuaded Germany to a submarine warfare of horror as essential to their national life. Nothing short of the horror with which the civilized world viewed it, would have given it pause. Even Bryan's resignation and the second (war) note when sent did not have that effect. Also a notice of that very tenor was sent in April, 1916, and it is now piled up on top of the Bryan resignation and all the notes. Germany's need is so desperate that a large element is now agitating withdrawing their promise of warning and resuming the original ruthless method. Though the performance of the U-53 should prove to them that maximum of efficiency in destruction can be gotten after ample warning, and persuade them that the other plan of horror is not necessary.

Second—We know now that secret orders to so act must have been probably outstanding in the hands of the detailed submarines and after consideration of any note that our government might have sent after the publication of the Bernstein notice, any directions countermanding, had Germany been disposed to give them, could not have reached her commanders in time.
I cannot now dispose of the matter as he does by now assuming that Germany would not have sunk the ship, any more than he could have assumed that as the sole possible event at this time when he was considering the wisdom of sending the note. He must work it out so as to show that it would have been the best course, no matter whether Germany sunk the ship or not. And even yet he has not said what he would have done if the ship had been in fact sunk after his note. But let us see for him. Having made the threat he would of course have had to make good or lost all credit with the world. Then diplomatic relations would have ceased, and there could have been no further exchanges. Grant that Germany would not have declared war. None the less she would have gone on and also sunk the "Arabic" and other ships as fast as she could; and then what would Mr. Hughes have done. He would then either have been forced to submit or declared war on the sinking of the Arabic. Either way the sharks would have gotten thousands of human bodies. And in the former event the nation would have been discredited; while in the latter event we would be still enjoying all the horrors of war, without any hope of securing warning before sinking until the war should end, and perhaps not even then, dependent on which of the powers prevailed. On the other hand by the Wilson plan of keeping open the channel of communication he brought Germany to see the humanities in just 115 days after the ship was sunk. Mr. Hughes now turns up in the open as a harsh policy or "chance of war" man. Will the German people, perhaps dissatisfied with the patient persistence of Wilson for American rights, vote for a man who now says, had he been in his place, he would have pursued a harsher and war provoking policy.

The Lesson of U-53
1—It demonstrates that Mr. Wilson's contention that effective submarine warfare, after warnings, is entirely practicable. Six merchant ships sunk in a single day is proof conclusive and ought to quiet the agitation now pending in Germany for a recall of the warning promise, and the assumption of the original method of submarine warfare, out of which agitation there might come further peril for our foreign relations.
2—It demonstrates an unexpected peril to our coast and our shipping should we be involved in war, for two years ago, the oldest admiral of our navy insisted that the time never would come when battle ships would be in danger from the submarines, because the latter would never be able to take the deep sea, or to cross the Atlantic.

3—The 220 human lives rescued on Sunday, Oct. 8th by our torpedo boat destroyer, but for Mr. Wilson's policy would have been shark food. Those people would not be living today had Roosevelt's and Hughes' policies been put into effect and 1,000 of other lives would have been simply sacrificed.

Mexico
Here the criticism is that our policy was weak. This is a glittering generality. We asked for a bill of particulars. It was then said that we should have recognized Huerta—that we should not have entered Vera Cruz until our flag was saluted.
As to the recognition of Huerta—Madero was called a murderer by Huerta's order. Huerta, a former officer in Diaz's army, professed a change of sentiment and won the confidence of Madero and was given by him a high place in the army, though Carranza protested against it. Huerta's wire to President Taft the night after the death or killing of Madero—"I have overthrown the government, peace and quiet will reign hereafter"—was a confession of the assassination. Mr. Taft properly refused to commit the United States to a recognition of a government organized by the assassin. Mr. Wilson simply followed the same policy, and it was the correct policy. Had Giteau been an army officer when he assassinated Garfield, and had he seized control of the government through his armed power, what would we have thought of Germany or Great Britain had they then recognized the assassin Giteau as the head of our government?

Desiring to undo the Mexican factions under him, Huerta sought to that end to provoke a war with the United States and by his direction, our marines and officers in uniform were seized and marched through hooting crowds to prison in Vera Cruz. They were released later on, on demand of our admiral and unsatisfactory explanation attempted by the officers in charge of the city. It was determined that though Huerta was not recognized, and although the act was his, the insult required atonement by saluting the flag. How much longer would the United States insist that Mr. Wilson failed to protect the national honor and the honor of the flag, wish him to wait before finding sufficient cause in this action to enter Vera Cruz? If he had been advised by Mr. Hughes before acting, to pursue a bolder policy, and had accordingly entered the city, he might have been told by his advisor a few days later that when advising him to be bold, he meant that he should first determine the sufficiency of the cause, and that there being no sufficient cause, he should have boldly determined to stay out of Vera Cruz. As to the surrender of the city, we gave it back to Carranza and Villa on Nov. 23, 1914. Some months before the men whose insult had provoked the entry, had fled from Mexico on July 7. No assailant of the flag remained. For international purposes, Huerta was officially dead. Villa and Carranza had refused his request to join with him in expelling us from Vera Cruz. The Mexican people had been submissive to his rule; it was not their rule. Would you sit on a dead man who had insulted you a few moments before, on discovering that the man under you was dead of heart failure in the hope that he would revive and apologize, or would you get up and go your way, and help give him a decent burial? We not only surrendered Vera Cruz, but we returned nearly $2,000,000 of customs collected in the ports, thereby demonstrating to the Mexicans that we had no spirit of conquest, and were not highwaymen, and assuring for ourselves the lasting confidence of the Latin-American republic to the south. Despite the crucial moment in June, when the Carrizal incident occurred, we have so far kept out of war to the southward. The investors wanted it, the soldiers of fortune wanted it. Mr. Fairbanks, Republican candidate for vice president, so stated in 1913 when approving Taft and Wilson policies in Mexico. These investors would never have shared profits with the American people, but would have you fight for the investments. If, because of their special interests, they were required by law to become members of the first troops to be used in intervention, the talk would soon stop. Had Mr. Wilson's policy plunged us into war with Mexico than it would be a subject of legitimate criticism. At present it is not a vital moment to us, the thing is that we have kept out of war.

A letter from a life-long Republican passed three score and ten, now living in the state of Washington, says under date of June 22 last: "War with Mexico not only seemed inevitable, but actually at hand, and yet Mr. Wilson's diplomacy, a courageous and firm diplomacy as to those already offered an actual declaration. I have no patience with narrow members of my own party who attempt to criticize him and his policy, and who if Christ were on earth, and a candidate for the pettifog office on the Democratic ticket, would repeat his crucifixion and nail him to the cross, or with other interjects who have no care or thought for anybody or anything except those and such as will aid in piling up in the future more millions to their past ill-gotten hoards. Woodrow Wilson is making history and is carrying a greater burden and showing a greater comprehension of, and ability to handle the task before him, than has any other president since the time when Lincoln carried through his Herculean task, and it will be one of the most pleasurable acts this fall to cast my first Democratic ballot for president of the United States; my maiden vote was cast in 1860 for the saintly Lincoln.

The Railroad Strike
Here the condition and the result and danger had been some time known. The great war prophets of the railroads had induced the employees to seek to right grievances; the great increase in the tonnage of trains operating with single crews, nearly two and one-half times the tonnage of some years before, had resulted in slower movement over the division and in longer hours and slower earnings. They believed that the time had come to right this situation. The managers representing their owners, the stockholders, whose dividends must be paid, insisted it could not be done with justice to the properties. The managers and men differed as to the cost of the concessions as between $20,000,000 and $100,000,000. They came to an impasse at New York and the national railroad strike seemed imminent. The interests of the public were forgotten in the acute controversy between the men and the managers. Mr. Wilson owned no duty under the law, and he had no power to protect the large interests of the public. The railroads were engaged in a public service, and because thereof, they have the right to compel the farmer to surrender his lands for right of way, not at the price he may fix, but at a price fixed in behalf of the roads to take private property for public use. The state's power is exercised because it is interested in having railroads built. Surely not built merely to be looked at, but above all, to be operated. The state then is vitally interested in the operation of the roads, and in this aspect, representing 100,000,000 people of the country, Mr. Wilson felt morally bound to prevent the dynamiting of industry that would ensue from such a strike. Mr. Hughes remained 100 per cent a candidate, indulged in watchful waiting. Although the logical head of his party and although the matter was in the air from the time of his nomination, he offered no explanation, made no helpful suggestions, and pointed out no possible harm, even during the 15 days when the President's program was under consideration. Mr. Wilson was one per cent a candidate, and he proved himself 99 per cent a servant of the people, he stayed on the job, threw his political fortunes to the wind, and got immediately busy in their behalf to avert a nationwide disaster. He heard both sides, examined carefully all the statistics of the labor department, as to the history of the eight hour legislation in the last quarter of a century and finally called them together and disclosed to both sides his own plan, which was neither the plan of the men nor the managers. The men acquiesced, the managers refused. Had he been weak, he would have yielded in this stage; he did nothing of the sort; he went to Congress and earnestly proceeded to secure such relief as they could offer. The men asked nothing of Congress, the pursued their course as before. The Adamson bill commanded the support of the majority of the Republicans voting in the House, including Uncle Joe Cannon who says however that "it is not over on Uncle Joe," but neither Senators Lodge nor Mr. Hughes or Mr. Roosevelt had any explanation or suggestions to offer. The Adamson bill averted the strike, and nationwide disaster. No other substitute for it was suggested. At Philadelphia, during the consideration of the problem, the president said: "My plan is the best plan only until some one else shows me a better, and whenever he does, I will lay aside mine and take his." It is now claimed that the subject should have been thoroughly studied before acting. The critics of Mr. Wilson did certainly study thoroughly and apparently they are yet engaged in that interesting occupation. With a business-block ablaze, they would study before sending for the fire engine, to learn the cause of the fire. We, on the other hand, get the fire out, save the building, and will then study how to keep it from getting afire again. It is needless to point out that this strike would have been disastrous to all concerned, to the owners in great loss of earnings, to the men in enforced idleness and suffering, and to the public in the inability to move raw materials to manufacturing points, and to move manufactured products to the markets and to obtain food supplies for the large cities of the country, and our valued prosperity might have gone up in smoke.

Mr. Hughes' first utterance on September 2 was cryptic and general, "never surrender principle to force." The scribes who sent it through the country were compelled to guess its relation to Mr. Wilson's strike action. Called for an interview on the strike situation that day, he declined both before and after his St. Louis address, as he had repeatedly declined before. This was an undesirable sort of watchful waiting. On Sept. 19th he first pointed out what seemed to him the alleged dangers of the course taken, if he saw them so soon why did he not tell the country in time? Later, he qualified by saying that he was for an eight hour day, but that the Adamson bill was merely a device to raise wages. Wage is inevitably associated with any paid day's work. Whether the Adamson bill be viewed as a time of labor limit law, because of the overtime penalty, or as a measure fixing a wage for eight hours work, it is none the less a step towards an eight hour day, and if the latter is right, and it is rumored that circulars are outstanding purporting to be from republican headquarters, promising a limit of labor eight hour day to trainmen, why not go part way

The War On Rats

He Destroys Property by Thousands of Dollars Worth Yearly and Spreads Disease—Swat the Rat.

By Frederic J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 2. The women's municipal league of Boston recently started a campaign for the extermination of rats in that city. Posters setting forth the peculiarities of the rat, together with a long list of his crimes against man, were placed throughout every district; the children were set to work hunting rat holes and the men to distributing poison, while the women hovered nervously in the background and gave directions from authoritative pamphlets. Since then, thousands of rats have been destroyed, but the women have not relaxed their vigilance. Swatting the rat has become a permanent occupation in Boston.

Now women's clubs all over the country have taken up the campaign, and the rat is being pursued relentlessly from one stronghold to another. Prizes are awarded in many towns to the person with the greatest number of dead rats to his credit, and in several cities rat days have been established when the whole community mobilizes for a wholesale slaughter. "We are going to awaken this town to the danger of the rat menace as it has never been awakened before," wrote the secretary of a southwestern woman's club recently to the women's league in Boston, "and would appreciate the use of your posters."

The city of New Orleans has for some time been one of the most active in the country in the war on rats; New Orleans is still killing them at the rate of 8,000 a day. It is estimated that rats cost the United States $182,000,000 annually. They destroy our crops, steal our poultry, infest our warehouses, and tunnel under the foundations of our cities, protected by our carelessness and multiplying in incredible numbers. The possible increase of a pair of rats in five years is over 940,000,000,000.

In addition to destroying property, the rat is guilty of a much worse evil—the spread of loathsome diseases such as trichinosis and bubonic plague. To the average person, bubonic plague is associated with the Middle Ages or some period equally remote, but to the officers stationed at United States ports it is a very real and ever-present menace. Cases are constantly being reported in Ceylon, Chile, China, Ecuador, Egypt, India, Java, South Africa and a few European ports.

One rat authority also accuses the rodent of the spread of typhoid fever, malarial fever, diphtheria and other diseases that may be conveyed from drains; for the rat is an enthusiastic admirer of drains where traffic is uncongested and dignified progress is safe. The recent contention that the rat may be to blame for the epidemic of infantile paralysis occurring during the past summer has not been established, but in view of his known character and habits, the suggestion is well within the bounds of possibility.

What is needed in combating the rat is concerted action. There are three things that the rat must have in order to live and propagate his species, and they are food, water and a nesting place. Fortunately for him these have always been forthcoming. People leave their food scattered about in various accessible places; they place their garbage where the rat can get at it; they drop their lunches around office buildings, and they proceed to build up outdoor piles of rubbish, wood piles and plant walks by the thousand that afford admirable nesting facilities. Now, in addition to setting traps and distributing poison, everybody would stop supporting rats, their numbers could be effectively reduced.

As for annihilating the species completely, it seems to be out of the question. Perhaps, if every community and farm and hamlet in the United States joined the campaign against rodents and acted simultaneously it might be done, but, of course, this would be impracticable and even so the rat authorities are doubtful. The rat is an intelligent and resourceful animal. He usually knows a trap when he sees it, and seems to have a mysterious way of imparting his knowledge to future generations; furthermore, you can rarely fool a rat colony the second time on poison. If some of their tribe die from eating a certain kind of cheese or lozenge, the rest of the members stay carefully away from it. While the rat is usually a cannibal, eating the weaker or maimed of his species at every opportunity, he will not touch a poisoned rat. And, what is more, if the trapping and poisoning occur too persistently he devours his young and helpless offspring as a matter of convenience and departs for the next nearest shelter, often to some near-by town.

Many accounts are given by naturalists who have observed whole colonies of rats traveling swiftly by night, crossing roads and ditches and rivers—anything that came in their way—until they reached a place that appeared to be satisfactory. Then they would suddenly disappear and be seen only individually and at long intervals scrambling over the fields or gnawing at a pile of rubbish. It is also asserted by many authorities that by some subtle instinct the rat

PIMPY? WELL, DON'T BE!

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights. Cleanse the blood, the bowels and the liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel—there's never any sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating. No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with "a dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. is made aware of coming events and always migrates in large numbers before an earthquake or a flood. On one of these nocturnal flights the brown rat, which is the principal rodent villain, is supposed to have crossed from Asia to Europe, bringing the plague with him. Here he encountered the smaller and less ferocious black rat, destroying it and usurping its province, while some of his multitudinous offspring continued to migrate in the holds of vessels to America.

Throughout the ages, various measures have been taken to get rid of the brown rat, but nothing has ever proved permanently efficacious. In the first place, man made his first mistake in killing off the enemies of the rat such as mink, weasels, hawks, skunks and especially owls. The cat is generally too well fed to be dangerous to resourceful rats. Occasionally, a lean cat may be found which preys effectively upon rats, but the modern cat as a rule is too well fed to work for a living.

Snakes make excellent rat-catchers, and the black snake which is killed so often on American farms is one of the rats' worst enemies. In tropical countries boa-constrictors and other snakes are kept in the fruit warehouses as a protection against rats, and sometimes a snake is carried in the hold of a vessel carrying food that would otherwise be damaged by rats.

One old captain whose ship has been infested with rats conceived a unique plan for getting rid of them. Every six months he trapped a dozen or so rats and separated the males and females. The males he starved and when they were good and hungry fed the females to them. This experiment was repeated for a couple of weeks until he had about seven ferocious male rats with a strong appetite for rattlesnake. Then he opened the door of the cage, let them loose and, beginning with the young rats, they cleared the vessel in short order. This plan was no doubt effective enough, but it is singularly unattractive.

Trapping rats is an effective method of destruction, but it requires a great deal of skill. According to Dr. David E. Lantz, who is the rat expert of the Biological Survey, "the improved modern traps with a wire released by a baited trigger and driven by a coiled spring" are the best type of rat trap in use. With these a department store in Washington caught 136 during the first twenty nights they were set. For bait, small pieces of sausage and bacon were used, but other excellent baits are grain, oatmeal, toasted cheese, toasted bread, fish, raw meat, pine nuts, apples, carrots, and sunflower, squash or pumpkin seeds. Broken fresh eggs will also attract the animals, and fresh vegetables are especially tempting to them during the winter.

Poison, of course, offers the sim-

The Mistake is Made by Many La Crosse Citizens.

Look for the cause of backache. To be cured you must know the cause.

If it's weak kidneys you must set the kidneys working right.

A La Crosse resident tells you how. L. L. Brown, 403 S. Eighth St., La Crosse, says: "I suffered from a lame back for quite awhile. I had a constant, dull ache across my loins and rubbing with liniments didn't help me. I made inquiries about a kidney medicine and a druggist recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. I got some and they cured me completely. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills before and I am glad to do so again. They are reliable and have my highest endorsement."

plest solution in getting rid of rodent pests, but the rats have a bad habit of dying wherever it is most convenient, which makes the method impracticable for occupied houses. Outdoors, however, and in barns, sheds and stables, etc., poison may be used with no disastrous results other than the death of an occasional valuable animal of some sort which has eaten the rat poison. Barium carbonate, strychnine, arsenic and phosphorus are all excellent rat poisons when cleverly hidden in attractive bait, but owing to the inflammable nature of phosphorus the Biological Survey does not recommend its use. Arsenic is often resisted by rats and must be used in large quantities, and strychnine is too rapid in action to make it practicable for home use. On the whole, barium carbonate is the best poison. It has no taste or smell, and in the small quantities fed to rats has little effect on domestic animals, while its slow action usually permits the rat to leave the house in search of water before death overtakes him.

Thus there are many ways of getting rid of rats if one is clever in baiting and trapping. The rat used to be a much-needed scavenger before the sanitation era, but this usefulness has long been a thing of the past. Yet the rat population of the United States is as large as the human population, and the women's clubs of the nation are compelled to work hard in order to arouse their communities to the ever-present rat menace.

SAY CLEVELAND LOSES

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 2.—Cleveland is falling behind Detroit in the population race if an estimate of the Cleveland Telephone company made public Wednesday is correct. This company's twenty-five field agents, who have completed a five month survey, say Cleveland has only 770,000 population. Detroit claims 820,000. Cleveland's estimate, based on the school census, is 832,000.

CHAMBER OUTLINES APPROVAL POLICY FOR SOLICITATION

Endorsement Will Be Withdrawn from Projects for Which Canvass Is Improper

SEVERAL PLANS APPROVED

Chamber Declares Newspaper Advertising Is Essentially Legitimate and Outside of Its Regulation

Solicitations which are given the approval of the Chamber of Commerce must be conducted properly or the approval will be withdrawn, according to the policy of the chamber which has been approved by the board of directors. Details of the chamber's policy in regard to solicitation were made public Thursday, together with announcement of the projects which have thus far been approved by the board.

These Endorsed
Official Chamber of Commerce O. K.'s have been attached to:
The Associated Charities.
The Charity Ball.
La Crosse Home for Women and Children.
The Rescue Mission.
Red Cross Seal Sale.
La Crosse Municipal Band.

The latter organization plans a canvass to raise money for uniforms. Newspaper advertising, the statement of policy declares, is regarded as essentially legitimate publicity, and the Chamber of Commerce does not consider that it has any function in regard to it. In this connection the Chamber of Commerce authorized the following statement:

"In La Crosse, as elsewhere throughout the country in instances where the Chamber of Commerce at all interests itself in such matters, advertising in local newspapers is recognized as the one legitimate form of advertising with which the Chamber of Commerce feels it is not called upon to interfere, and has no desire to do so."

No Obligation
There is no obligation upon members of the chamber to contribute to projects by the board of directors, it was explained. The cards of approval which the chamber furnishes to approved solicitors indicate very distinctly that the project has been investigated and is deemed worthy of support. The chamber requests that all solicitors show their certificates upon all occasions, and that all persons require the exhibition of the card before contributing.

The statement of policy follows: "It will be the policy of the Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse to discourage all advertising schemes, where, in the opinion of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse they lack advertising value."

"It will also be the policy of the Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse to grant certificates of investigation for use only so long as soliciting is done in such manner as to insure that all contributions made by members of this organization are free gifts and not contributions forced by fear of discrimination to be practiced later by those soliciting contributions."

"In case soliciting is done in such manner as to gain the disapproval of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse, such certificates of investigation shall at once be withdrawn."

THREE BURNED TO DEATH

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 2.—Three persons were burned to death, two seriously injured—one probably fatally—and six overcome by smoke when fire swept a rooming house early Thursday.

The dead: Mrs. Nellie Howard, 70; Mrs. Mary Meeny, 75, and Charles Meeny, 40.

"IKEY" KAREL TO WIND UP FIGHT HERE SATURDAY

Busy Week Will Conclude with Rally Saturday Night at the Centennial Hall

MANY MEETINGS HELD

Speakers Criss-cross Over the County and Report Big Crowds Everywhere

Carrying their campaign through an exceptionally busy week of nightly meetings throughout the county, the democrats of La Crosse county plan on Saturday night to hold their banner meeting of the campaign. Judge J. C. ("Ikey") Karel of Milwaukee, a democratic leader of the state, and Mayor A. A. Bentley of La Crosse will speak at Centennial hall.

There has been no greater show of spirit in any political meeting on either side in this campaign than that exhibited in three separate meetings in the county Wednesday night, members of the county committee declared Thursday.

At the Ten Mile House, C. L. Hood, candidate for district attorney, and A. C. Wolfe, addressed an audience of Mormon Coulee farmers, while in the Town of Burns town hall A. H. Schubert talked on national issues and J. H. Carnahan, Black River Falls, vice president of the American Society of Equity, on state matters. Mayor Bentley and C. A. Dittman spoke to a large assemblage at Schroeder's Springs, town of Campbell.

Four of the leading speakers under the county committee were to swoop down on the Town of Shelby Thursday evening—A. C. Wolfe, Joseph Poschert, J. H. Carnahan and C. L. Hood. A. C. Schubert was scheduled for Rhode's hall, while Mayor Bentley and C. A. Dittman were to address a Concordia audience. A. C. Wolfe was to hold the fort at Seller's hall.

A vigorous week-end campaign is scheduled. It follows:
Friday—J. H. Carnahan: Dell, Monroe county, and Bloomington, Vernon county, in the afternoon; Onalaska, evening. A. H. Schubert: Campbell hall.

Boyle's Place on French Island: Billy Boyle and P. W. Mahoney. Saturday—Carnahan and Schubert at Holmen; Bentley and Karel at Centennial.

A. E. Martin of Chicago, is working vigorously in this territory. He speaks at Merrillan Thursday evening and has several Jackson county speeches scheduled for Friday with a 1½ meeting at Black River Falls on Friday night. Carnahan will work in Trempealeau county Monday.

"Is Any Girl Safe?"

IS THE TITLE OF A MOTION PICTURE.

It Sounds Lurid, Doesn't It? Well, It's Just As Lurid As It Sounds—and Purposely So.

The pictures were made by the Anti-Vice Motion Picture Co., to be used in stamping out the white slave traffic by educating the people—the fathers and mothers, sisters and brothers—to the actual existing evils of the plague.

The methods of the procurers are shown. (Lieut. Costigan of the New York police department said it was as true to life as it was possible for it to be done, but it didn't go far enough.) The picture has the endorsement of the Milwaukee board of censors, also of the New York censor board and that of Minneapolis, and of the Minneapolis newspapers. (The picture comes direct from the Shubert Theatre of Minneapolis.)

If you expect to be entertained by a crude appeal to your lower nature—don't come. But if you wish to learn the truth as it actually exists then come by all means.

READ THESE FACTS. The picture is in five reels. It will be shown Friday and Saturday. The admission will be twenty-five cents, and no one under sixteen years of age will be admitted.

EDUCATION NOT SOLE ASSET OF NORMAL TEACHER

The greatest development in the normal school system has been the change in the attitude of the presidents regarding the types of teachers desirable, according to President Fassett A. Cotton of the La Crosse normal school, in a speech on "A Decade of Progress in Wisconsin Normal Schools," delivered Thursday at the State Teachers' association meeting in Milwaukee. Teachers, declared President Cotton, must have more than a thorough knowledge of their subjects.

"In addition to university training, the teacher in a normal school should have professional training, and should have skill in the presentation of his subjects. This qualification should carry with it a sincere belief that there is a science of education—that there is a best way. It is no longer believed that just anybody with academic training can teach in a normal school. It is no longer believed that in order to teach one merely needs to get full of his subject in the academic sense. I repeat, knowledge is indeed essential, but knowledge is of little avail without the ability to think it and use it."

"The teacher in a state normal school should have had experience. Here is no place for tyros. Success in the work of public schools in the different phases should be the test. No one who has not had actual experience in the rural schools, in the grades, and in the high schools, should attempt to teach student teachers who are soon to fill such positions."

"But the supreme test must come in the personality of the teacher. No task master can succeed here. No grad-grind should have a place in a normal school faculty. Sarcasm, irony, anger, have no place here. In such a school, of all places, are needed genuine, manly men, and womanly women who teach by their very presence."

THIRTEEN RECEIVE DIPLOMAS FROM LUTHERAN HOSPITAL

Thirteen young women, composing the class of 1916, received their diplomas at the annual graduation exercises of the La Crosse Lutheran hospital training school at Our Savior's Lutheran church Wednesday night. Rev. H. B. Magelssen, president of the hospital board, made the presentation, and in so doing expressed the hope that the class, collectively and individually, would endeavor to live up to their motto of "To Be, Not to Seem."

The members of the graduating class included Julia Marion Engrav, Agnes Haugen, Neenah Hanson, Ida Julia Knutsen, Elizabeth S. Kirsch, Edna Constance Lyons, Clara Theodora Larsen, Anna Charlotte Lillegaard, Caroline E. Larson, Lucille Quamrud and Jennie Henriette Scheide.

A short musical program, consisting of several organ selections by Professor Harry Packman, a vocal solo by Miss Ida Aiken, and a hymn by the audience, preceded the graduation address, which was delivered by Rev. C. B. Bestul of Galesville.

Miss Aiken charmed her audience with a pleasing rendition of the Berceuse from Jocelyn, by Godard. The invocation was offered by Rev. E. O. Vik.

Rev. Bestul spoke on the subject of service and told of the various incentives to service which the nursing profession offers.

WILSON FOR EIGHT HOUR DAY

Made His Profit.

A long-waisted man, with the nose of a fox and an eye full of speculation, walked up to a second-hand clothier and said: "See that overcoat hanging out down on the street there?" "Of course." "Well, I've taken a fancy to it. It's rather cheeky to ask you to go down there, but I'll make it an object. I won't give but eight dollars for the coat, but I'll give you one dollar to buy it for me. You are also a Jew, and know how to beat them down. Here are nine dollars." The dealer took the money and started off, and in five minutes was back with the coat. "Good!" chuckled the other. "I reckoned you'd lay him out. How much did you make for your share?" "Well, ask dot is my pranch store, and I only ask six dollar for de coat, I vas more as tree dollar ahead!"

Few people are ever on time; they are either late or early.

HAIR CATCHES IN SEPARATOR

ANTIGO, Wis., Nov. 2.—Oscar Briggs, 13, had her scalp nearly torn off and was in an unconscious condition when found as a result of a braid of her hair catching in a cream separator which she was turning.

OUCH! LUMBAGO! RUB IT ON BACK

Rub away pain, soreness, stiffness, backache, with "St. Jacobs Oil."

Ah! Pain is gone!

Quickly?—Yes! Almost instant relief from soreness, stiffness, lameness and pain follows a gentle rubbing with "St. Jacobs Oil."

Apply this soothing, penetrating oil directly upon the ache, and like magic, relief comes. "St. Jacobs Oil" conquers pain. It is a harmless balm, which never disappoints, can not injure and doesn't burn or discolor the skin.

Straighten up! Stop those torturous "stitches." In a moment you will forget that you ever had a back, because it won't hurt or be stiff or lame. Don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Oil" from your druggist now and get this lasting relief.

SO WONDERFULLY HELPED BY TANLAC HASTENS TO RECOMMEND IT TO FRIENDS

"I took Tanlac mainly for my kidneys and back," said J. J. Green, living at 364 Forest Ave., Fond du Lac, to the Tanlac representative the other day while in Richard's Drug Store, where Tanlac is sold.

Mr. Green is employed in the large concern, Sweet's Machine Shop, as a machinist and is well liked by his co-workers. "You know," he continued, "Tanlac did me so much good right from the start that I began to brag about it and tell all my friends about it, consequently several of them have followed my example and are now praising Tanlac with me."

"I had a sort of cold and lumbago in my back that would hurt me if I gave any sudden twist or move. I had no appetite, although my stomach did not bother me much. I was just not hungry. I was dreadfully nervous and my sleep was very broken and restless."

"I first read about Tanlac in the papers, that is the way I commenced to take it, and it certainly has helped me. Whenever I hear any one complaining about feeling badly I always say, 'Take Tanlac,' and if they take my advice they are never sorry, but grateful to me for the suggestion."

"I have taken five bottles, so you see I went at it earnestly and sincerely, and have not regretted it one bit. My back and kidneys feel very much better and I have a splendid appetite now. I can sleep better than I have for a long time."

Tanlac can be obtained here only at C. A. Begun's Drug Store in the Majestic Building, where J. C. Henderson, the Tanlac man, is telling the public more about Tanlac.

Tanlac can also be obtained from Geo. H. Seidel at Sparta.

hoping to complete the journal later on. For any one who believes in an eight hour day, there was no surrender of "principle." If the Adamson bill had proposed an eleven hour standard instead of eight, it would then have been going the wrong way for those who believe in an eight hour day. The simple question presented is should a starving man refuse a slice of bread, because he is denied at once the whole loaf, which he may believe himself entitled to, and recently when asked if he would repeat the Adamson bill, Mr. Hughes responded with this generality, that a surrender can never be repeated, an astonishing position for one who says that principle should never have been surrendered; he now says, because there has been a surrender, those who believe that the legislation is wrong, and that it never should have been passed, must submit rather than undertake to repeal. This seems like inconsistency and an evasion of a difficult question.

Mr. Hughes' Record as Governor

He failed to make headway against the old guard in New York. After three years and nine months' service, and a struggle against them, which was greatly to his credit, and during which probably because of this struggle he was unable to render much constructive legislation, he gave up the fight and resigned and left politics. Can he control, or overcome, or make headway against the same interests now any more than then? He opposed the income tax amendment to the United States constitution, because as he said the language, from whatever source derived, would in his judgment authorize the tax on income derived from state bonds of New York held by private persons. At the same time, he declared himself in favor of an income tax, but if every other governor in every state of the Union had taken the same stand, that he did, and the legislatures of each of the other states had been moved as was New York to adopt that view, the present income tax amendment would not be in the constitution of the United States, and the income tax act passed by the present administration in October 1913 under which we derived in the first three quarters of the year $42,000,000 of revenue and in the second year $50,000,000 of revenue, and under which there is promised $120,000,000 of revenue for the current year, would not have been in existence for only because of the amendment which he protested against as governor was the act of congress upheld finally by the supreme court of the United States. This was done while he was a member of that court, and he concurred in the opinion. Brushaber vs. U. Pac. Railroad.

He opposed the two cent fare bill for railroads in New York and yet such laws are operating effectively and satisfactorily in many states of the Union at the present time. His stand on the teachers' equal pay bill was that if women were equalized in respect to one occupation with men that they should be as to all, that that principle should be seriously debated before being applied. The next legislature enacted the measure giving equal pay to teachers alone, a Democratic Governor Dix approved it, and the state of New York has experienced no disaster or social shock by reason of the fact that it applied to the single occupation of teaching.

Application of the like principle to the question of suffrage, a matter of such importance, has resulted in there being no women's suffrage at this time in the United States, for it was a state by state development, in one place at one time, in another, another, and limited to that one single right.

The Coney Island five cent fare bill—it was vetoed with the statement that the legislature seemed to think that it could fix five cents as the proper rate of fare. It was well known of course that the legislature could only fix it in the first instance, but it required a legislative declaration with gubernatorial approval before the question of whether the rate was fair and reasonable could be tested. As a result of the veto, it never has been tested, and never can be until some such law shall be passed. The fare to Coney Island and back is then 10c. On July 4th around a quarter of a million people, largely poor people of New York, largely poor people, they paid the roads $50,000, under the bill they would have paid $25,000 for the one day. Coney Island operations alone during the season would represent a difference to the people of New York of several millions of dollars.

The Consolidated Gas case applies here as well as to the railroad situation. The supreme court of the United States told the Gas companies to go back to the proposed rate which was established by the legislature of the state of New York upon a bill approved by the governor, try it out, and see how it worked, and if they suffered hardship under it, to return to court. The Gas companies would never have had to apply the rate or made the test, which demonstrates that it was an advantage, rather than an injury to them, if the bill fixing the 80c rate per 1,000 feet for gas had not been passed by the legislature, and approved by the governor.

The case this fall is of peculiar interest to the people. How the government shall be run in the next year or so may turn the question of life or death for many of our citizens, according as we are drawn into or kept out of war. Upon its administration will depend in large degree the prices obtained by our people for the products of the soil. The people are interested, they are patient in their attention to facts. They want not adjectives or oratory. Their reason must be appealed to, not their passions or their impulses. The great silent mind of the country grapples with the problem as it never studied it before; it recognizes the critical situation now impending. It recognizes, or will recognize the value to the people of honesty and faithful service, and with the knowledge of this service impressed upon the people, there ought to be little to fear as to what their verdict will be.

M'CONNELL URGES PROTECTION NEED FOLLOWING THE WAR

He and Frank Winter Speak at Yeomen Hall in Place of Borah or Nagle

ASSAIL MEXICAN POLICY

Winter Declares Wilson Has Failed to Protect American Interests

Senator William Borah of Idaho, contracted a cold in a Montana blizzard recently and was forced to cancel Wisconsin engagements in his speaking tour in the republican campaign. The Hon. Charles Nagle, St. Louis, secretary of labor under Taft, was hurriedly reached in Minnesota and promised to be here to fill the stand. At the eleventh hour he wired he had missed his train and was stalled beyond St. Paul. So he didn't come.

But the county republican committee was resourceful. J. E. McConnell and Frank Winter, both of whom have been prominent in the 1916 republican campaign, agreed to divide the evening, and they addressed a good sized audience at Yeomen hall Wednesday evening on the merits of Hughes.

That the issue of the year lies in whether American capital and labor shall be protected, or whether it should be left open to the inroads of cheap foreign products was the declaration of Mr. McConnell in pleading the case of a protective tariff, a cardinal republican doctrine. The other party, he said, approves of tariff for revenue only, and plans no provision for protection of American industry when at the end of the war inevitable dumping of cheaper made European goods occurs. He pointed out that from the time of the passage of the Underwood bill until the outbreak of the war across the water the balance of trade enjoyed by America actually was lessened. He predicted a like condition after the conflict, if the democratic measure is not stricken from the statute rolls of the nation. The doctrine of state rights, which Mr. McConnell said is held by the democratic party, is a menace to the continuity of the nation, he said, pointing out the survival of European nations as examples of where disintegration would undoubtedly have resulted had not individual states been knitted closely to the whole fabric of government.

Wilson's vacillating policies contrasted with Hughes' record of steadfastness of purpose while governor of New York brand the president as unfit of the two candidates, for the office of chief executive, McConnell declared. Hughes' work on the supreme bench, also, he declared, stamps him a man of keen judgment.

Frank Winter, whose address concluded the meeting, attacked Wilson's handling of the Mexican situation, declaring American business, unlike business of other nations, has not been protected. Millions of American capital, necessary to the development of the country, he said, has been lost through Wilson's policy of "peace at any price." The United States, he declared, has been woefully deficient in sending American enterprise to other lands with the promise of all due aid and protection. He declared fostering of American enterprise in other lands is essential to the continued position of this country among the great nations of the world in the matter of trade and commerce.

That the administration has courted war through failure to show a stiff front was the declaration of Mr. Winter. He declared that absence of "back bone" has lowered the estimation of the world at large of the United States.

Normal Notes

Despite the fact that classes at the normal school are presumably convening as usual, it is a virtual vacation for many of the more fortunate students. Almost half of the faculty members have gone to Milwaukee for the state teachers' convention leaving their students free to a large extent.

President Cotton occupies a position of note on the program of the state pedagogues. He will survey the last decade of normal school history in this state.

One of the largest parties of the year at the normal school will be held Friday evening in the gymnasium. It will be a masked affair for the juniors, the senior class being the host. Hackbart's orchestra will furnish the music. Inasmuch as all students of school are either juniors or seniors, it is expected that a big crowd will turn out for the festivities.

The two new tennis courts at the normal school are now completed and will present a popular place of entertainment with the spring weather. The new courts are situated behind the school where two old courts had previously been. The old grounds have been given a good coat of asphalt, marked off and fenced in until now they are in first class condition. There are now five courts in condition for play at the state school.

During the course of the past two weeks, the normal school building has been undergoing a re-painting. All the wood-work about the windows and doorways on the outside is being brightened up.

Most excuses are not worth the trouble.

WORLD'S CHAMPIONS SOLD BY LANNIN TO THEATER MEN

Boston Red Sox Sold for Sum Reported as Being $675,000 to Frazee and Ward

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 2.—A deal, said to involve $675,000, has been closed here whereby the world's champions became the property of two theatrical men, Henry H. Frazee of New York, and Hugu Ward of Philadelphia.

Joseph J. Lannin, former president and owner of the club, kept the big deal secret to the last moment, denying emphatically that he would sell, and then disposing of the champions at a sum close to three-quarters of a million dollars. The purchase price, which is not given out, is for the franchise alone and does not include the grounds of the club, Fenway park.

Frazee is owner of the Longacre theater in New York and the Cort theater in Chicago.

Bill Carrigan, who piloted the Sox to two successive championships, the man the new owners want for manager, they said Thursday, but Bill has announced his retirement and reiterated his statement that the change in management will have nothing to do with his giving up the game.

No change in the management or policy of the club will be made, the new owners declare.

FORMER HEAD OF THE NATIONAL LEAGUE IS DEAD

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Nicholas E. Young, 77, for eighteen years president of the National league, died Tuesday at the home of his son, Robert H. Young. He had been ill several years.

Young was the original secretary of the National Association of Baseball Players from 1871 to 1875. When the National league was organized he was made secretary and held the job twenty-seven years, then became president.

PRESIDENT CLASSES AS UNPATRIOTIC THOSE WHO USE CRISIS FOR GAIN

By ROBERT J. BENDER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 2.—Bitterly arraigning those who "use the foreign relationships of our country to secure political advantage," President Wilson on Wednesday declared such men are not patriotic.

"I cannot—I will not so regard them," he said.

"What we need is light, more than heat," he said in opening. "I'll be glad when campaigning is over because we can talk sense again. I regard it a liberty to discuss with you the affairs of the country in as much non-partisan fashion as possible.

"It's affairs were never so critically set about as at this moment. There never was a time when our domestic determination bore such a close relation to our attitude toward the rest of the world. There was never a time when we should discuss them more honestly, thoroughly and calmly, then now. There is excitement, unrestrained impulse enough. America must look at things without the passion sweeping other countries.

"No man can determine what are to be the details of working out the problem facing the country. The first thing to do is to determine the facts."

The president said when facts are known, "we must soberly adjust our affairs to them. Now for the first it isn't a question of adjustment not only to our own domestic affairs, but affairs of the world. It is not a party question. That's why we all got together and provided for a tariff commission. I haven't appointed this commission but will as soon as I can put them immediately up to the senate for confirmation."

AUSTRIAN LOSSES $50,000 SINCE FIRST OF YEAR, IS CLAIM

GENEVA, Nov. 2.—The Austrians have lost $50,000 men since the beginning of the year, according to authoritative information received here. Of this number 450,000 are prisoners in the hands of the Russians or Italians.

When Rumania declared war, Austria had forty-six divisions on the Russian front, thirty-one on the Italian front and two in Serbia and Albania. From these forces she withdrew eighty-eight battalions to send against the Rumanians. This force was later augmented as fighting grew less violent on the Russian front.

WOMEN NOT BLAMED FOR DEFEAT OF AUSTRALIAN CONSCRIPTION MEASURE

MELBOURNE, Nov. 2.—The women of Australia voted almost as readily to send their sons and sweethearts to the war as did the male voters.

An analysis of incomplete returns of the referendum on conscription Wednesday showed early reports that the measure was defeated because of the women's vote were untrue. The Australian farmers, coming to the support of one action of the laborites, really defeated the measure.

The figures to date are: For conscription, $92,000; against conscription, 973,000.

MUCH PEP RAISED IN ROUSING MEET AT HIGH SCHOOL

Locke Leads Yells and Bunge Team Must Have Lung Support to Defeat the Strong Riverside Team

La Crosse rooters are showing the old time spirit and almost raised the roof with their yells in the mass meeting Wednesday in general assembly. Myron Locke came back to his old school and led the cheers in the same fashion as when he was an undergraduate. George Bunge, Coach bell's huge guard and center, addressed the student body telling them of the value of cheering to the Eau Claire team at Eau Claire last Saturday and how much the Red and Black would need it in the Riverside game.

In Weisel, their fullback, and in their quarter, Riverside has men considered on a par with collegians. Besides this Coach Kahle is a graduate of the Michigan Agricultural school which ranks with the University of Michigan in the football world. He is well acquainted with the Michigan Aggie shifts and plays and in all probability will try to work them on La Crosse Saturday. The Wolverine plays are always in the form of a shift which conceals a trick. The Milwaukee team will arrive here Friday night on the Milwaukee and will spend Saturday morning lunch riding on the Mississippi.

Officials Chosen
The officials which have been chosen for the game are: Earl Pottinger, Wisconsin, referee; Chase, North Dakota, umpire; Earl Jefferson, Lawrence, field judge.

JOHNSTON TO BE OUSTED AS PICKER FOR GARDEN SHOW

By H. C. HAMILTON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Jimmy Johnston, who has had so much to do with boxing bouts at Madison Square garden that his name has come to be a synonym for the big enclosure, is just about ready to take his seat on the greased skids.

Edward E. McCall has announced he is going to depose Johnston as matchmaker for the Show corporation, lessees of the Garden Athletic club and it is all because Jimmy didn't want to make an accounting to the liking of McCall. Also McCall is displeased because Johnston did not go through with the Moha-Weinert bout which caused the boxing commission to order a suspension of the garden shows and to fine the Athletic club $1,000.

McCracken and Rickard, when they sign the papers, are going to inherit the Moha-Weinert affair, whether they want it or not and it will be the first bout to be staged in the garden.

Nap Rucker Slated For New Berth, Is Rumor In Brooklyn

By HAMILTON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Jake Daubert and Jack Coombs are the only members of the Brooklyn National league champions who will not have to sign papers again if they are members of the Dodgers when the 1917 flag chase starts.

And, if Wilbert Robinson has anything to do with it, there are few of the other Dodgers who will be homeless.

Nap Rucker, veteran of many a campaign and for a long time the only asset of the Dodgers, is one of the many who has run out of his term with the Brooklyn. Nap may be back and he may not—Robinson doesn't say.

Robinson declared when he left for his home in Baltimore that there were weak points in his club which must be strengthened if the team is to make any kind of a showing next year, and it is more than probable that a couple of these changes will come in the infield. Ivan Olson, despite his determination and his fighting spirit, seems booked for a new berth, and the same might be said of George Cutshaw, for George undoubtedly "cracked under the strain" in the world's series.

Cutshaw's slip-up probably will get attention, if for no other reason than its moral effect on the Dodgers.

The outfield is destined to have at least one new performer. There are many who do not consider Jimmy Johnston of big league caliber and he probably will surrender his job to Hi Myers. There are several recruits who are expected to have the call over Johnston.

HORWEEN'S BOOTING HELP TO HARVARD

Ralph Horween.

Harvard will miss Mahan greatly this season but they haven't given up hoping that some one will appear in time to fill at least a part of his place before the biggest games. Ralph Horween is showing lots of class with his kicking.

JEFF SMITH WATCHED FOR MILWAUKEE FIGHT

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 2.—Jeff Smith, the only fighter who has made Les Darcy, the Australian boxer, quit during a bout, has been watched to meet Joe Herriek of Kewanee, Wis., in a ten round bout here November 10. Smith, in addition to holding a win over Darcy, has beaten Jimmie Clabhy. He lost a decision to George Carpentier in Paris, France.

DAWSON TO CURS

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Rexford Paul Dawson, the Indianapolis twirler, will wear a Cub uniform next season. The big right hander won twenty and lost fourteen games for the association nine.

SUNK BOAT FORMER LAKE SHIP

FORT WILLIAMS, Ont., Nov. 2.—The steamer A. D. Davidson, whose boats are reported drifting ashore on the Cornish, England, coast, was one of the nine lake ships sold to the French government and was formerly a grain carrier from Duluth. She carried an American crew.

TOMAH IS OUT TO AVENGE DEFEAT BY THE SPARTANS

TOMAH, Wis., Nov. 2.—(Special)
—On Saturday comes the long awaited opportunity—the day that Foran and Tomah clash on the local gridiron. Tomah remembers the journey to Sparta three years ago and the defeat received at that time. Tomah and Sparta have not played together since then, and the locals are out for blood. Both teams are evenly matched. Sparta's speed has won all her games so far, while Tomah has had a successful season, having won two games, against Portage and Baraboo, and losing to La Crosse by a single touchdown after holding them scoreless for three periods. All of the Sparta coaching staff and players witnessed Tomah in action against Baraboo last Saturday, while Sparta is a dark horse for they have not been observed in action by a Tomah man this year.

Sparta is coming on a special train and the south side of the campus has been reserved for them, while Tomah will take the north side of the field. The high school has been endeavoring to develop a keen sense of sportsmanlike rivalry between the two schools, and the successful Sparta-Tomah basket ball games last winter indicated clearly that a good spirit existed between them.

Keeler an Official
Bill Otto, who has officiated several times at Tomah, will referee the game. Shafer of Indiana, will umpire, while Tubby Keeler, old Wisconsin captain and all-Western lineman, will act as head linesman.

When some women realize that they are superior to their husbands they waste a lot of time in regretting the fact.

AMERICAN FLYER KILLED

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 3.—Tony working with the Curtiss aeroplane forces, under contract with the Russian government, making machines for use in the war.

HOW ANY WOMAN CAN DRY CLEAN

Put gasoline and solvite in a wash boiler and save five dollars.

Here's a way to make soiled or dingy-looking wearing apparel look like new. Any woman can easily clean and restore the original color and brightness to kid gloves and shoes, neckties, ribbons, silks, satins, laces, net-work, yokes, furs, shirt-waists, children's coats, suits, caps, woolen garments, swiss, lawn, or kandy and chiffon dresses, draperies, rugs, in fact, any and everything that would be ruined with soap and water.

Get two ounces of solvite at any drug store and put it in two gallons of gasoline, where it quickly dissolves, then put in the goods to be cleaned, rub a little and out they come looking clean, bright and fresh as new. You will find nothing fades, shrinks or wrinkles, requiring no pressing.

It only takes a few moments to get what dry-cleaning establishments could charge five dollars or more for.
It is as simple as ordinary laundry-ing and you can't make a mistake.
Any druggist will supply two ounces of solvite, which is simply a gasoline soap and you can obtain the gasoline at any grocery or garage. Then a wash boiler or large dishpan will complete your dry-cleaning outfit.

MR. CANDRIAN IS NOT FAIR TO MR. HUGHES

VOLKSPOST EDITORIAL ROOMS, LA CROSSE.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 2, 1916.

A. M. Brayton,

Editor "La Crosse Tribune", City.

Dear Sir:—Whenever your lordship again deigns to poke fun at a fellow editor, I suggest that you arise a trifle earlier from your olympian slumbers and rub your eyes somewhat harder. The joke is not on me but on you, if you please. You were, as were many others, among them one Paul W. Mahoney, and he an expert in quibbling and hair splitting, ambushed by a false and misleading heading in the "Leader-Press"—"No embargo on munitions. Hughes declares he is not for it, nor would he warn Americans from using belligerent ships", etc.

From your own columns I quote what Hughes really said at Columbus, Indiana, to-wit:
I am in favor of the maintenance of every right, including the right of travel and the right of shipments. It is a very important right that we have as a neutral nation and it is very important that at this time when the great war is raging, we should vindicate neutral rights and maintain the integrity of international law. To my mind it is a very thoughtless policy that would surrender any of these important rights because of any sentimental consideration when we have the vast necessities of neutral commerce, and the importance of the rights of neutrals to consider with respect to the future of the United States.

Not a word in it about munitions, nor of not warning Americans from traveling on munition ships, is there? Not a word in it that would logically prevent Mr. Hughes from doing exactly what I predicted he could and very likely would do if elected. Mr. Hughes used cautious language, fit for campaign purposes, and he evidently "put one over" his "heckler".

Perhaps you will print this, instead of only a fragment of my article. If not, you are graciously forgiven in advance, on the principle of Madame de Staël of Napoleonic fame:

"To understand everything, means to forgive it all."

Very truly yours,

ADOLF CANDRIAN.

We've printed it all, that there may be nothing to "forgive", and we have pause to appreciate the excellent temper of our genial contemporary and friend. Indeed, so charming and clever is the communication that one finds no sting even in the "little early riser", the significance of which must be plain to all who are acquainted with our neighbor's beneficent if daring physical philosophy.

But as to Mr. Candrian's point that Mr. Hughes "put one over" on his "heckler", we've quite too much respect for the candidate to agree. Democrats there are who will agree with Mr. Candrian that Mr. Hughes is not frank—that he is evasive and furtive—but Mr. Candrian is the first Hughes man we have heard charge the republican candidate with equivocation. It is but a step for the "Nord Stern" editor to the democratic accusation that Mr. Hughes hasn't said anything at all, at La Crosse, Columbus, or anywhere, and the average republican will not like Mr. Candrian's suggestion that Hughes tricked his interrogator.

Mr. Hughes, as above quoted by Mr. Candrian, said: "I am in favor of the maintenance of every right, including the right of travel and the right of shipments."

Can munitions cross the seas without being shipments? And would an embargo on munitions shipments be "maintaining the right of shipments", or surrendering that right?

Would warning Americans that they must travel on belligerent ships at their own peril, without the protection of their government, be "maintaining the right of travel"?

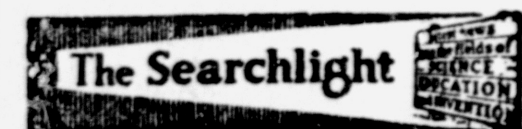

Perhaps Mr. Hughes did "put one over" on the "heckler", but to us his language is a frank and unequivocal statement. And if it was frank and honest, Mr. Hughes could not, as Mr. Candrian believes, place an embargo on shipment of munitions without "putting one over" on the American people.

THE WAR NOT A VALID ISSUE

Yesterday in these columns we disposed of the personalities and gubernatorial records of Charles Evans Hughes and Woodrow Wilson without arriving at an issue. There remain pros and cons concerning Mr. Hughes' record as a justice of the supreme court, but we prefer to let that balance itself, without further contribution to the humiliation of that august institution. We come, then, to the immediate controversies of the campaign, involving the European war, Mexico and domestic legislation.

It may be observed in passing that the republican assertion that Wilson did not "keep us out of war" because "nobody wanted to fight us", is hardly compatible with the republican demand for a great army and navy, but since we didn't want to fight and nobody was anxious to fight us, it is probably true that Mr. Wilson did not keep us out of war. However, as the Irishman suggested, it isn't a "private scrap" and "anybody could get in", so it would not have been difficult for Uncle Sam to take a hand, which gets us to the point. It is easy to deny that President Wilson "kept us out of war", but nobody can deny that he didn't get us into war, and that is really the thing with which citizens are crediting the president.

Mr. Hughes agrees with Mr. Wilson that there should be no embargo on arms, and that citizens should not be warned off belligerent ships. He is strong for peace, but in favor of a vigorous and unyielding diplomacy. He believes greater finality would have made the peace safer and honor more unsullied. It didn't work in Europe, and there are those across the water who would see no harm in a little circumlocution could they retrace a couple of years. Stripped of its rhetoric, the situation is not such as to rob Americans of self-respect, and does not, we believe, raise a valid issue.

The Searchlight

RAILWAY SNOW FENCE

An apparatus to keep snow from drifting on the railroad track has been invented by a Minnesota physician, who lost a patient last year because his train was snow-bound. It is a new form of snow fence, consisting of a number of transverse planks so arranged as to deflect air currents close to the ground, thus causing the wind to sweep low through the railroad cut, cleaning the track of snow instead of piling it in a drift across the track. A few sections of this fence erected at points where drifts would coat the track less than the delay of a single snow-bound train and a number of demonstrations have proven the practicality of the invention.

SOCIALISTS HOPE TO FORM CONGRESS GROUP AS THEIR SPOKESMAN

Those the socialists expect to elect are:
For the United States senate, A. Grant Miller, Nevada; for congress, Meyer London and Morris Hillquit of New York; Victor Berger and Winfield H. Gaylord of Wisconsin; Eugene V. Debs of Indiana; H. M. Shelton, H. H. Stalard and O. M. Morris, of Oklahoma.

(By Minkah)

SPIRIT LAKE

The Mexicans named this little lost lake, with the mixture of devotion and poetry that they bring to all their momenclature. What other people would call a muddy river winding through a featureless plain the River of Lost Souls? And what other people would have named this tiny hidden looking-glass of mountain water the Lake of the Holy Spirit. None but the Mexicans, and for once they have caught something of the atmosphere of a place in their name.

Spirit Lake lies very high in the mountains; hardly a dozen people see it in a year. Chance travelers, sheep-herders, forest rangers, prospectors—such are its visitors, and few of them tarry. For a while you must seek far to find a more perfect bit of beauty, there is a brooding air of mystery, of sadness, almost of other-worldliness about the lake that depresses the heart, and causes the lonely to hurry to sunnier valleys.

It is partly a matter of altitude, doubtless; the lake lies so high that the light clear air and the singing pulses transmute the most ordinary objects with an atmosphere of strangeness, so that the serried ranks of purple spruce-trees seem to be waiting and listening. It is partly a matter of silence; the cup-like valley that holds the lake is very silent. It is ringed by towering steep cliffs that shut out every breath of wind; the glassy surface of the water is never rippled. The forest that crowds dense to the water's very edge is empty of animal life; there is never the rustle of a wild foot in the leaf-mold.

The sharp shoulders of the cliff about are wrapped in fluffy garments of white cloud. Great puffs of fleecy, chill white mist hover over the face of the lake, and drift silently from bank to bank. The still waters mirror them faithfully as a looking-glass. The waters are very deep—their depth has never been plumbed. The lake is said to be bottomless.

All these things produce an effect of the mysterious, the significant, that is almost theatrical. But over and above such obvious matters there is something else—something that moved a primitive people to name this Spirit Lake.

"I did, dear," said Mrs. Parker and then remembered the warning, and added quickly, defying, with a magnificent sweep of her dark eyes, any one to contradict her, "I did, but Amos died. I was left a widow and married Mr. Fisher."

"Then you are Mrs. Fisher—"

"No, am Mrs. Parker."

"Poor child, did your second husband also die?" The old lady was all sympathy.

"Yes," said Allison, in too far now to retreat.

"But then who is this Mrs. Fisher?" In dull despair the old lady's eyes filled with sick tears as she questioned.

"I am his present wife," said Mrs. Fisher coldly, glancing sternly at her other half's one-time better half.

"But he is dead," Miss Appleby was hopelessly confused.

Miss Varney laid her hand on the old lady's shoulder and turned her around, gently but firmly.

"Have you seen Stephen Mayhew, Miss Appleby?" she asked.

"Stephen," cried the old lady, "you were a little boy when my sister brought you to see me."

"I feel like a little boy still," declared Stephen, kissing her.

"And," catching sight of Mrs. Von Loben Sels, "and there is your dear wife."

Mrs. Von Loben Sels pressed her wrinkled cheek.

"Yes," said Stephen, deciding as the others had done on a bold lie it need be, "my wife."

"Sir," the peace of the room was broken by the stern accents of outraged womanhood as the present Mrs. Mayhew advanced angrily and faced her husband. "Sir, is that woman still your wife? If so, I shall at once start suit for bigamy."

"Bigamy?" Miss Appleby burst into tears.

"Come," said Miss Varney, and gently led her from the room.

CHAPTER XVI Love, the Leveler

There was a moment of heavy silence as all stared after their departing hostess, then the muffled sobs of the unhappy bride recalled them to the stern pleasures of matrimony. Stephen turned to his wife.

"Mary, Mary, it was only for a short time," he explained, patting her tenderly on the shoulder.

"But—we—have only been married a week," sobbed the broken-hearted one, "and already—you—deny—me!"

"No, no, love, Aunt Appleby disapproves of divorce."

"If you disapprove of me—I—I—will leave—you—you can get—a divorce—"

Stephen led the unconsoled gently aside to the great French window and thence to the porch, while the others began to discuss the situation.

"The trouble is," said Freddy Van Tuhl, harassed out of his usual courtesy, "there are too many of us. On the immediate relatives should be present."

"I think so, too," declared Mrs. Morgan. "I shall leave tomorrow for Reno. Vera can stay on with you, Henry."

"Mother," said Vera, rising and slipping her hand through her mother's arm, "as I said once before, there are to be no more trips to Reno for us."

"Vera," Mrs. Morgan withdrew her arm coldly from her daughter's loving clasp and prepared to make a stand for freedom here in the presence of Maude, the staunch defender of the "faith."

Maude was the, at Mrs. Morgan insists on reading his paper at the breakfast table—

Maude was the, at Mrs. Morgan knew she would be, primed with argument. "A perfect outrage to our womanhood," Tommy wilted, though not addressed. "Would a man read the paper if he were dining with a lady, I send?"

"No," agreed Vera, "neither would a man, I hope, go to bed in the presence of a lady friend."

"Vera, how perfectly disgusting," gasped Maude.

Mrs. Von Loben Sels laughed. "Relationships alien cases," she suggested.

"Besides," declared Vera, "a newspaper is sometimes a lot more interesting than a wife."

"That is preposterous," cried Maude.

"But true," sighed Tommy so low that no one heard him.

"A sister wouldn't leave her brother's house because he read the paper at breakfast," pleaded Vera to her mother. "A man and his wife should allow each other the liberty they allow blood relatives."

Sammy stared at his wife in dazed surprise. Could it be possible that Vera contemplated granting him any liberty?

"It isn't liberty to ignore your wife," declared Maude, who needed no assistance in the battle for "Woman's Rights," taking upon her shoulders and carrying to a triumphant conclusion any unfortunate sister's struggles for the new freedom.

"It's wisdom sometimes," said Van Tuhl, ignorantly reckless because of his unmarried state.

"Mother," demanded Vera, as Maude sailed into the luckless Van Tuhl, "why should Marjory be deprived of a father because he reads his paper instead of talks?"

"I can not talk here," returned her mother coldly, and swept from the room. Vera followed her and the dazed Samuel held open the door for them as one in a dream.

NEWS NOTES—MOVIELAND

Alice Brady is the star of seven of the picture plays to be released by the World Film corporation before the end of May, 1917. These are "Bought and Paid For", "A Woman Alone", "The Girl and the Wager", "Darkest Russia", "The Madness of Helen", "Sinners" and "Frou Frou".

At this rate of productivity as an actress Miss Brady is portraying one new role every month, which is regarded as something of a feat considering that the process covers a long stretch of time and is not operated under special pressure.

"Of course this is hard work," said Miss Brady. "Not in spots, but regularly, without the slightest break. I should call it inexorable, for its actions are never relaxed."

"When I was very new in the speaking stage I realized that I had no experience, and I thought I would way to acquire it was to join a stock company where they changed the part every week."

"The plays were changed so often that we scarcely knew one of them before we were plunged into another and, of course, we fell into a rut in spite of ourselves. And then, if we were imperfect in our lines, we 'sensed' them as best we could, and slipped through somehow."

"This cannot be done in the pictures. One phrase may be made to do duty for another in the speaking drama, but you cannot make a substitute expression or action take the place of the real thing. In other words it is impossible to slur a scene or any portion of a scene in the pictures because the camera is sure to catch you at it if you try."

Demure Quakers

Is a Movie Star

From a Quaker's boarding school the big jump made by Betty Howe, who is appearing with Harry Fox and Grace Darling in several of the episodes of "Beatrice Fairfax", the series of the International.

Miss Howe was born in New York city. She spent her girlhood at Bay-side, and during the summer months wore a bathing suit practically all the time, swimming, canoeing and yachting. She was a demure little girl, and it was quite fitting that she Varney sent down word that Miss Appleby had had a relapse and that neither would be down again that evening. Mrs. Morgan and Vera did not appear either and the others discussed the situation in disjointed nervousness.

"My dear aunt should be made to understand the modern prevalence of divorce," declared Appleby.

"It isn't our fault that women have become polygamists," grumbled Van Tuhl.

Maude was on him at once and the local ended as disastrously as the discussion in the library, with no plan to meet the unfortunate principles of the owner and distributor of forty millions. It was clear that they could not keep up the pretense of being married to the particular persons Miss Appleby supposed, when they were not. Nor could they pretend to be widows when their widowers were present, nor yet widowers with their widows there. Mrs. Fisher was grieved beyond consolation.

Diet, Exercise or Death

An eminent medical authority writes that most of the folks die of a thickening of the arteries or of kidney disease. The kidneys become clogged, do not filter the poisons from the blood, and one trouble follows another, high blood pressure damages the heart, arteries and kidneys. Usually its danger signals are backache, pain here or there, swollen feet or ankles, rheumatic twinges or spots appearing before the eyes.

The best remedy is this: Eat meat but once a day, or not at all. Plenty of outdoor exercise, and drink pure water frequently. Before meals take Anuric, the great uric acid neutralizer, obtainable at drug stores. When you have dizziness, chills or sweating, worry, or dragging pains in the back, try this wonderful remedy to uric acid, which Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., discovered and named Anuric. Many times more potent than lithia dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

One night she attended a motion picture performance. She was so enthralled that the following day she applied to a motion picture company for a position. A "test" was made of her, and it was so successful that she was immediately engaged as a co-star with Frank Daniels in a series of comedies.

"We have got to be careful," pleaded Van Tuhl. "She will get mad and cut us all out of that forty millions."

HORSE'S "PLACE IN SUN" SHRINKS

Those faithful old beasts, the "near" horse and the "off" horse, still are assured a long term of usefulness on the farm, but their "place in the sun" of agriculture is shrinking. This fact is patent to those who have seen the exhibits of farm tractors. One reason is that Dobson and Betsy require attention and eat all the year through, whether they toil or not, while the tractor eats and needs grooming only when it works. Another reason is that the horse grows tired, whereas the tractor does not know when it has had enough.

The gasoline propelled contrivance, which has so radically influenced trade and pleasure activities, scarcely has more than begun to make itself felt on the farm. It is a pretty safe forecast, however, that the big outstanding feature of the motor business in the next few years will be the increased use of tractors on medium sized farms for plowing and for other tasks now performed for the most part with horses.

Like the pleasure car, the farm tractor will not only make farm life more attractive but will exert an influence in favor of extensive systems of hard country roads. Moreover, there are so many other possibilities in the application of power machines to agricultural activity that it is safe to say that for the progressive farmer can be no more interesting exhibit.

WOMEN SEEK WAY TO UNIVERSITY DEGREE

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 3.—The Women's Federation of Clubs of Georgia is to take up at an early meeting the question of changing the Georgia law to permit the admittance of women to the University of Georgia regular courses of study for degrees and diplomas. An appeal has been prepared by the women's clubs of Athens calling for a change in the state law so that women shall be admitted to the junior and senior and the graduate classes of the university on the same basis as men. The three years' summer school method is the only way a woman can now receive a degree of any kind at the University of Georgia.

HILARIOUS NIGHT

AUTO OVER EMBANKMENT

Lives of Three Believed to Have Been Crushed Out Instantly Under the Machine

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 3.—As the culmination to a night's hilarity, two young women and a married man were instantly killed and a man was injured when an automobile in which the party was traveling plunged down an embankment and turned over early Friday.

The bodies of the three dead persons and the injured driver lay pinned beneath the machine for nearly four hours before the accident was discovered.

The dead: FRED BRANDT, 26 years old, 5402 Bedford avenue, St. Paul. MABEL SIGSTAD, 22 years old, 5023 Twenty-eighth avenue South, Minneapolis. IDA SIGSTAD, 18 years old, her sister.

The injured man, E. C. Nelson, 24 years old, in whose car the four were traveling, and who was at the wheel at the time, is in the City hospital with cuts and bruises. His condition is not serious.

As a strange side to the accident, Mrs. John Sigstad, mother of the girls, declared to those who came to notify her of the fatality that she had already been warned of it through a vision.

The accident occurred at 3:15 a. m. when Nelson turned his machine upon Minnehaha boulevard from Forty-eighth avenue South. Misjudging the width of the boulevard, he swung too far to the left and the left wheel of the car went off the roadway, threatening to drag the automobile over a six foot embankment. Nelson turned the wheel sharply and for more than 100 feet the car plunged ahead, balancing on the ridge of the road. Then it toppled over and pinned the occupants beneath it.

Nelson was at the wheel and the two young women were seated beside him, while Brandt was sitting on their laps. The life was crushed out of the three instantly, it is believed, for Nelson, after lying dazed for a while, declared he heard no groans.

AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND PROSPER

HONOLULU, H. I., Nov. 3.—That there is little resentment in Australia against the neutral attitude of the United States as regards the European war, is the assertion of the Hon. Walter F. Frear, former governor of Hawaii, who has just returned from a tour of Australia, New Zealand and the Fiji islands. "New Zealand is a picturesque country, but Australia is far more picturesque than has been imagined. Both Australia and New Zealand are now paying heavily for the progressive, social and industrial legislation which they have enacted. The two countries have contributed largely in men and money to the cause of the empire. Nevertheless, they are experiencing an unusual era of prosperity."

FORREST NARRATES THE SPLENDOR OF BURNING ZEP IN FALL TO EARTH

By WILBUR S. FORREST
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
LONDON, Nov. 3.—A close range view of a great flaming super-Zeppelin topping out of a black, midnight sky is probably a lifetime privilege.

The certain knowledge that nearly a score of human beings are in their death throes does not occur to the observer of Zeppelin's fiery demise. The splendor of the occasion only appeals.

One of England's latest air victims, which fell at Potters Bar, performed its final act at the backdoor of the United Press correspondent's home. Watching the sky raider, held fast by earth searchlight tentacles, wriggling and twisting to escape the rays, a small brilliant disk of light suddenly illuminated its nose. Like an enormous thousand candle power flare it glared there momentarily and then, as if set in motion by some unseen force, dilated with startling rapidity. White flames raced down the silvery back of the raider, probably two city blocks in length. The next stage of the wonderful display came faster than words can be written.

No Fourth of July fireworks extravaganza has ever equalled the glaring curtain of flame which flowed like a waterfall from top to bottom of the raider, enveloping her length and breadth. There, suspended on an even keel, the great airship hovered momentarily against the black sky glowing and silhouetting every joint and criss-cross of its metal skeleton.

Ten seconds, perhaps, it remained like this. Then the great luminous tail began to curl like a burning worm. Fiery meteors shot earthward. The great monster's back became weak. Its belly sagged until the whole giant form described a weak imitation of the letter S.

Then a real disintegration began. The whole twisted, fiery form began to fall. Monster pieces roared away from the main body and hurtled themselves earthward. The carcass was falling hundreds of feet a second, carried by the wind to the north. It up-ended, writhed to the horizontal again and parted in the middle.

It was now only a falling mass of flame devoid of form. The incandescent flare which had illuminated half of North London and the fields and villages of Middlesex as bright as day subsided. As the flaming mass struck the ground a lower flare gave out a final light and all was dark again.

Cheers from a hundred thousand throats were carried on the breeze. Everyone knew that another Zeppelin had been added to England's bag. In the morning while soldiers were dragging charred and blackened bodies from under the smouldering ruins at Potters Bar, the world was told that this time it was a super-Zeppelin.

PEACE and PROSPERITY

Democratic Rally

Saturday, Nov. 4th

Centennial Hall

SPEAKERS:

Judge J.C. Karel, of Milwaukee

AND

NATIONAL

Wilson's administration has placed upon the statute books more legislation in the three and one-half years of his administration, in the interest of the Common People, than the Republican Party has in the last thirty years. There is not one of them that they dare to say they would repeal. These laws can be ruined if administered by Wall Street interests, as demonstrated in Wisconsin by Philipp's administration. Wilson has kept us at Peace with Honor and Prosperity such as was never known before. He should have the support of every one in this election. Any differences in our own county should be laid aside for four years. A vote for Wilson is a vote for Peace and Prosperity.

STATE

Don't forget our State Ticket. Mr. Williams, our candidate for governor, and our entire State Ticket will put the control of State Government back in your hands instead of the big corporations who have had the control of Wisconsin for the past two years under the Philipp administration. The only voice that you have in this matter is your ballot on election day. See that it is cast right.

Our candidates, for the State Senate N. C. Bacheller, and the Assembly, Joseph Wolford in the First district, and R. W. Davis in the Second district, will represent you and your interests and not the special interests.

COUNTY

The Democratic County Officials that have been elected in La Crosse County in the past eight years have been the most efficient of public officers, obliging and courteous and have attended directly to your business. Do not forget the Candidates on the County Ticket.

A. C. WOLFE, County Chairman.

CARE IS URGED IN USE OF GAS HEATERS

BY SAMUEL G. DIXON
(Pennsylvania Commissioner of Health.)

This is the season of the year when many people instead of starting their furnaces use gas stoves to take off the chill. Not infrequently they use rubber pipe connections and in the majority of cases the stoves are not connected with a flue.

Such an arrangement is dangerous in the extreme. Every year many deaths are reported as a result of just such conditions. Coal gas or water gas contains a large percentage of carbon monoxide and this having little or no perceptible odor may be present without being noticed. There is no warning and unless material having an odor is added to the gas, the victim becomes unconscious and unless aid arrives a fatal result is almost certain to follow.

Do not use a gas stove without flue connections and proper ventilation.

Gas water heaters are often installed in bath rooms without outside connections and then these are made use of to heat the room. Such arrangements are extremely hazardous.

DAYLIGHT SAVERS TO APPEAL TO CONGRESS

NEW YORK.—As the result of a meeting of a committee organized by Marcus Marks, president of the Borough of Manhattan, representatives of various chambers of commerce will be invited to attend a gathering in this city in December to discuss ways and means of promoting the campaign to have congress pass a law turning the clocks of the nation forward one hour on the first Sunday in May, 1917. President Marks says that the majority of congressmen have been approached on the subject and that none had anything to say against the daylight saving plan.

BRAZIL IS LAND OF PROMISE, SAYS H. B. ROBERTSON

Knowledge of Portuguese Important Asset, He Says, Spanish Being a Foreign Language

AGRICULTURE THE LEADER

Vast Territory as Yet Undeveloped; Frontier-Pushing Makes Great Field for Construction

BY H. B. ROBERTSON
RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 15.—(By Mail.)—That young America is casting a speculative eye on Brazil is evident from the hundreds of letters received by Americans already established here.

"What are the chances for a young man, with large ambition but small bank account, in Brazil," he writes. The answer is, "the chances in Brazil are very good if—and it is an important 'if'—if you can speak the language." The language of Brazil is Portuguese. Incidentally it is a serious mistake to suppose that one can "get by" by speaking Spanish. Spanish is no better understood than English in Brazil.

The United States puts on considerable chest over its size and natural resources, but in neither one has it "anything on" Brazil. It is the fourth largest country in the world; its natural resources are unlimited and it has a population of about twenty-five millions which has not yet driven its frontier more than a third of the way to the western boundary.

Agriculture Big Stake

Agriculture is by far the most important occupation, with commerce, construction, transportation, mining, lumbering and manufacturing following in order of importance. All are in about the same stage of development as they were in the United States in Van Buren's administration. In only a few of the industries are the methods modern. American up-to-date methods and ingenuity are eagerly welcomed, however, as Brazilians are progressive, after a late start.

The climate ranges from torrid heat of the tropical Amazon to occasional frost in the southernmost states. Agriculture takes its harvest from two to five times a year. Coffee, rubber, sugar, tobacco, cotton, grains, fruits and live stock products are the chief sources of agricultural riches.

In the export of the agricultural products and the import of practically all the Brazilian uses in manufactured goods commerce prospers—in the hands of foreigners who carry on practically all the commercial activities of the country.

Engineer's Paradise

A new country whose chief thought is its own development gives the engineer, the contractor and the builder the opportunity he seeks and there is no limit to the range of his work. Railroads are penetrating the jungled valleys following the westward moving farmer. Electric power is sought in the thousands of rivers that tumble from the mountain ranges. Villages and towns are built in the hands of the commercial activities of the country.

Gold, precious stones, coal, iron, copper and rarer metals make it worth while to mine in practically every state in Brazil. Manufacturing is still very much an infant industry.

Seventy-five million people will be added to the present population before Brazil accomplishes the development that was worked in the United States from Van Buren to Wilson and just as many fortunes will be made here as were made there in the interval. These fortunes will be made in about the same way and by the same kind of men—pioneers.

Many a man who thinks he's a hero to his wife is but a freak with a swelled head.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at first sign of Bladder irritation or Back-ache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

DISCOVERY OF ARGENTINA COAL FIELD REPORTED

BUENOS AIRES.—The discovery is reported of extensive coal deposits in the Argentine province of San Juan. The statement is made that it is nearly as good as the best quality of Welsh coal. Experts have not yet had a chance, however, to make a test as to quality or to determine the extent of the fields. Coal would prove of immense importance to Argentina, which is prevented from becoming a great industrial country by lack of cheap fuel.

TAKE HYGIENE WITH MUSIC IN ST. PAUL

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 3.—Tooth-brush movies took a bit of the joy out of life for St. Paul kiddies Friday. RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 3.—The one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Jubal A. Early, one of the leading officers of the Confederacy was generally observed by the historical and patriotic societies throughout the south Friday. More especially is the centenary to be observed in Franklin county, this state, where Gen. Early was born Nov. 3, 1814, and in Lynchburg, in which city he resided for many years and where he died March 2, 1904.

NURSES SACRIFICE LOCKS WHEN THEY GO TO BATTLEFIELDS

LONDON.—Twenty-five sets of female tresses were laid on the altar of war hygiene and efficiency here. The locks in various stages of luxuriousness, were owned by members of the Scottish Women's hospitals who are going to Russia for ambulance and hospital work. The women will aid the Serbians fighting in the Rumanian Dobruja.

The Honorable Evelina Haverfield, one of the party, suggested that long hair would not make for efficiency in the work to come. Consequently and without a murmur, the 25 recruits paid a visit to the barber and emerged tressless.

Two field hospitals and a transport motor service, equipped and established by the Scottish Women's organization, completely staffed by women, are now with the Serbians. There are seventy-five women in all. None has long hair. They are absolutely independent of male aid. They even dig the graves.

UNION HEAD SAYS PHILIPP FALSELY STAINED RECORD

Frank J. Weber, Milwaukee, organizer of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor, and socialist assemblyman, answering a challenge made by one of his audience at Centennial hall, where he spoke on Thursday night, told the story of the quarry bill, which Governor Emanuel L. Philipp recently said in La Crosse he had defeated and which the governor, in a speech at Gays Mills, charged Weber with defending.

"Governor Philipp told an audience at the Crawford county fair, in Gays Mills, that I had supported the proposed statute allowing boys under the age of eighteen to work in stone quarries of the state," said Weber. "The address was published broadcast over Wisconsin. Rutherford B. Pixley, publicity manager for the Wisconsin republican state central committee, and former secretary to Philipp, later made the statement that the governor had retracted it. I never saw a retraction published.

"The governor charged that I was engaged to lobby for the bill, when I have fought it openly for years, and was the means of killing it in the last legislative session. James Drought, one of the Philipp men in Milwaukee, was paid $250 to lobby for the statute, and I have the proof.

"If Governor Philipp does not know where I stand on the proposed quarry labor legislation, he is not fit to be governor."

Mr. Weber declared that while Wisconsin's progressive laws were among the best in the country for the working man, they would have to be carefully guarded against attempts to repeal them.

Says Philipp is Unfriendly

While not directly accusing Philipp, Mr. Weber declared that attempts were made in the legislature two years ago to repeal certain of the best industrial laws. He cautioned labor of the state to guard against further attempts to defeat their aims. The well known labor leader strongly intimated that nothing Philipp does is in the interest of the laboring class.

Mr. Weber, who drafted the first tentative compensation law in Wisconsin in 1903, told of his fight for the law's passage in the legislature. He declared that although it was not what he wanted, there is over one million dollars paid annually for industrial accidents in Wisconsin, against $175,000 annual previous to its passage.

Reads Kurtenacker's Record

While Mr. Weber was in the midst of his explanation of the compensation act another interruption was made, and he was asked to give the legislative record of Assemblyman Carl Kurtenacker of La Crosse.

"I can say this for Mr. Kurtenacker," Mr. Weber said, "He supported loyally the people who elected him. As far as giving aid to the working people of the state, Mr. Kurtenacker was not on that side."

Producing Kurtenacker's record on a printed sheet, Mr. Weber explained that the "O's" represented the La Crosse assemblyman's vote against laws favored by labor, and "X's" stood for vote in favor of labor legislation.

Reading down the list, comparing a score or more important industrial bills, Mr. Weber named but two or three against which the "X" was marked. For the most part the record was a string of "O's."

FALLING TIMBER BREAKS SHOULDER

John Lydon, a curber employed in the construction of the new Mississippi street sewer, narrowly escaped death at 5 o'clock Thursday evening, when a heavy timber fell into the trench and struck him. His right shoulder was broken. A warning shout which caused him to lift his head just before the timber fell saved his life, as it is believed that otherwise he would have been struck on the head. The timber fell about 28 feet. Lydon was taken to St. Francis hospital.

PEDDLER INJURED LEAPS OFF CAR

Failing to ring the bell or signal the conductor of a south bound Sixteenth street car at 1:20 Thursday afternoon, Mike Salemon, peddler, jumped from the rear platform while the car was moving rapidly between Market and Winnebago street. He sustained a fractured rib, but was not injured otherwise. He was placed on a Market street car by street car employees and taken to St. Francis hospital, where Dr. Egan attended him.

STEEL COAL PRICES SEEN IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Fears that the private consumer is going to pay heavily for his coal this winter were expressed here Friday by government agents investigating the threatened fuel famine.

A rush of wholesale buying by large industrial concerns in all sections, in fear of a shortage, has injected an "unexpected menace" into the situation. Reports of this "raid" on the market poured into the federal trade commission from various sections of the country, particularly industrial centers of the middle west and Pennsylvania. Prices in some sections, as a result, are quoted at from fifty to 100 per cent above normal.

WANTS PRODUCE PROBE

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—District attorney Charles F. Clynne was to ask the aldermen of the city for a conference, to confer on the butter and egg situation.

Mr. Clynne stated that he has enough information to warrant grand jury investigation, and if necessary will call a special grand jury to investigate the high price of food.

HE WOULD TAKE COUNTRY SCHOOLS OUT OF POLITICS

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 3.—Politicians are making a regular football out of the country school, said W. K. Tate, professor of rural education at George Peabody college for teachers, Nashville, Tenn., addressing teachers attending the annual convention of the Wisconsin State Teachers' association here. Tate suggested a board of trustees named by the governor with the sanction of the state senate. Or, he said, the state legislature might name the board of not more than nine members and the governor sanction them. This board, he plans, will have the same relation to state educational affairs as the board of trustees of a university does that school.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

SEES COTTON RIVAL IN CAT TAIL

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—The fuzzy brown "cat tail" that grows in the marshes now looms on the horizon as a possible competitor of cotton, said Professor John Coulter, botanist of the University of Chicago.

"The Germans have found a way to make excellent cloth from the typha," said Professor Coulter, "and I see no reason why we cannot do the same. The typha could be raised in commercial quantities far more cheaply than cotton and with improved manufacturing facilities could be made into cloth at a price which would cut the high cost of living."

TURKEYS SCARCE AND HIGH

NEENAH, Wis., Nov. 3.—It is predicted that turkeys will bring 50 cents a pound Thanksgiving time. Raffles held in the rural districts during the last few weeks have drained the market and poultry dealers will find it difficult to fill their regular orders.

WANT FORD PROFITS PUT INTO DIVIDENDS AND NOT EXPANSION

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 3.—A temporary restraining order, limiting the extent of operations of the Ford Motor company and preventing the expenditure of large sums for expansion, was issued late Thursday by Circuit Judge Mandell on petitions of Dodge Brothers, Detroit, automobile manufacturers, who hold ten per cent of the stock in the Ford company. The petitioners seek to force the Ford company to declare special dividends, which, they assert, the Ford company is earning, instead of putting the money back into the business in extensions.

RIOT FOLLOWS CLASH OF KEEWATIN TEACHERS

WAUKESHA, Wis., Nov. 3.—Keewatin academy was the scene of a riot Wednesday night between students, teachers and school officials. Five professors were absent from school Thursday and students, some of whom are threatening to quit the school, were doing picket duty outside.

The trouble started when James Buchanan, Chicago, installed two weeks ago as business director, became involved in a fist fight with Prof. E. J. Lefebvre, dean of the English department. Buchanan was all but mobbed by the students following his encounter with Lefebvre. Lefebvre was arrested later and released on $100 bail. He claims Buchanan became angered when he suggested that the academy pay alleged back salaries of the teachers. President James H. Kendrigan of the academy, said that Lefebvre was jealous because Buchanan had been appointed business director.

Kendrigan said that he expects the school to continue operations and that none of the students have left.

CADORNA ASSAULTS AUSTRIAN LINES
SOUTH OF GORITZ

One of Most Powerful Blows Since Italy Entered the War Is Being Delivered

CLAIM DEFENSES BROKEN

Claim Mile of Railroad Taken: Report Italian Advance Further to the South

BY JOHN H. HEARLEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
ROME, Nov. 3.—Consecutive waves of Italian infantry are crashing against the Austrian lines south of Goritz in one of the most powerful blows struck by General Cadorna since Italy entered the war.

Following up their successes south-east of Goritz, the Italians have occupied a mile of the Goritz-Vogersko railway and are battling on heights near Kemperlice. It was in this region that the majority of the 4,731 prisoners reported in Thursday's official statement were captured.

Further south, the Italian center broke through the Austrian lines for an advance of nearly a mile east of Oppacchiasella. The artillery attack on the enemy's lines reached its greatest violence in this region. The Austrian defenses were pushed and attacking infantry rounded up groups of dazed enemy soldiers.

The battle is extending southward to the Adriatic. The Italians are attacking Austrian lines northwest of Duno, an important railway point called by some military writers the key to Trieste.

The opinion prevails here that General Cadorna is preparing to strike a death blow.

An unconfirmed report reached Rome Friday that Duno had been captured by the Italians.

WILSON IS GIVEN GREAT RECEPTION
BY NEW YORKERS

Two Great Meetings Are Addressed by President at Madison Square and Cooper Union

POLICE LINES SMASHED

Throng Curses and Pushes Way Into Hall to Hear First Campaign Speech of Executive Here

By ROBERT J. BENDER
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Thrilled and inspired by New York's wild welcome, President Wilson sailed from here on the presidential yacht Mayflower Friday enroute to Shadow Lawn. The president and his advisers received greeting of the thousands here augured auspiciously for November 7. It was as he himself called it, "a royal welcome."

The city fought, screamed, belated, elbowed, stamped, roared, jammed, and hip-hip-hoorayed its greetings. Two of the most enormous crowds that ever fought and cursed their way into Madison Square Garden and Cooper union were on hand Thursday night to hear the president on his first campaign visit here.

The roar and buzz in the massive garden drowned out the president's words while a blatant band outside thumped out a tune even while the president sought to make his voice carry to the 14,000 or 15,000 crammed inside the structure. Seventy-five thousand was the estimate of the welcomers. Police lines were smashed by flying wedges.

Twenty-three thousand Tammany marchers paraded Fifth avenue while the throngs fought to enter Madison Square Garden.

Five thousand, the police estimated, were in that swirling mob that vainly tried to storm its way into the garden, while another 12,000 waited for the late night speech at Cooper union.

Last Speech Saturday
ASBURY PARK, N. J., Nov. 3.—President Wilson will sum up the issues of the campaign in his last address here Saturday. Back Friday from New York, via the Mayflower to Atlantic Highlands and motor to Shadow Lawn, he prepared for a smashing speech to New Jersey folks—and the nation at large—in connection with "Old Home Day."

The New York reception seemed to have inspired him with a new fire and given him further confidence of victory at Tuesday's election. He plans to go to Princeton to vote and Thursday will leave for Williams-town, Mass., to attend the christening of his youngest grand-daughter, the child of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Sayre.

WILL IMPROVE ST. PATRICK'S
NEENAH—Ten thousand dollars is to be spent in improving the property of the St. Patrick's church here.

LA CROSSE WOMAN TO HELP AT MARKET MEETING TONIGHT

In many American cities the cost of living has been greatly reduced by the establishment of public markets that bring the farmers and other producers into direct contact with the consumers. These markets have uniformly SUCCEEDED in cities where the women became interested in them, and have as uniformly FAILED in cities where the women failed to help.

The La Crosse Chamber of Commerce is experimenting in relation to such a market, and one of the best promises of success is the fact that the women of La Crosse are showing a keen interest. It is expected that many women will attend the meeting of the Farmers' Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, at which the market plans will be discussed this evening.

Comes on Sunday

City officials, aldermen and their friends, are completing plans for the city's annual sauerkraut picnic. The event will be held Sunday at Moxey's lake, fishing paradise of La Crosse anglers.

Dr. J. M. Furstman, city health officer, is prepared to guarantee antiseptic methods. He is to be at the helm in the capacity of general manager of the affair, and on Wednesday was collecting the names of those expecting to attend.

The city dads will gather at 8 o'clock Sunday morning on market square. They will depart of the picnic grounds shortly afterwards in automobiles and motor trucks. The picnicking place is near the village of Stoddard.

GREEN BAY ROAD
PLANS TO ASSAIL
REVERSAL ORDER?

Indicated That They Will Ask a Re-hearing of Decision Opening New Territory to La Crosse

TO ENLIST TRAVELERS

Reported to Be Considering Petition Among Salesmen Inconvenienced by the Change

That a determined effort will be made by the Green Bay railroad to change the decision of the state railroad commission, by which the schedule of the La Crosse-Marshland stub was reversed and a big new territory thereby opened to La Crosse shippers and merchants, was reported Friday. Definite confirmation of the railroad's plan could not be secured, but it was indicated by M. J. Webber of Winona, counsel for the railroad, that such a move had been discussed and was not improbable.

No word had been received at the office of the traffic bureau of the Chamber of Commerce regarding the railroad's reported purpose, but Commissioner S. J. Bolton said that he would not be surprised if such action would be taken. He said he understood that the railroad contemplated circulating a petition among traveling men using the Green Bay line, who are said to be inconvenienced by the change.

Attorney Webber, over the telephone to The TRIBUNE Friday said that he understood there was considerable dissatisfaction among the knights of the grip concerning the change, but that to his knowledge no petition had as yet been drawn up.

To attack the decision, the Green Bay road must apply for a re-hearing to the railroad commission. No notice has been received here that such action has been taken, but it was pointed out that the traffic bureau would not be notified until the commission had agreed to a re-hearing and set the date therefore.

By the decision, handed down October 24, the railroad is required to run its train from Marshland to La Crosse in the morning, and back at night. Heretofore the two trains had been operated just the reverse. By the new schedule, the daily trains connect with the Merrillan branch trains, giving Jackson county travelers the first opportunity they have enjoyed to come to La Crosse without inconvenience and an overnight stop-over. Several changes were also ordered in the freight handling system of the railroad.

FEAR IS HELD FOR

VILLA AFTER HERRERA

Mining Men Declare the Bandit Chief Has Grudge Against the Town's Commander

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 3.—The capture of Parral by Villistas was reported here Thursday night by government agents and was forwarded to Washington. The town was taken Tuesday, it was reported.

American mining men who have interests in Parral are much concerned over the fate of the nine Americans known to be in Parral. This concern was increased Thursday night by news from Chihuahua City that the bandits who held up the Mexican Central passenger train Monday evening at Laguna station assaulted Dr. Stevan Haffner, a German subject, because they thought he was an American. This, they say, is an indication of what may happen to the nine Americans in the Parral mining district.

May Slay Herrera
Mining men here who are thoroughly familiar with the country in the vicinity of Parral saw that Villa probably moved on Parral from Santa Rosalia, following the Conchos river to Pilar de Concha, a distance of forty-five miles from Santa Rosalia, and then marched south forty-five miles against Parral, entering the town from the north, which is the most accessible way, they say.

These mining men declare that the report of Villa's capture of the town verifies the report that Villa and his command had been in possession of Santa Rosalia.

Villa is said to have had a grudge against Gen. U. Herrera, the Carranza commander in Parral, and to have declared that when he captured Parral he intended to kill Herrera with his own hands. The report of Villa's capture of Parral was received here by the government agents Thursday night and forwarded to Washington.

Parral is fifty-four miles southwest of Jimenez, Chihuahua, and 110 miles in a straight line south of Chihuahua City.

Suspend Duties
EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 3.—Consul Soriano Bravo of the Mexican de facto government, announced Friday that by decree of First Chief Carranza, the new import duties on all staple foodstuffs and clothing will be suspended until February, 1917. The action was taken to alleviate the suffering of the poorer classes of Mexico.

Deny Parral Captured
NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—A message from Carranza denying that Villistas have captured Parral was received by Andrea Garcia, inspector-general of the Mexican consulate Friday afternoon.

"Carranza troops are in control of the city," the message said, "and there is absolutely no truth in the report of its capture."

MAY HAVE MUNICIPAL STORE

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 3.—A municipal grocery store may be San Francisco's answer to the present high cost of living.

Supervisor Charles Nelson declared Friday that he would soon introduce an ordinance providing for the establishment of a warehouse for distribution of provisions at moderate prices.

LOST SISTER AND FAMOUS BROTHER
MEET ON THURSDAY

Andrew Furuseth Makes Flying Auto Trip and Surprises Mrs. Dittinger in Lewis Valley Home

COMES WITH HIM TO CITY

Together They Visit Sailor's Niece in La Crosse and Have Reunion Feast

With a picture in his inside pocket of the lost sister he saw Thursday for the first time in his life, Andrew Furuseth, nation-famous secretary of the Seamen's Union, left La Crosse shortly after midnight Friday morning to resume the speaking tour for Senator La Follette which he interrupted for a few hours to make a flying trip up Lewis Valley to find "little Ollie." Mr. Furuseth did not leave until he had hunted up members of The TRIBUNE staff to express his thanks to them for locating his lost relative.

Eight Hours With Sister
The veteran sailor spent nearly eight hours with Mrs. John Dittinger, his sister, on Thursday, making a flying automobile trip from Blair to take advantage of the only open time he had in this part of the country. He reached the Dittinger farm in Lewis Valley about ten o'clock in the morning, surprising his sister in the midst of her preparations for dinner. He had written his sister that he would come as soon as possible, but he had not been sure of his schedule, and when he found that he was billed at Blair it was too late to write Mrs. Dittinger that he was coming. The Dittinger home is miles from the nearest farm house, and has no telephone, so her brother's arrival was a complete surprise to Mrs. Dittinger.

Finds Niece Here
Mrs. Dittinger accompanied her brother to La Crosse Thursday evening, and they called upon her daughter, Miss Olga Hagen, a student at the W. B. U. A happy family feast followed, before Mr. Furuseth tucked his new-found sister into the automobile and sent her back to her home, with a promise that he would return as soon as he could.

Mr. Furuseth left at 12:10 for Kenosha and Bristol, where he was scheduled to speak on Friday. He spent several hours with Senator Otto Bosshard, James Thompson, and other La Crosse men after parting from his sister.

HOUSEWIVES ARE URGED TO ATTEND
MARKET MEETING

An urgent appeal that all housewives who are interested in the possibilities of a public market attend the Friday meeting of the agricultural bureau of the Chamber of Commerce was made at the offices of the Chamber of Commerce Friday morning. It was pointed out that the success of a market here depends largely upon the co-operation and interest displayed by the housewives of the city.

The meeting is to be held in the council chamber of the city hall. It is expected that a plan will be launched for an experimental market day, to be held some time this fall for the purpose of testing out the attitude of the city and farmers.

LIFE HONORS MEN WHO LEAD SCHOOL SAYS BRIDGHAM

Prof. J. M. Bridgham of the normal faculty gave his annual address to the student body on Thursday morning. Mr. Bridgham ridiculed the theory that a student can loaf through his scholastic career and reverse his tactics when he gets out in life and make a huge success. The speaker cited statistics to show the great majority of the students who lead their classes hold corresponding positions in life. The names of fifty-six percent of the honor men in the larger universities in the land are today to be found in "Who's Who," he said.

A social hour was held in the normal school gymnasium Thursday afternoon.

a Sixteen Mile Hike
Just for Exercise

Judge Edward Cronon, civil war veteran who celebrated his eightieth birthday on October 17, took a little jaunt on Thursday. The judge left his home, 1013 State street, at 7 o'clock in the morning and with a brisk stride—brisker than that of many a man of thirty—set out for West Salem.

As the village clock of Salem struck 11:30 the judge hiked into town. He had determined to return to La Crosse afoot in the event he missed the late morning train. He had not calculated that he could make the journey of sixteen miles or a little better in four hours and a half, but when he learned the train was not due for several minutes, he rested and took the train home.

When asked why he took the walk, the judge replied that it was such a fine day that he felt like taking the exercise. His time made by Judge Cronon is considered remarkable for his advanced age.

Movie House Will See "Billy" for Few Minutes in the Evening; Receptions at Clubs

"Billy" Wolfe, democratic candidate for United States senator, will end up his campaign with a whirlwind dash over his home town Monday, it was announced Friday by the local democratic headquarters. The local committee has completed arrangements for some score of brief speeches by the La Crosse candidate at various factories, and at all the motion picture theaters.

Mr. Wolfe has been absent from the city practically all the time for the last two months, stumping the state in behalf of the democrats and himself, and the sprinting trip over La Crosse was planned to give his fellow-townsmen a chance to see him in action. The committee announced that the tour was arranged at the urgent request of local people who want a chance to hear and see Mr. Wolfe.

Reception at the Elks' and Eagles' clubs will wind up Mr. Wolfe's busiest day. Politics will be subordinated during the tour to simple good-fellowship, it was said.

It has been impossible, the committee declared, to have Mr. Wolfe appear at all the factories that had requested his presence, but the following schedule will be increased by the addition of others if time permits:

John Gund Brewing Co. at 11:50 a. m.

La Crosse Plow Co., Pearl Button Factory, La Crosse Street car barn, La Crosse Cracker and Candy factory—12:45 to 1:10 p. m.

All of the democratic workers were actively at work on Friday, hitting the final blows of the campaign. Norris C. Bachelder, candidate for the state senate in the district, started out at 6:30 in the morning with C. A. Dittman for a tour of Trempealeau county. Their automobile was scheduled to stop for short talks at Trempealeau, Arcadia, Independence, Whitehall, Etrick, Pigeon Falls and Galesville.

J. H. Carnahan, who has been doing effective work in the county, was sent to Monroe county for a series of speeches. He was billed at Dell, Bloomingdale and Ontario.

A. H. Schubert was scheduled for a Friday evening talk at Onalaska, and County Chairman A. C. Wolfe, with C. H. Hood, candidate for district attorney, were to talk at the Town Hall in Campbell. On French Island a meeting was to be held in Boyle's place, to be addressed by William Boyle and C. A. Dittman.

Senator Finishes at 10:40 in the Opera House and Then Talks Until Midnight in Film Theater

VIROQUA, Wis., Nov. 3.—Senator Robert M. La Follette on Thursday addressed the greatest gathering that ever assembled in Viroqua to hear a political address.

Twenty-five hundred people jammed into and packed the streets in front of the "opera house" where the senator was to speak. Every inch of standing room was taken, but less than half could get into the building.

Then the Star movie theater was hired, with its service, and in an address in front of the hotel those crowded out were told that the movie house was theirs, free, and that if they would remain there the senator would come and address the overflow meeting later.

The crowds overflowed the Star also, and fully three hundred could not find standing room inside. Senator La Follette concluded his address in the opera house at 10:40, and then talked at the Star theater until midnight. Scores of those who could not secure admission in either house remained outside, and the hotel was crowded. The audiences were keen and enthusiastic, making the incident a notable one.

Before arriving at Viroqua Thursday Senator La Follette addressed large audiences in the afternoon at La Farge and Viola. Friday afternoon he spoke to an interested audience in Sparta. Saturday he will speak at Elroy and Black River Falls, closing his campaign Saturday night at Royal, Clark county. In all the senator will have made twenty-one speeches.

BERLIN ADMITS
IN SAILLY TOWN

Repulse of Allied Attacks Elsewhere in the West Is Officially Reported

BERLIN, via Wireless to Sayville, Nov. 3.—The Germans lost ground in the village of Saily on the Somme front Thursday, but repulsed hostile attacks elsewhere in the western theater of war, it was officially announced on Friday.

"The fighting in the western theater was generally within moderate limits," said the official statement. "There were isolated actions in the Somme district and strong artillery fire. The houses of Saily that were captured by us were lost again yesterday morning in hand to hand fighting. A hostile advance east of Guedecourt and against the northern part of the St. Pierre vast wood failed."

"The French fire against Fort Vaux decreased toward evening."

Russ Losses Heavy
"In the eastern theater of war, Prince Leopold's front, the Russians suffered exceptionally severe losses during fruitless attempts, repeated seven times to recapture the positions stormed by us on October 30 west of Folv Krasnoloslje, on the left bank of the Naryuvka."

Call Vaux Capture Easy
PARIS, Nov. 3.—French troops recaptured Fort Vaux without losing a single man, it was officially announced Friday.

The Germans evacuated the position under the pressure of heavy French bombardment and the gradual encircling movement of French infantry.

Before quitting Vaux, the Germans caused several explosions aiming to damage the fort. The French waited until these explosions had ceased and then entered the position without any fighting.

All the Verdun forts are now firmly held by the French.

British Claim Trench Taken

LONDON, Nov. 3.—British troops captured a German trench east of Guedecourt in a resumption of the fighting on the Somme front Thursday, General Haig reported Friday.

REBELS ARE RE-INFORCED

Constantine Reported to Have Ordered an Immediate Attack Upon Rebels

LONDON, Nov. 3.—A pitched battle between Greek royalist and revolutionary troops is imminent unless the allied forces at Salonika intervene immediately.

A Greek force, estimated at four thousand, was thirty miles south of Katerina, when Venizelist soldiers drove the royalist garrison out of the town. Athens dispatches reported Friday that King Constantine has ordered these troops to attack at once. The Venizelist troops that occupied Katerina are being reinforced from Salonika and are reported well supplied with machine guns.

In several parts of Thessaly parties of revolutionary troops, coming in contact with the royalist forces, have exchanged derisive snouts and at Guida recently the king's soldiers attacked some of the Venizelists.

It is believed here that if a battle is fought at Katerina, it will result in general engagements that will plunge Greece into civil war.

Following services at St. Mary's Catholic church at 9 o'clock Friday morning, at which Dr. Robert B. Condon officiated, the body of John Coady, first city marshal and the oldest settler of La Crosse was buried in the Catholic cemetery. Many friends of the aged man paid him their last respects. The pall-bearers were Larry Dugan, captain of the police department, with whom Mr. Coady had worked; Frank Wolf, patrolman; William Horschack, sergeant; Chris Burns, C. M. Clark and Edward Kevin, mail carrier.

Koenig Sailors
Get Frenchman
For His Remarks

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 3.—Two sailors from the German submarine Deutschland walked into a restaurant here early Friday. There was a French waiter in the place.

The sailors are said to have forced their attentions on a girl and the Frenchman stepped in. In the fight resulting, the waiter was stabbed in the arm and he men escaped.

Later, police after threatening to demand investigation of Capt. Koenig, decided the Frenchman's remarks on Germany had provoked the squabble and decided to take no action.

They found the trouble had been provoked largely by the Frenchman's aspersions on Germany and by his hitting one of the sailors.

The special body of survey to investigate the status of the Deutschland notified Washington Friday she is a merchantman just as she was when she reached Baltimore last summer.

Captain Koenig thus far has failed to file his manifest.

Bernstorff Works on Mail

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—German Ambassador von Bernstorff spent most of Friday plowing through 800 pounds of mail brought from Germany on the sub-merchantman Deutschland.

Whether the Deutschland is to carry United States mail on her return trip has not yet been definitely decided, Ambassador Bernstorff said.

It was learned incidentally that Captain Koenig of the Deutschland is now called Captain Dr. Koenig. On his arrival at Bremen after his first trip he was given the honorary degree by a German university.

WOULD HAVE FEDERAL COLD STORAGE CONTROL

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Federal control of cold storage plants through the interstate commerce commission is to be provided for in a bill being drafted by Congressman Fred A. Britton of Illinois, which he will introduce when congress convenes next month. Britton plans to include a provision suggested by David Rosenheim, grocer and orchardist at a food hearing before the council committee on health here Thursday, requiring monthly sworn statements to the federal bureau on contents of all food storage places.

In addition United States Attorney Clyde was invited to appear before the next meeting of the health committee of the city council and take advantage of the facts brought out.

Sport News Of A Day

BADGERS AT OHIO FEARING ATTACK OF WILGE'S MEN

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 3.—The University of Wisconsin football squad, numbering about forty men, inclusive of the coaches and managers, left for Columbus Thursday afternoon.

The Badgers arrived at the Ohio city Friday morning, and were to get a workout on the state football field before the game with Ohio State Saturday afternoon. Coach Withington wound up his home work of the squad Wednesday afternoon, with the particular emphasis on the defense for trick plays and forward passes that the Ohio eleven is expected to try.

Capt. Meyers and the Badger scouts say that the Ohio State game will be considerably harder than that with Chicago. The Buckeyes defeated Illinois through the power of one halfback, Harley, and this man will be watched on every play by the Wisconsin defense. It will be the Buckeye homecoming, and the first real name for itself. Two years ago Wisconsin defeated Ohio by a score of 7 to 6, but last year, after the Ohio team had tied Illinois, Wisconsin turned around and defeated it by a score of 21 to 0.

SAYS FIVE CLUBS LINE UP AGAINST TOM CHIVINGTON

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 3.—Opposition to the re-election of President Thomas Chivington of the American Association baseball league is developing, according to President A. F. Timme of the Milwaukee club. Timme, in a statement, claims that the following five clubs will line up against Chivington in support of the candidacy of Tom Hickey of St. Paul. Milwaukee, Columbus, St. Paul, Louisville and Minneapolis.

SAYS GARRY WOULD RESIGN RATHER THAN CAUSE BASEBALL WAR

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 3.—Garry Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati Reds, would resign as chairman of the national commission rather than precipitate a baseball war if proof is brought that a change is desired. John K. Tener, president of the National league predicts in a statement to the United Press. His statement was in answer to Ban Johnson's declaration in Chicago Wednesday that Herrmann must go.

"The same situation existed last year," Tener declared. "Herrmann has been chairman of the national commission for more than ten years. He was interested in the Cincinnati club at the time chosen to head that body and it is my opinion that no better man can be found for the position."

WILLIAMS RESPECTS ILLINI

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 3.—Warning against over-confidence concerning the game with Illinois was issued here by Dr. Williams, Gopher coach Friday. He predicted a hard fight and said the talk of a forty to nothing score was not justified by the relative strength of the two teams. Zupke has a bunch of new plays to spring on the strong Gopher machine, it is said.

This is what these men expect to make La Crosse Saturday afternoon when they play Riverside Milwaukee for the first time in the history of the schools. Everyone of the men is in the pink of condition and with Coach Bell's training they look as if they could beat any eleven, even one coached by such a crafty man as Kahle. In Thursday night's practice, the team just ran over the seconds in spite of the scrap the scrubs have been showing this week. Weeks and Argall both made long gains on forward passes, one of the passes thrown by Feinberg going thirty yards.

Red and Black Respected

The following matter, from a Milwaukee paper, indicates the local team is respected in the cream city: "Coach Kahle will take his Riverside High athletes to La Crosse on Friday, where they will meet Coach Bell's strong team. The chances for a victory for the orange clad warriors does not seem bright. In fact, several critics concede the La Crosse lads to be one of the strongest secondary school teams that was ever formed in Wisconsin. La Crosse was strong last year, when they put up a good race for state honors, and are reputed to be even stronger this year."

NOTRE-DAME-ARMY BIG EASTERN GAME

By HAMILTON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Elmer Oliphant, that enterprising young man who is learning how to be a United States army officer as a side line to his football studies, will be swathed in the calcium again Saturday afternoon when the Army "tank" is turned loose against the roaring fresh westerners from Indiana, Notre Dame. The South Bend school is going all the way to West Point to try to batter out another victory over the Army and the majority of critics expect they will do it, Oliphant or no Oliphant.

That is the east's only big game. All the rest of the important schools of this section will be taking opponents who should prove comparatively easy. Dartmouth alone has a hard job on her hands, and there is everything to indicate another defeat will be put in the "Green" chances when it is catapulted against the heavy Syracuse footballists. The game will be played at Springfield.

Princeton will have Bucknell for practice, Harvard will battle Virginia, and Yale will take on Colgate, not a practice game by any means, but one which should be won by Yale. Cornell will get Carnegie Tech, the team which was battered by Yale.

WOLGAST READY TO FIGHT WELSH AT TIA JUANA

"All that remains to make the match a certainty is for Welsh to sign articles," added Ad.

DEAD MEN

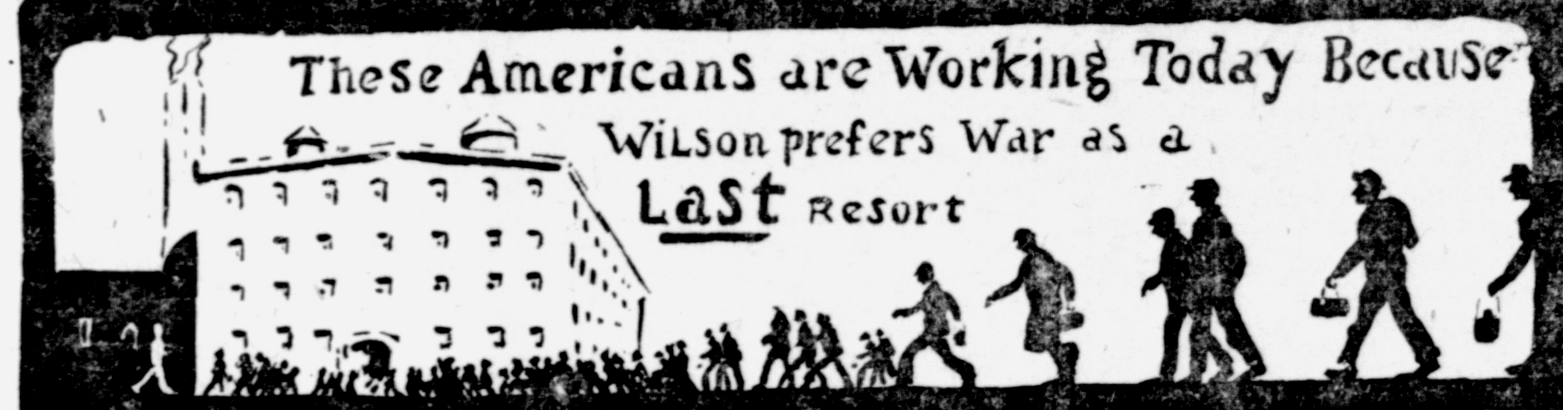

Answer the Great Republican Campaign Lie

Yesterday, in a paid advertisement, the republican national committee pictured American factories closed and idle when the fighting men of Europe return to work, but they FORGOT to say that some fifteen millions of the fighting men of Europe WILL NOT COME BACK TO WORK.

Vote for Wilson!

By J.H. Cassel

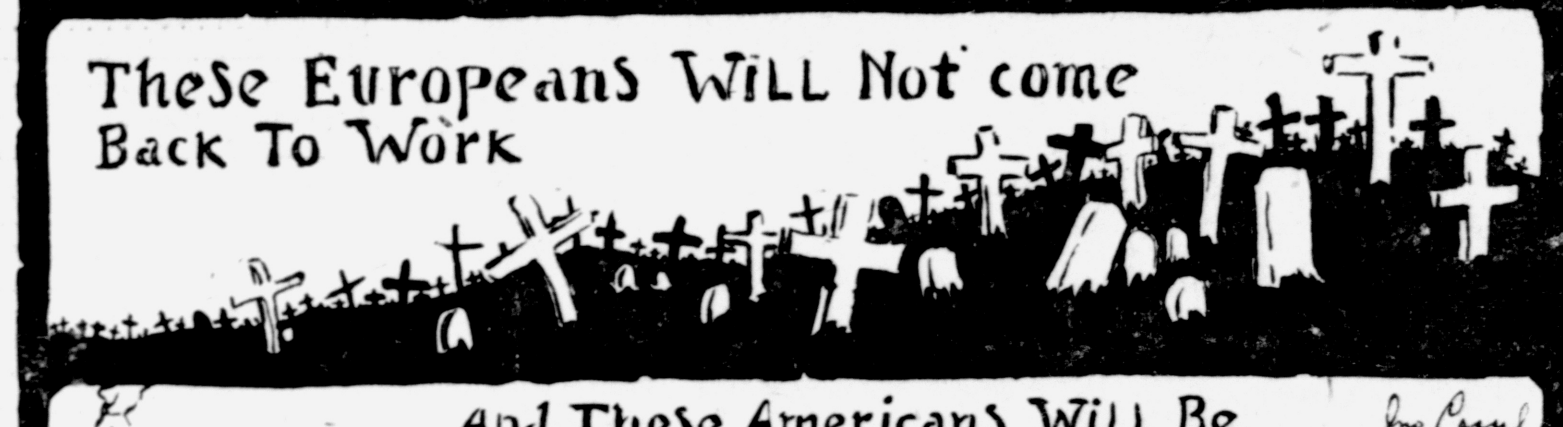

These Americans are Working Today Because Wilson prefers War as a Last Resort

These Europeans Did Not

These Europeans Will Not come Back To Work

And These Americans Will Be Alive And On The Job.

THE GRAVE HAS SWALLOWED THE BACK BONE OF EUROPEAN COMPE- TITION.

Estimates of Europe's dead run from NINE to FIFTEEN MILLIONS. Certainly the number of dead and incapacitated will not be less than fifteen millions. These are the men who ran Europe's factories—AND THEY ARE DEAD!

The loss of FIFTEEN MILLION MEN means LABOR SCARCITY.

Labor scarcity means HIGHER WAGES.

Higher wages mean INCREASED COST OF PRODUCTION.

Increased cost of European production means THAT EUROPE WILL HAVE NO "CHEAP GOODS" TO "DUMP" IN AMERICA.

How many mothers, how many years will it take to give Europe back its fifteen million workmen slain in the war?

HOW LONG BEFORE THIS YEAR'S BABIES WILL MAN EUROPE'S FACTORIES?

How long will it take Europe to restore its dismantled plants?

How long will it take Europe to replace its sunken shipping?

Out of the world's markets now, out of touch with world trade, unacquainted with market demands, how shall Europe readjust the shattered fabric of its own civilization and compete on even terms with a wealthy and resourceful nation like the United States that has had a free hand and the inside track for several years. INSTEAD OF UNDERSELLING US AT HOME, EUROPE WILL TAX OUR FACTORIES TO FURNISH THE MATERIAL FOR HER OWN REBUILDING.

Nations with fifteen millions of dead ARE CRIPPLED NATIONS. Will you let anyone tell you that vigorous young business man, the United States, IS AFRAID OF THE COMPETITION OF CRIPPLES?

SUGGEST LANDIS HEAD COMMISSION IF GARRY QUILTS

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Trailing on the heels of the report that Garry Herrmann may be forced off the national commission, comes the suggestion from baseball fans that Judge K. M. Landis of the United States district court here, be made chairman of the high court of baseball.

While the judge has not been sounded on the proposition and might be unwilling to resign his lifetime judgeship to jump into the uncertain whirl of baseball politics, he is known to have a decided interest in the national game.

Five club owners in the major league, it is said here, are ready to vote for Judge Landis if the question of changing the personnel of the commission arises. A quiet campaign has been waged since the middle of last summer, it is said, to have the judge placed at the head of the body. James A. Hart, former owner of the Cubs, has also been mentioned.

USE SMALL MEN IN TANKS

LONDON, Nov. 3.—No longer can the bantam Britons escape the army.

Previous to the advent of Britain's land navy—the "Tanks"—the "banties" had no fear of military tribunals which decide whether men are or are not soldiers.

The bantam is now the "tank man." The shorter and lighter the better, the tribunals say.

AGED MILLIONAIRE LOST

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—He was carrying papers showing ownership of more than $450,000 worth of Chicago real estate and several hundred dollars when he started home from Chicago, but James Alexander Hayward, 64-year-old millionaire of Berrien Springs, never arrived there. His wife and nephew have asked the police here to help locate him.

AMERICANS WITH BRITISH ARMIES EXPATRIATE SELF

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Any American who fights for England in the present war expatriates himself. The state department made this clear in connection with its action in refusing a passport to Theodore Marburg, Jr., of Baltimore, who is returning to England to rejoin the Royal aviation corps.

Marburg is a son of the former United States minister to Belgium.

Expectation results from the fact that all British soldiers must take the oath of allegiance to the British crown which, in the case of Americans, wipes out their allegiance to this country.

WHITNEY ANGLES FOR DODGERS

RENTAL OF OPEN FACED SUITS ON THE RISE

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Joining in with the increasing cost of living, buying and dying, the cost of society is now about to advance a dress suit combine is in the making and if put through will spell ruin to many a socially inclined but sweated gal-lant.

Heretofore the rental of a "two-tailed tormentor and trimmings," has stood at $1.50 per night. Part of the time the owning company, when it did business wholesale, such as outfitting a group of young statesmen for the annual hoop, had to take out some of the money in program advertising. Nothing doing hereafter.

"Two dollars or you boys wear your sweaters," is an epitome of the battle shout of the owning firms. They have united to make good the shout.

MERCHANT ATTACKED

RACINE, Wis., Nov. 3.—August De Blase, merchant, was attacked and slashed from behind with a razor. The assailant only struck De Blase once, but the blow was of sufficient force to cause the weapon to cut through his coat, vest, sweater, and two shirts and penetrate the flesh on his back. De Blase was unable to give any reason for the attack.

GERMANS BUILT LONG TUNNELS TO DEFEND CHILLY

Tunnel Half Mile Long and Sixty Feet Below Surface Entirely Safe from Violent Bombardment

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES BEFORE CHAULNES, Oct. 14.—(By Mail.)—The present encircling movement of the French armies about Chaulnes is similar to the ones so successfully employed in the capture of Comblès, Thiepval and other important centers at the northern extremity of the offensive.

The capture of Chilly brought to light one of the most striking examples that has yet been found of the extremes of organization and effort to which the German general staff has gone in its effort to cling to the occupied soil of France.

Following the capture of Chilly, the French troops found at the depth of forty to sixty feet below the surface a tunnel more than half a mile in length constructed from the headquarters of the commanding officer in Chilly to the front line German trenches then well in advance of the village.

For the construction of this tunnel, expert miners had been brought from Germany and it represented not less than six months of their work. By its use, the Germans were able to send not only their men into the front line trenches, but also all munitions and supplies, without exposing a single man to the constant French bombardment.

Although the Germans are now driven considerably beyond Chilly they are still near enough to keep up daily a terrible bombardment and struggle in a last desperate effort to win back the tunnel, which is now serving the French fully as well as it formerly served the Germans.

I was enabled to enter the tunnel from one of the exits it had in the German first line positions and traverse its entire half-mile length to the village of Chilly in the rear, conscious of utter security from the German bombardment, which never ceased.

Sixty Feet Underground

The descent into the tunnel was by three successive flights of stairs, for the Germans naturally figuring that their first line positions would suffer the heaviest bombardment, had sunk the tunnel at that point to a depth of sixty feet. Here at the bottom of the stairway and at the end of the tunnel was grouped off half a dozen chambers with sleeping and eating facilities for the soldiers when off duty, when the trenches were being too violently bombarded to remain above, and for the troops who might be called upon to defend the tunnel in case the trenches above should be taken.

These rooms were now occupied by the French "poilus" who had converted all of the arrangements both for the comfort and defense of the original German owners to their own use.

Entering the tunnel proper, I found it entirely walled up with heavy timber, the ceiling high enough to permit the troops to pass without stooping down, and with a narrow gauge railway running the entire length for the hurrying of munitions to the front line trenches.

Pipes for mechanical ventilation as well as electric light wires ran the full length of the tunnel. The plants at forty feet below the surface earth, had been destroyed by the Germans at the moment of capture.

Lavishly Stocked

Groping on through the tunnel, through the foul air, and lighted only by candles and pocket flashlights, I found the floor was strewn with half eaten loaves of black bread which the Germans had evidently flung frantically down when the word was passed that the French had taken the position above.

Potatoes were strewn over the floor of the tunnel, as were also innumerable empty mineral water, wine and beer bottles with which the tunnel appeared to have been lavishly stocked.

From both sides of the tunnel sleeping rooms branched off, and the bunks in these contained still the shoes, coats, caps and other articles of clothing just as the Germans had left them at the moment of surprise.

Surgical Station

A little farther on was a widened portion that had been the dressing room and surgical station for the wounded. Germans wounded in the French bombardment that preceded the infantry assault and even when the French had swept over the position, had apparently been hastily taken down into the tunnel and given first attention at this station. Blood stained bandages still lay scattered about the dressing tables and bunks as did also various surgical instruments and appliances.

In several places along the sides of the tunnel wells had been sunk so that in case of siege a supply of fresh water would be available.

The approach to the other end of the tunnel that comes out in Chilly was marked as at the end where I had entered by the groups of chambers.

The "piece de resistance" came at the end of the tunnel where it opened into the underground apartment of the German officer who had commanded the position. Although his apartment was forty feet below the surface of the earth, all of the rooms were plastered in white, and perfect in all appointments even to a bath room and a well stocked wine cellar. Of the latter, only the empty bottles remained, but they were almost countless.

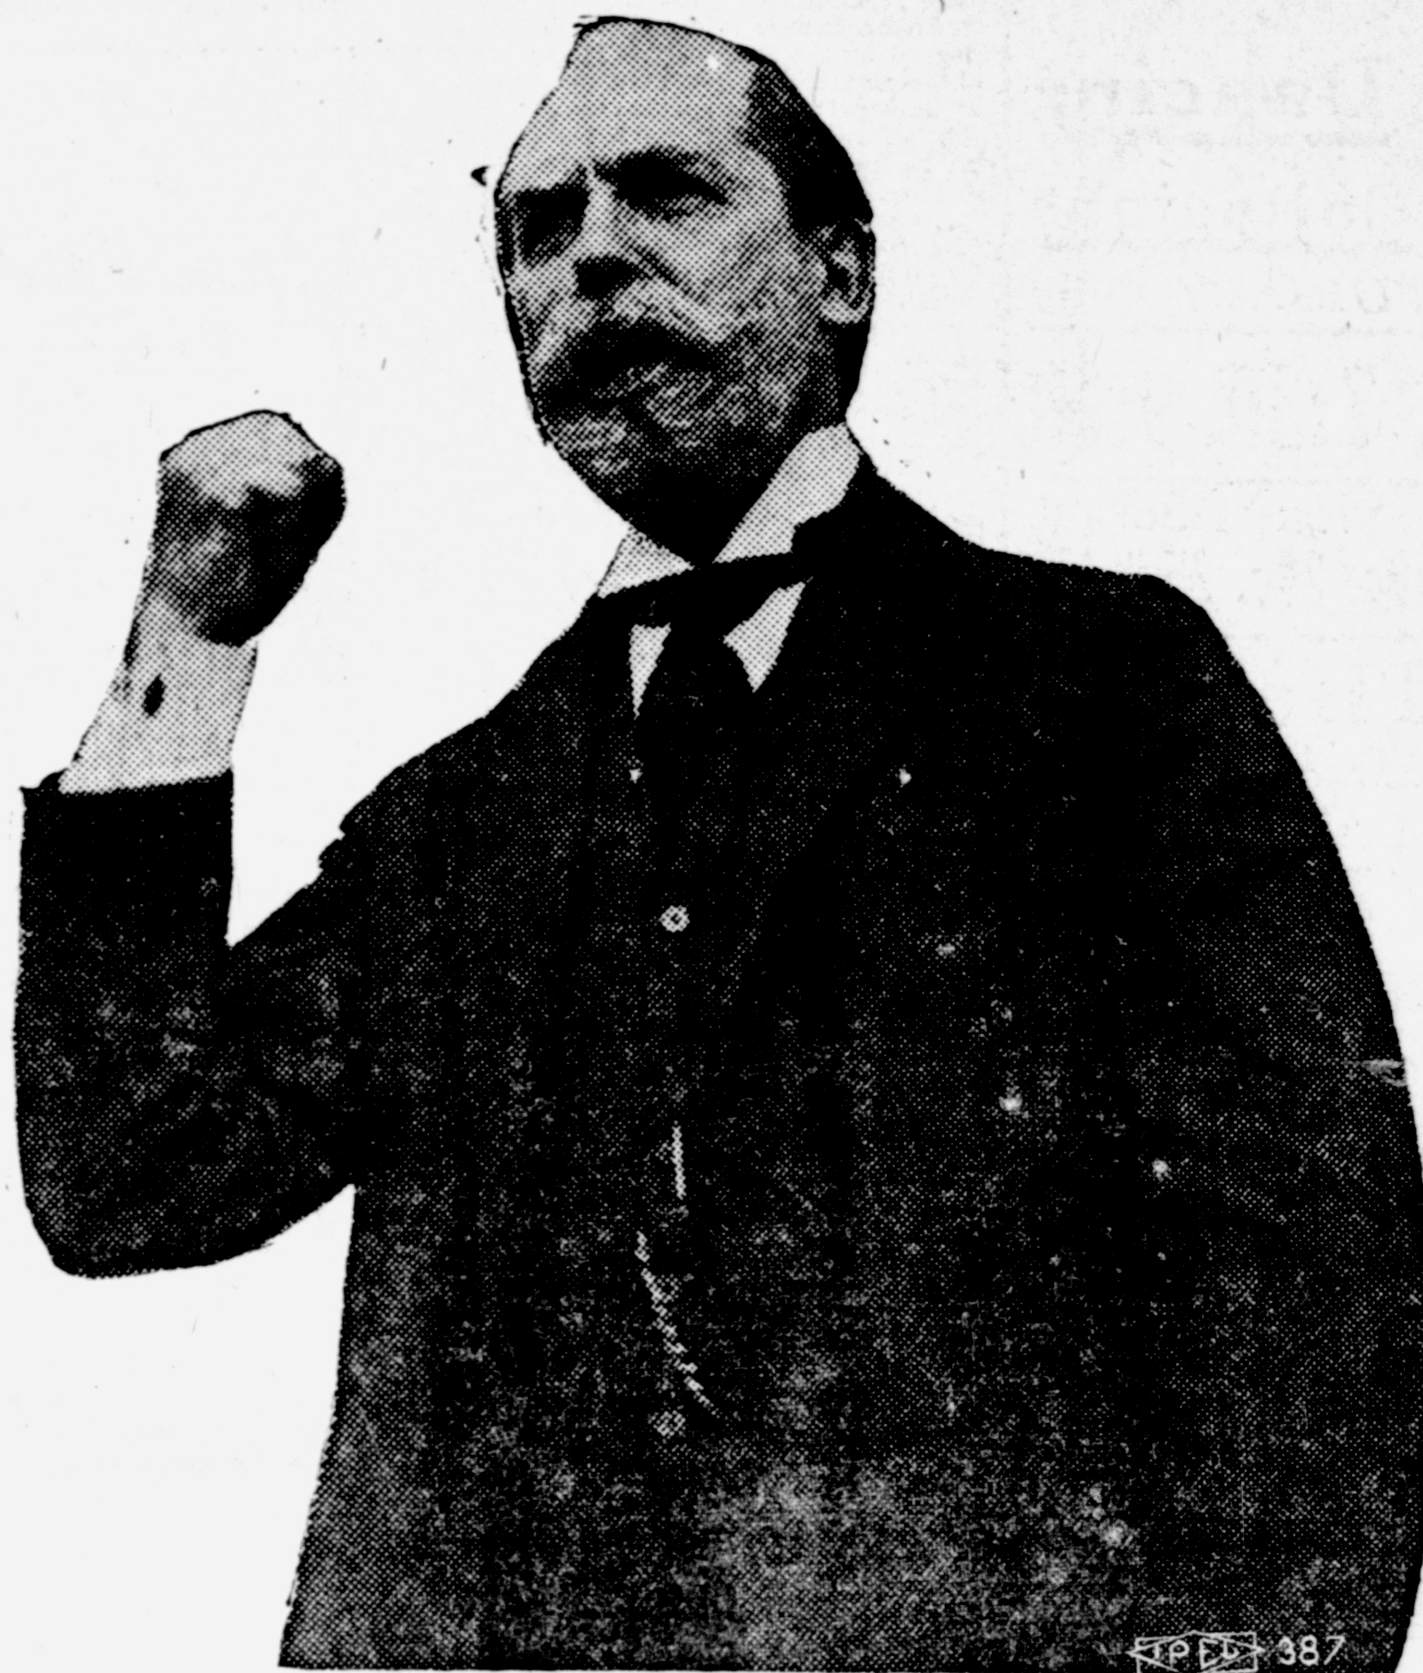

POSTOFFICE DESTROYED

ANTIGO, Wis., Nov. 3.—Sparks from a overheated chimney set fire to the village postoffice at Pelican Lake Tuesday night and everything but the postoffice records and a few household articles were destroyed. The loss is about $5,000.

What He Stands For

"YOU ask what road I propose to travel?

These are the milestones which mark it.

"An Executive responsible to the whole nation.

"A Cabinet chosen from the ablest Americans.

"A foreign policy that stands courteously but firmly for American rights.

"A flag that protects the American in his lawful rights wherever his legitimate business may take him.

"A preparation for trade competition which shall protect all groups of American workmen.

"A government oversight of business which will fearlessly eliminate abuses, but will act on the assumption that the average business man is honest.

"And finally a domestic policy which looks to industrial peace, and to sound and permanent prosperity based upon the development of American trade and the building up of American industries.

"We Americans are in one boat. You cannot strike a blow at one group without injury to all. Common justice and fair play will settle our difficulties if suspicion and bitterness are let alone. These are the principles by which I propose to be guided."

SHOOTING MYSTERIOUS BELOIT, Wis., Nov. 3.—Police, investigating the mysterious shooting of an unidentified man, about 28, found partly submerged in Rock river three miles up-stream, discovered evidence Friday indicating that the dead man had put up a terrific struggle before he was overcome and thrown into the river. He had been shot five times. Police say that their evidence thus far leads them to believe the murder was the result of several men seeking revenge on the dead man, believed by police to have conducted a gambling resort.

KEEWATIN STRIFE REACHES CLIMAX IN GENERAL RIOT

Six Professors Ousted and Many Students Threaten to Leave if They Are Not Reinstated

WAUKESHA, Wis., Nov. 3.—With six professors and a dozen students threatening to quit unless they are reinstated, Kewatin academy Friday was slowly recovering equilibrium, following several weeks of strife between teachers and school officials which reached its climax Wednesday night in a riot among students, teachers and officials.

President James Kendrick of the academy, declared that there is no doubt of the continuance of the school. He said Wednesday night's riot was "shameful" and denounced the action of the teachers' participation in it as "prompted by jealousy." As a result of the riot Professor F. J. Lefebvre of the English class was facing a police court hearing on a charge of assaulting James Buchanan, business director of the school. He was arrested on complaint of Buchanan.

The professors who are out as a result of the row are: Prof. E. J. Lefebvre, T. T. Chave, J. P. Cocayne, J.
P. Cook, P. Perez and M. K. Curtis.
The students who have announced their intention of quitting the school if the professors are not reinstated are: W. L. Park, Chicago, son of the vice president of the Illinois Central railroad; Adolph Marklin, Chicago; C. V. Brunner, Vienna, Austria; Kenneth Robertson, Eugene Goettinger, James Canova and Harthews, Dubuque; A. W. Grippus, Huntington, Ind.; Cecil Lenz, Mark Hen-

HIGHWAYMAN DIES FROM OWN WEAPON

RACINE, Wis., Nov. 3.—A lone highwayman, who refused to give his name before he died, was killed with his own revolver Thursday evening by two men whom he attempted to hold up. Steve Rondone and Leo Schlader were returning home about ten o'clock on a dark street, when the robber accosted them. The robber was going through the pockets of Schlader when Rondone grabbed him and wrested the revolver away.
The hold-up man broke from Rondone's grasp and started to run.
With the captured weapon Rondone fired four shots at him. One of the shots entered the fellow's back, but did not cause him to fall. He crawled in a yard several blocks away, where he lay down to die. The police found him there and removed him to the hospital. The man was conscious, but refused to give his name even when told that he was about to die, saying, "Oh, let me die in peace." The only identification mark was the word "Clancy" on his shirt, which evidently is the mark of some laundry.

BENSON CONTINUES EMBARGO CAMPAIGN

HUTCHINSON, Kas., Nov. 3.— Next spring the American people will be talking, not of a ten or fifteen cent loaf, but a twenty and twenty-five cent loaf of bread, declared Allan L. Benson, socialist candidate for president, here Thursday night. Unless an embargo is placed on food exports there will soon be a bread famine staring America in the face, Benson said.

Benson declared neither Hughes nor Wilson had attempted to discuss this "burning question of the hour."

Language.

Language has always followed the wake of trade, and Babel-like confusion has prevailed along channels wherein men and their marketable commodities flowed. The history of Europe during the nineteenth century shows that modern reconstruction of nationalities is based on language practically all the wars of this period are the outcome of three great constructive movements, which were the outward and visible signs of the progress of democratic ideals, and the delimitation of international frontiers is as necessary as the determination of administrative boundaries of city lines.

Occasionally the human race is run over the course of true love.

HUGHES BACKERS COVER MOST OF WILSON WAGERS

Most Striking Bet Offered Is $50
Even That Wilson Will Carry La Crosse
County

Wilson backers, whose money was flaunted untaken earlier in the week, on Friday were finding little difficulty in locating Hughes supporters with money to spend. There was still a small preponderance of democratic wagers offered, but the entire absence of Hughes coin which was noticeable a few days ago had disappeared.

Perhaps the most striking bet offered was one of $50, even money, that Wilson will carry La Crosse county. This was posted over the board at the S. & S. cigar store. On the same board were posted wagers of $25 each that Hughes will carry Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois.
There was also $75 offered even that Hughes will be elected.

There was also an offer of $100 even that Phillip will carry the state by 30,000, and it was said at the store that the Milwaukee man who posted the money was ready to increase it to $1,000 if it could be covered.

At the Bodega Annex it was said that the board had been cleaned Thursday. All the Wilson money was covered, it was said.

An out-of-town travelling man stopping at the Hotel Stoddard on Friday placed $1,000 in care of employees of the hotel, to be bet upon Woodrow Wilson. The bet is without odds. There are occasionally other small bets about the hotel.

Hughes Money Grabbed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Washingtonians are betting on Hughes and travelling men from the west and middle west are taking the bets. The odds for the most part are 10 to 9 on Hughes.

Wall Street on Hughes
NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Reports on betting odds varied widely Friday, with the Wall street waging more in Hughes favor than the uptown betting. Republicans reported that odds on Hughes were from 10 to 7 and 10 to 6 1/2 while democrats said the prevailing rate was 10 to 9 and 10 to 8 on Hughes. The amounts placed appeared to have fallen off, commissioners estimating only about $25,000 was bet Thursday.

VIRGINIA PEARSON IN "BLAZING LOVE" AT DOME THEATER

Virginia Pearson, stellar light of William Fox productions, appears in the leading role of "Blazing Love," a Kenean Buel production at the Dome theater Saturday. Frank Burback plays the part opposite Miss Pearson and the balance of the cast is a strong one. The story touches on the "eternal triangle." The direction is adequate and the story is handled in such a manner that it brings out the vital points of a difficult argument without offense. The scenes are prettily laid, there is a good laugh here and there, and the individual acting is highly clever.

"MIXER" PLANNED AFTER BIG GAME

A reception will be held at the Hixon Annex to the high school from eight to eleven o'clock tomorrow evening following the football game of the afternoon between Milwaukee Riverside and La Crosse high schools. The reception will take the form of an informal "mixer" to which members of both teams, students, parents, teachers and friends are invited. Music will be provided for dancing, and the Boys' Glee club will give several selections. In addition to which they are expected to put on several unique stunts.

party of friends at her home Tuesday evening. A dim smoky light was shed upon the scene from several Jack o' lanterns, there being no other light. Dancing and music were the amusements of the evening, a delightful portion of the musical portion of the entertainment being the vocal solos of Miss Georgina Storch companied by Mrs. Volkmann. Those present were the Misses Martha Hottinger, Emma and Martha Schultz, ning. There was twenty in the party, which gathered at the home of Miss Georgia Pease. Sixteenth and Jack-proceeding to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pynn at 523 South Sixth street,

BETHLEHEM SETS ANOTHER RECORD HIGH AT 678 MARK

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Gains of a point were made by many speculative leaders at the opening of the Stock exchange Friday.

United States Steel sold at 120 3/4 up 1-8; Marine preferred advanced one to 118 3/4; Baldwin Locomotive was up 2 at 87; American Locomotive one at 88; Crucible one at 94 and American Can gained a full point at 64. The market generally is more or less marking time pending the outcome of the election next week. Trading was not so brisk today.

Bethlehem Steel jumped 8 points to a new high record Friday afternoon at 678.

Utah Copper also hit a new high, selling at 113 1/2, up 4 1/2 points. Central Leather advanced to 99 1/2, a new record.

GAS PRICE ONLY WORRY ON MIND OF TEXAS FARMER

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 3.—The Texas farmer is worrying about just one thing—the price of gasoline.

Good crops, high prices and diversified farming have made him the most independent figure in the entire citizenry of the state. He's paid debts of years standing, has money in the bank, and can spend the rest of the winter testing his new flier and the county speed laws.

Cotton, of course, is the principal "money" crop. The farmer is getting an average of eighteen cents a pound now. A 500 pound bale yields him 500 pounds of lint and 1,500 pounds of seed which, with the cotton, totals about $127.50. Texas cotton is averaging good, per acre.

Baseball fans and elephants will be cheered by the information that Texas has about 200,000 acres of peanuts this year. But dealers will make their five cent sacks considerably smaller next spring if they hope to glean any profit after the farmer gets through raising the price.

There is also an enormous crop of pecans, which are bringing eighteen cents a pound.

Sorghum—first aid to buckwheat pancakes—is showing a profit of about $200 an acre. Rice growers have the biggest crop in history, and are getting the highest prices.

Alfalfa, corn, wheat and oats have gladdened the farmers' hearts. Alfalfa, especially, was harvested early and often, averaging three and four cuttings.

Sirloin steaks and veal chops on the hoof are the highest in years. Restaurant and hotel patrons would understand the diminishing size of a plate of "ham and" if they could see the returns drovers are receiving for the first half of that combination in its elemental state.

And turkeys—that's Texas' middle name. A million and a quarter is the estimate shippers place on the exportation north and east this year. Farmers are getting eighteen cents a pound for them. You'll pay from twenty-two to twenty-eight cents.

Yep, this is going to be a hard winter for the Texas farmer—if gasoline doesn't come down.

NATIONAL BANKS AGAIN SET MARK OF RESOURCES

Deposits $216,000,000 Greater Than on May 1, When Previous Record Was Set

$2,000,000,000 ABOVE 1915

Better Distribution of Money Indicated in Increases in Branch Reserve Banks

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The resources of the national banks of the United States have passed their own highest mark again—boosting the previous high record of May 1 by $216,000,000. Reports to the comptroller of the treasury, in response to the last bank call, show that resources September 12 totalled $14,411,000,000.

This is an increase of $485,000,000 over the June 30 report and of $2,144,000,000 over the September 1915 report. Total deposits were $11,362,000,000 which is $227,000,000 more than ever shown before. It is more than two billion dollars above the total of a year ago.

Indicating distribution of this money throughout the country, the comptroller's office said Friday the deposits in the central reserve banks show a reduction of $218,000,000 while in branch reserve cities there is an increase of $151,000,000 and in the country banks an increase of $24,000,000.

The fact proves the "healthy, progressive effect of the federal reserve act in decentralizing and distributing the money of the country," says the report.

The Socialist Candidate For President SAYS:—

BY ALLAN BENSON
The hour for action is about to strike!

Only a great vote for the socialist party on November 7 can prevent this nation from speeding on toward disaster.

The socialist party cannot win this year, but a great vote this year will enable it to win in 1920, and a great vote for the socialist party this year will reduce the cost of living at once, compel the repeal of the draft law, and stop our headlong rush toward militarism.

The steadily and rapidly increasing cost of living has become a great national peril.

If I were president of the United States at the present moment, and could accomplish my purpose in no other way, I would use the United States navy to blockade every American port through which food is being exported that the American people need.

I would not let a pound of food be shipped from this country so long as there were a hungry woman, a hungry child, or a hungry man in America.

It is a scandal and crime that the people of this country, having great abundance of food, are compelled to sit idly by while a few great speculators are stripping the country of its food and exporting it for their own private profit.

President Wilson knows what is going on, but does nothing about it. Mr. Hughes knows what is going on, but says nothing about it, nor does he criticize Mr. Wilson for doing nothing about it.

Both Mr. Wilson and Mr. Hughes represent the class that believes in stripping America of its food for the benefit of certain great members of that class.

If Mr. Wilson be re-elected, the stripping will go on, unless a great socialist vote shall warn him to call upon congress for an embargo upon food exports.

If Mr. Hughes be elected, nothing except a great socialist vote will cause him to call a halt.

A halt must be called or great disaster will speedily overtake this country!

Flour is now higher than it has been at any time since the civil war.

MRS. REDFIELD LEAVES HOMER GOES TO MONTANA

HOMER, Minn.—(Special.)—Mrs. C. R. Redfield shipped her household goods to Montana last week, where her husband is engaged in business and where Mrs. Redfield and children will join him later on. They left here Saturday evening for a few days' visit with Mrs. N. Cross in Winona, after which they will go to Moline, Ill., to spend some time with her mother and other relatives before leaving for their western home.

Local and Personal
Mrs. William Miller returned home Sunday from a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. Marion Miller at Richmond.

Mrs. Mike Boscup pleasantly entertained the Ladies' Aid society of La Moille together with some of her neighbors on Thursday afternoon. Halloween decorations were much in evidence.

Mrs. Elmina Taintor returned to her home here Tuesday evening from a visit with relatives at Money Creek.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence P. Robb are the parents of a baby girl, who arrived on Tuesday.

Miss Anna Hill came down from Winona the first of the week, to spend a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Hill.

The Halloween social given in the church on Tuesday evening by the Sunday school drew a large crowd.

After the supper was served the time was given over to various games and Halloween festivities. Mrs. G. N. Rogers won the prize for the home-liest pumpkin face, Robert McNally for pinning the donkey's tail, while blindfolded, Lyle Taintor for guessing the number of peanuts in a pint, and Mrs. D. W. Nash for guessing the number of seeds in a pumpkin. A "Hindoo fortune teller" told past, present and future much to the amusement of young and old. The church and tables were elaborately decorated with cornstalks, pumpkins, vegetables and fall flowers, while a large Jack o'lantern stood guard at the front entrance. Extreme costumes worn by some were much in evidence and contributed largely to the merriment of all present.

Mrs. Ed Calile, who has been away visiting relatives, returned home on Tuesday evening.

Angus Nowlan is spending the week near Ridgeway, where he is employed with the Gross corn shredding outfit.

A number from this locality went to Winona to see the production of "Civilization" at the opera house.

ROOMERS ROUTED BY FIRE

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Sixty roomers were roused from their beds and fled when a four story building at 2426 West Erie street caught fire early Friday. Firemen rescued three lodgers on the fourth floor whose escape was cut off. One fireman was burned but not dangerously. The loss was $2,000.

KEEPING US OUT OF WAR

The Republican party is advertising its reply to the Democratic claim that "Wilson has kept us out of war." The concluding sentence of that advertisement is an insulting blow at the intelligence of the American public. That sentence reads: "A NATION WHICH DOES NOT PROTECT ITS OWN CITIZENS HAS ALREADY BEGUN TO DIE."

This is TRUE, EVERLASTINGLY TRUE, and if EVERY PERSON WHO READS THAT ADVERTISEMENT REALIZED HOW TRUE AND HOW IMPORTANT IT IS, ALLEN L. BENSON WOULD BE OUR NEXT PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Thirty thousand workers have been killed and more than 400,000 injured in the mills, mines, factories and on the railroads of America during the last year. In every other nation that calls itself civilized there is some sort of protection for such citizens.

This nation gave them no protection when living and no recourse or assistance to their relatives when dead and wounded save the most ineffective and patchwork relief that may be gained through legal action.

The Socialist agrees that "a nation which does not protect its own citizens has already begun to die."

The Socialist party alone would protect the great mass of those citizens who are living here.

ALLAN L. BENSON

and it will be a great deal higher before next spring unless exports shall be prohibited.

Our wheat crop this year is short—if we keep it all, we will not have enough for ourselves.

We annually need 630,000,000 bushels. We have produced this year but 611,000,000 bushels.

Yet the astounding fact remains that American exporters have already

HUMANITY—AND YOUR VOTE

By HENRY FORD

IN this great crisis of our country I am more interested in measures than in men, I am not interested in parties at all. But measures can only be put into force through the men in office. We must therefore make a choice of the man and men who will put the measures in force.

In the first place we should guard against Wall Street influences again securing the control of our government. They have been rooted out during the last four years, and they are working hard to get back.

The eight-hour day should be extended to all our industries where possible. Women should be given the rights which in justice belong to them. For years the argument has had some force with me that women should be discouraged from working in factories and stores, and hence, they have been discriminated against in wages, but I have slowly come to the settled conviction that this practice has been unfair because equal work deserves equal pay. Hence, all women in our employment who do equal work shall receive equal pay.

I regard war as the greatest curse of mankind—that it has done more to retard the progress of the race and its material well-being than any other single cause. We want to see war abolished and we believe it can be done, and we must try to choose the man for the head of our nation who will do the most for these ends.

ALTHOUGH NOMINALLY A REPUBLICAN ALL MY LIFE, I AM FOR WILSON, AND URGE MY FELLOW CITIZENS TO STAND FOR HIM, BECAUSE OF HIS POSITION ON THESE AND OTHER GREAT QUESTIONS, BECAUSE HE HAS KEPT US OUT OF WAR AND HAS DONE MUCH TO BRING ABOUT THE REMARKABLE PROSPERITY WHICH WE ENJOY, AND BECAUSE WALL STREET IS AGAINST HIM.

He is entitled to be rewarded for his great service to mankind, and the only way we can reward him is by giving him the opportunity to be of still greater service.

The greatest reward for doing a good thing is the privilege to do more, that is why Mr. Wilson wants to be re-elected; in other words, to be paid for what he has done by the privilege of doing more.

I have much admiration for Mr. Hughes personally, but he is surrounded, influenced and advised by nearly all the evil influences of selfishness and greed which I feel have retarded our progress for so long. I fear his election would restore the old crowd to power and put back the cause of humanity for fifty years.

In my mind, the most undesirable citizen in the world is the man who will buy another man's vote, and the next most undesirable is the man who will sell his vote—because he not only injures himself and his family, but the community at large.

I AM FOR MR. WILSON BECAUSE WITH A WORLD AT WAR HE HAS KEPT US OUT OF WAR. ALL OTHER GREAT NATIONS ARE BEING CONSUMED AND DESTROYED, BUT WE HAVE PEACE WITH HONOR, AND OUR BOYS ARE AT HOME. SPECIAL INTERESTS ARE DEMANDING WAR AND THE PRESIDENT IS BEING CRITICIZED WITH MANY WORDS, BUT STRIPPED OF ALL UNNECESSARY WORDS THEIR REAL COMPLAINT IS THAT HE HAS NOT PLUNGED THE COUNTRY INTO WAR FOR THEIR PROFIT.

There has been much talk of the attitude of the so-called "hyphenates." To my mind these are merely sentimental Americans, men and women, who, like myself, have a feeling of love for the place of their birth. My observation has shown that among the best of Americans are these citizens.

To all these let me say: I know from many conversations with Mr. Wilson his absolute neutrality among all the nations at war, his intense devotion to peace, his deep desire to serve all the peoples of all those countries impartially. Any single act apparently against any one of these countries, is made only in pursuance of his duty as president of the United States and his duty to mankind.

I know positively he bears no ill will to Germany or to England, or France, or Austria, or any of those countries at war, but he does understand and is opposing that invisible government, that unseen hand which caused this war. I believe those same selfish forces that caused the war are opposing the president's re-election.

I AM FOR WILSON because he caused to be passed a large number of wise and humane laws, most of which had been promised by the politicians of both parties for many years without fulfillment.

No one class has been favored, no one disregarded. He has served the United States as a whole.

Among these laws are:
THE FEDERAL RESERVE LAW, which wrested from Wall Street its monopoly of finance, released credit, forbade usury and dispelled the fear of money panics which hung over every business. It has done away with the concentration of money in the hands of a few men in Wall Street, and distributed it among twelve government controlled reserve banks throughout the country. The passage of this law alone, from the viewpoint of the honest business man, should entitle Woodrow Wilson to re-election.

THE EIGHT-HOUR LAW—The eight-hour day issue has suddenly sprung into great prominence.

I say to you from experience and not from guess work, that the eight-hour day will help both employers and employees. We have had the eight-hour day in force in the Ford factory for nearly three years and it has been a complete success from every point of view.

I AM FOR WILSON because he favors the eight-hour day. The president has declared that he is in favor of the eight-hour day in all kinds of business, except a very few in which it is impracticable, as for instance, farming.

The president has been criticized for the passage of the Adamson eight-hour law, which applies to railroads, but that law averted the wholesale ruin which a universal railway strike would have brought. A strike had been ordered. It meant the closing of factories, violence and the enforced idleness of millions of persons and the loss of millions of dollars. Neither side to the struggle took into consideration the one hundred million people who would have to bear the burden. Every business man in the country was trembling with fear. The president acted as the representative of all the people and the strike was prevented and the principle of an eight-hour day endorsed. Seventy-four republican congressmen voted for the bill and no word of protest came from the republican candidate, although the law was under consideration for several days.

Mr. Wilson showed great wisdom and courage in preventing this strike, which would have paralyzed the nation.

The commission which has been appointed to study the effect of this law will, I hope, report that with increased efficiency the railroads will not need higher rates. But in any case this action is, I believe and hope, the first step towards the government ownership and operation of railroads.

THE RURAL CREDITS LAW, under which the farmer is enabled to borrow long time loans on small payments, at low rates of interest; and it promises an annual saving of $150,000,000 to farmers who were formerly the hopeless victims of loan sharks. These rural credit banks are now being established by the commission in various parts of the country.

THE CHILD LABOR LAW, which prevents employment of young children in factories and stops the coming of dividends out of the lives of little children. There is no factory and no institution that can possibly give any care equal to a mother's care.

A WISE WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW, providing compensation to those injured while in the service of the government, which measure will lead to "safety first."

THE LAW CREATING THE NON-PARTISAN TARIFF COMMISSION, which will go into effect very soon, and which has taken the tariff out of politics and placed it in the hands of a commission of different parties, so that tariffs can be altered as conditions change.

THE GOOD ROADS LAW, which provides $75,000,000 for improving highways throughout the United States under adequate safeguards, which will facilitate transportation. This will help the country feed the city.

The farmer will be greatly benefited by not being compelled to waste his energies on bad roads. Fruits and vegetables today are rotting on the farms from lack of good roads.

THE INCOME TAX LAW AND THE INHERITANCE TAX LAW, which readjust the burdens of taxation, compelling the wealthy to bear a fair share of the load which has hitherto rested all too heavily on the backs of the poor.

THE AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION LAW, which provides an annual appropriation for the direct education of the farmer, in order that the farms of the land may be worked with greater efficiency and upon a sound and scientific basis and produce larger crops for the benefit of all our people.

THE ALASKAN RAILWAY LAW, which provided a railroad built and operated by the government, and which has opened up the resources of that great territory in the interests of the PEOPLE, not for the benefit of the few.

THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION LAW, which creates a non-partisan board to arbitrate commercial disputes, to prevent unfair competition and to stand as a barrier between the consumer and extortion.

THE GRAIN ANTI-GAMBLING LAW, which provides better grain storage facilities, and enables the farmer to obtain certificates on which loans may be secured. He is thus enabled to borrow on the products of his labor—and is not compelled to sell during unfavorable times.

THE SAFETY-AT-SEA LAW, through the passage of which ships now carry more life-saving equipment, and the general living conditions of sailors at sea have been improved.

THE COTTON FUTURES LAW, which prevents gambling in cotton in stock exchanges and establishes standards for cotton. I hope the president will find some way to pass a law to prevent all speculation in stocks.

THE CLAYTON ANTI-TRUST LAW, which does away with interlocking directorates, prevents railway looting, ends the abuse of the injunction, and declares the great truth that a "Man's labor is not a commodity but a part of his life."

THE ABOVE RECORD OF PROGRESSIVE LEGISLATION in the interest of all the people and not of the few, far exceeds any ever before known in our history.

THOMAS A. EDISON SAYS THAT PRESIDENT WILSON AND HIS COLLEAGUES IN CONGRESS, BOTH DEMOCRATS AND REPUBLICANS, HAVE ENACTED MORE LAWS FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE INDUSTRIOUS PEOPLE IN THE PAST THREE YEARS THAN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY HAS IN ALL THE TIME IT WAS IN POWER; and it is because of these laws and his leadership in the interests of all the people that the president is being fought by the special interests, by every master of Wall Street, every monopolist, every munition maker, every man with a special interest to serve. No business man should oppose Wilson because Wilson is the greatest friend honest business ever had in the White House.

GREAT PROSPERITY COVERS THE LAND AS NEVER BEFORE. LEGITIMATE ENTERPRISE IS ASSURED A PROPER REWARD. THERE ARE NO BREAD LINES, AND EVERYBODY IS EMPLOYED THAT WANTS TO BE. OUR PEOPLE ARE CONTENTED, PROSPEROUS AND HAPPY. WHY SHOULD WE MAKE A CHANGE?

In order to carry out his work President Wilson will need the co-operation of a congress thoroughly in accord with his own far-seeing policy. It is our plain duty as voters to send back to congress the right men, irrespective of party, to assist the president in the great tasks that face him.

SENATOR ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE stands for these principles and merits a continuance of the confidence of his people.

NEW PUZZLE RAISED IF ARMED DIVER IS DEUTSCHLAND AIDE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Washington officials were somewhat puzzled Saturday as to the status of the Deutschland, which reports that the U-boat will be conveyed back to Germany by a fighting submarine prove correct. It was reported the U-57, sister ship of the U-53, would accompany the Deutschland.

Belief was expressed in some quarters that if the two submarines should act in concert, it would greatly strengthen the British contention that submarines are always to be held in suspicion as vessels of warlike character. There was no doubt, it was said, that the British would hold the joining of the submarines to be prima facie evidence of warlike intention. The unarmed U-boats, it was pointed out, posing as a peaceful merchantman, could, through her ability to escape detection, give valuable assistance to the war submarine.

Should further sinking of British vessels occur off the New England coast at a time when it was known that the Deutschland with an armed convoy was in the vicinity, a real issue might be precipitated between the United States and Great Britain regarding the admission of submarines to neutral waters, it was feared.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 4.—A huge submarine, believed to be a German of U-53 type, is lying off the Virginia capes, according to Capt. H. Hirsch of the Norwegian freighter Osterhal, which arrived from Cardiff, Wales.

Ship brokers believe that the submarine may have conveyed the Deutschland to New London.

German Embassy Agrees
The German embassy declaring it has no knowledge of the purpose to furnish a fighting submarine convoy for the merchant submarine Deutschland on her return trip, agreed that such a convoy would take away the Deutschland's status as a peaceful merchantman. This is a well recognized principle of international law, officials at the embassy said.

SCOFIELD DINED ON ANNIVERSARY OF BUSINESS LIFE

In honor of the twentieth anniversary of Mr. F. H. Scofield's business connection with the New York Life company, L. J. Killian, for sixteen years associated with Mr. Scofield, tendered the latter a dinner last evening at his residence, 1407 Ferry street.

Out of town guests were George O. McDougall, Racine, Mrs. Killian's father, J. C. Cook, Reedstown, A. J. Inglis, Ellsworth, and O. F. Immel, Blair. With the exception of Mr. McDougall the guests are all associates of Mr. Scofield.

There were seven courses, made agreeable by surroundings of carnations and chrysanthemums, and the guest of honor was presented with a mahogany writing set. The affair was a "surprise," and Mr. Scofield threatened to retaliate upon the occasion of Mr. Killian's twentieth, four years hence.

FORMER INTERNE HERE HEAD OF NEW STATE LABORATORY

Dr. F. M. Harris, formerly of La Crosse, has been appointed to take charge of the second co-operative laboratory organized through the agency of the state board of health at Fond du lac. Dr. Harris has just taken charge of the work.

Dr. Harris was an interne in the Lutheran hospital for a year, leaving La Crosse for Fond du Lac in July. He is a graduate of Rush medical college.

The new laboratory is equipped for and will be operated as a public health laboratory. The rules governing it require that precedence must always be given to public health work. Such work in the city and the immediate vicinity is done without charge as part of the laboratory's general public health activities.

CROSS, FEVERISH CHILD IS BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated give "California Syrup of Figs."

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomachache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

PRESIDENTIAL BETTING
A QUARTER OF MILLION

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Presidential betting broke all records here Friday, according to reports in the financial districts. A quarter of a million dollars was the estimate of the day's bets, placed in most instances at odds of 10 to 7 on Hughes.

Wilson's attack on Wall street caused such bitter discussion on the Stock exchange floor that several traders were reported to have left the floor to avoid breaking exchange rules by indulging in physical combat with verbal opponents.

SAYS TEXAS IS REPUBLICAN

PARIS, Texas, Nov. 4.—Phil E.
Baer, chairman of the republican state committee, received an inquiry from a Chicago newspaper as to how Texas would go in the presidential election. Believing so ingenious question deserved an ingenious reply, he replied:

"Republican."

VOTING A MATTER OF CONSCIENCE

We have fairly demonstrated that in matters of personality and upon the basis of past performances both Woodrow Wilson and Charles Evans Hughes are entitled to public confidence. We have, we believe, eliminated the war in Europe as a valid issue.

Mexico presents itself. Perhaps Colonel Roosevelt fairly presented the issue in his Battle Creek address, when he said:

"President Wilson by his policy of tame submission to insult and injury... has invited the murder of our men, women and children by Mexican bandits."

During Roosevelt's term as president nine Americans were murdered by bandits in the state of Sonora, Mexico. Outrages and property destruction occurred at other places. From Cananea, on came the following message:

"Send assistance immediately to Cananea, Sonora. American citizens are being murdered and property is being dynamited, and we must have help. Answer Naco, Arizona, immediately. (Signed) W. J. Galbraith."

Other than to take the subject up with the American ambassador in Mexico City, President Roosevelt did nothing, and relief was finally secured through the efforts of a body of American private citizens who crossed the border.

The trouble continued throughout President Taft's administration. The Hearst and other papers now assailing Wilson, then attacked President Taft as "a laggard and chicken-hearted president" under whose administration "one hundred or more Americans have been slain". The actual number under Taft, according to government records, was fifty-six, somewhat less than the number of deaths under Wilson.

Answering the demand for intervention, Senator Elihu Root said to apply force would be "to reverse the policy of the United States and take a step backward in the path of civilization." President Taft, whose policy President Wilson has but continued, referred to what Wilson called "watchful waiting" as "patient non-intervention", and stoutly declined to intervene, although American consulates were stoned and many Americans were killed, or wounded when Douglas, Arizona, and El Paso, Texas, came under fire of Mexican battles. In a letter to his chief of staff, President Taft wrote:

"The assumption by the press that I contemplate intervention on Mexican soil to protect American lives or property, is of course gratuitous."

Replying to a demand by the governor of Arizona that he apply force to the situation, President Taft said:

"The situation might justify me in ordering our troops across the border, but if I take this step I must face the possibility of greater resistance and greater bloodshed. I cannot therefore, order the troops across the border."

This would seem to be enough to dispose of the Mexican situation as a political issue. Rather it is a grave problem of the American people. In general America's policy, right or wrong, is shared by the leaders of both parties.

We come now to domestic matters. Let us dispose of the tariff by the record. Both parties demanded a tariff board to "take the tariff out of politics". Such a board has been authorized by act of congress. That party which wins the election is in honor bound to give it a trial. There is nothing to contend for excepting the privilege of naming the commissioners, and that is hardly entitled to become a presidential issue.

A large legislative program, progressive in type, has been enacted. Many republicans joined with the democrats in its support, but it is essentially the work of President Wilson. It includes workmen's compensation, child labor and eight-hour legislation, a new national bank system, rural credit banking, the federal trade commission and income taxation. This legislation promises much, and while it has been little tested, it deserves a fair trial. Perhaps its best recommendation is that it has not been generally attacked, although two features of the program have come in for some republican criticism. Probably the next president, no matter of what party, will let it stand and seek to develop and improve it.

Where, then, is the issue? Nowhere does there seem to be a political divergence any more impressive than the difference between "watchful waiting" and "patient non-intervention".

There are, perhaps, two valid issues. There is a demand in the land for economical administration. It must be confessed that the Wilson administration, no more than its predecessors, was deaf to the appeal of "pork". The republican demand for a national budget seems to give promise of a change, and there are many citizens who see in Mr. Hughes the exact type of man who could and would effectuate a scheme for national economy and efficiency.

There is an issue in the merchant marine demands of the parties. The republicans favor shipping developed as private enterprise, which means some form of subsidy; the democrats want a merchant marine developed under at least temporary government ownership, but oppose subsidies. Here is a direct issue of considerable importance. The war has made plain the necessity of a commercial fleet to the nation's business security. However, the middle west, the admitted battle ground of the election, never friendly to the subsidy idea nor fully awake to the value of a merchant marine, will hardly accept that enterprise as a basis for changing administrations.

The situation is extremely perplexing to the progressive republican. He wants action on progressive laws. He and his fellows conceived the progressive program and worked it up in the states.
The progressive idea has made little progress in democratic states.
The work done in the states, the progressive republicans took the fight to Washington, and there the little coterie of patriots who surrounded La Follette have fought their way up the hill, facing heavy obstacles, often almost effaced, but never discouraged, never whipped. It has been the faith and hope of the progressive republican that through the republican party the great progressive scheme of government would be worked out to its fruition and that principles that have survived only by the efforts of his kind would become the lasting tenets of the republican party.

The work of the progressives in congress has been hampered by lack of executive influence, and in every recent national convention of the republican party they have sought to compel the nomination of a progressive republican for president. In that they failed until 1916. In the convention of that year the "old guard", driven by conditions they dared not ignore, permitted the nomination of a progressive republican. He was not first choice of the western progressives, but he had a fine record and a strong personality. Charles Evans Hughes measured up to the job. His life and character invited progressive support, and the campaign began with genuine spirit.

Then came the awakening. The campaign didn't "go" as it should with so exceptional a candidate. Mr. Hughes failed to make a deep impression. The reason was not far to seek. The man was all right, his heart was good. But there was no issue. His picture of a nation "four-square to the world" left no conviction that President Wilson had failed in his international diplomacy. He couldn't shake the feeling that the president had been wise and generous, as a big man to a neglected child, in relation to Mexico.
Anyway, his policy had not differed radically from those of Roosevelt and Taft. In the progressive mind the tariff commission had taken the tariff out of politics, as progressives had said it must and should. Every day of the campaign emphasized the practical invulnerability of the president's domestic legislation, incorporating as it does a majority of the essential things in the progressive platform of 1912. Hughes was all right—the man was all right. But so was the president.

There is no doubt that these considerations have caused a big swing to President Wilson—perhaps enough to elect him.
That depends much upon the progressive decision as to the right course. Is it to the republican, or to the democratic party that the future of the progressive cause can most safely be trusted?
Wilson has kept the faith, he has won the confidence of the people. But to Wilson remain but four years more of service, and without him, what of his party? There is Bryan, but Bryan can not be elected. Shall the destiny of progressivism be left to the democratic party, with its majority in states that are only awakening to the meaning of popular government?—or to the republican party, whose majority lies in states that created the progressive cause?

The democrats' answer—and it must be remembered that in many republican states the democratic minority is strongly progressive—is that the democratic party controls its reactionaries, while the republican party is controlled by them. This is true in part as to the republican party, it is wholly true of the democratic party under Wilson.

THE TRIBUNE is deeply interested in progressive principles.
It is interested in parties only as parties effectuate these principles. It regards it as vastly important that in this election the choice of parties shall be a wise choice, but it does not arrogate to itself the wisdom of choosing for others. This paper, all will concede, has never hesitated to take a stand where its convictions were settled. Could we but read the future, the choice would be easy, but that we can not do. As individuals we can only take—and extend to others—the advice of Senator La Follette when asked about the presidential election. In any emergency it is sound advice. Senator La Follette said:

"Leave it to your conscience and your God."

A WORD TO FRIENDS OF JOHN J. ESCH

We are not, we believe, too prone to take for granted the re-election of Hon. John J. Esch to his seat in congress. We believe it is one of the most dependable election forecasts. But that should not deter those who believe in the value of his service and influence from taking especial pains to vote for him.

Mr. Esch has won a high place in the counsels of the nation and a position of immense influence. Should the republicans organize the house he would become chairman of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce, of which he is the ranking member. That would be no small honor to La Crosse and to the district.

But honor is really less important than service, and people will prefer to measure Mr. Esch by his work. We have not agreed with him in all things, in some instances we have pointedly disagreed with him. We may do so in the future. But we have not, nor do we expect to find the public official with whom we are always in accord, nor do we lack the modesty to admit that, where we fall out, Mr. Esch is not necessarily in the wrong. The important thing is that the representation of Mr. Esch, taken in the broad view, has been ably and industriously devoted to the interests of his district. The splendid contribution to the cause of humanity incorporated in the comprehensive legislative scheme to prevent deaths by accident, of which he is the author, is alone sufficient to justify Mr. Esch's retention in congress.

WHAT OUR COUNTY OFFICIALS STAND FOR

It is apparent that a considerable number of republican voters in La Crosse county are going to vote for President Wilson on national issues, or the lack of them. Others are going to vote for Burt Williams for governor, owing to dissatisfaction with the administration of Governor Philipp. But this does not mean that these republicans have permanently forsaken their party, and to such of them as hold their republicanism in reserve we beg leave to offer a suggestion:

Split your ticket. Vote for your republican county ticket. We are inclined to make an exception in case of the exceptionally efficient democratic county clerk, Bert Jolivet, whose experience renders him more valuable than any new man could become excepting by long service. We have a splendid force of intelligent county officials, and we should keep them on the merit system.

However, there is a political reason why republicans should stand by the county ticket. Party organization depends upon a working nucleus. There must be a group of active men, always on the job, about whom the party gathers for concerted action.
In the county this group is made up of the county officials, and they are the most essential of party units. It is probably true that the influence of the county officials of the United States, in state and national elections, is greater than the combined influence of the national and state central committees.

No matter what republicans think of the presidential issues, they should by all means preserve the root of the republican organization—the county ticket.

"I have never been divorced," grunted Harkness.

"Nor I," said Van Tuyl. "Then there is Vera and Sammy, a complete couple, so far. Nelly and Ricky, Maude and Tommy—"

"I am a complete couple with Mr.
Von Loben Sels," said Mrs. Von Loben Sels gently. "Shall I send for him? I can't leave, you know, on account of Steffie. He needs his mother to push his claims."

"Educate auntie," suggested Appleby again.

"No, sir," cried Van Tuyl, "not when we may lose forty millions doing it."

"No," seconded Harkness. "When she found how easy divorce is, she would get married for the experience, and divorced for the relief."

"Relief? From whom, pray?"
Maude's icy accents cleaved the atmosphere.

Nelly slipped from the room indifferent to what followed and to the forty millions. When all one's thoughts are occupied with the miserable numb sickness of finding that one's love is not what one thought him, how can one think of forty millions? Forty millions—kisses? Yes, ah, yes, forty times forty millions.
But mere dollars, mere round senseless metal? No, no! Nothing doing.

The evening was calm and beautiful. The sun had set and the last flicker of daylight had turned into the pale dusk of night. Over the treetops a star shone like a beacon of hope. Nelly paused on the porch steps and even in her misery thought to whisper softly:

"Star light,
Star bright,
First star I've seen tonight,
I wish I may,
I wish I might,
Have the wish I wish tonight."

Three times she repeated it as the formula commands, and then with renewed hope, for she knew not what, her only wish having been a vague one, inclusive, that all would yet be well, she ran lightly down the steps and the path to the sweet seclusion of the flower garden.

The twilight died and the darkness deepened as she mused, curled up on the rustic bench by the sundial. The stars multiplied overhead and a breeze whispering in the tree-tops and bringing sweet, un-namable spring odors from the fields and hedge rows. Once the small gate clicked and a couple came slowly down the walk, indistinguishable in the darkness, save that one was a woman in clinging white and the other a man. They hesitated a moment on finding their retreat occupied then passed on and out of the farther gate. Nelly watched them, indifferent as to their identity, envious of their apparent equality. They could love each other and take pride in the love, for one was not forced to stoop. Then she flushed in the darkness for her own miserable snobbery and knew at the same time that she could not help it. Small refinements, little courtesies, superficial perhaps in the grim realities of life, yet they made up her world and were as much a part of her as her hair, her eyes, her delicate white hands. Though her heart cried out in an agony of denial, she knew that in the end, when put to the test, she would never have to present Mrs.

Rubenstein to her friends as her mother-in-law.

Once more the gate opened and some one came down the walk, a man, alone, tall and thin. In the darkness, able only to see his vague outline, yet she knew him. Her heart seemed to stop. She told herself fiercely that he was not the man she had thought him, he was not just, that she should be disgusted with him for having one law for one and another law for another, that she was disgusted, and all the time her lips twitched with an uncontrollable desire to smile her glad foolish welcome. Slowly he came down the walk and she watched him, watched his well-shaped head, his broad shoulders, his long graceful stride.
Then suddenly he saw her white dress. He hesitated as though about to retreat, but finally came forward.
She turned her head as he approached and would not look at him as she strove to control her mutinous lips.

"Nelly."

"He stood before her, looking down on her one hand in his pocket. She tried not to meet his eyes, but in spite of herself, she raised her head and faced him. For a moment they stared at each other, temples throbb-ing, hearts beating. Then his hands were on her shoulders, he had dragged her roughly, fiercely, to her feet and his arms were around her, crushing her to him.

"Nelly, Nelly," he whispered and could find words to say no more, he who swayed crowds by the eloquence of his glib tongue, by the fire of his rushing voice.

Nelly's arms were around his neck and in the relief from the long strain of trying to be disgusted with him, she swept in ecstatic joy on the breast of his workman's flannel blouse; he,
the fourth assistant gardener, she the niece of Miss Appleby and her forty millions.

DITTMAN RIDDLES PHILIPP ECONOMY WITH THE FIGURES

Shoots Broadside of Statistics in Concordia Hall to Show That La Crosse Taxes Are Up

MAYOR SEES OLD ISSUE

Whether Men or Money Shall Rule Is Stake in the Campaign Says Bentley

Claims of Governor Philipp that he has saved money for La Crosse county in the two years of his regime were vigorously denied Thursday evening at Concordia hall by C. A. Dittman, at a good-sized democratic rally which was also addressed by Mayor Bentley.

Shoots Him With Figures
Mr. Dittman shot a broadside of figures at the governor's camp, showing that after the first year of Philipp rule La Crosse county taxes went up $40,000, and that in this, the second year of the Philipp administration, an increase of about $11,000 is already predicted by the state tax apportionment.

Mr. Dittman exposed the alleged duplicity by which the highway aid fund was cut out of the state tax levy, so that the burden of good road improvement falls upon the county, instead of the state paying a third of the cost, as during progressive administrations. The state highway aid will be $19,500 less than the state's proper share of road improvements in La Crosse county for 1916. Mr. Dittman said, reading from the official figures. This amount, he said, must be made up by the county, and he declared it more than offsets the $8,000 tax decrease claimed by Governor Philipp when he spoke recently at Concordia hall.

Exposed by Own Party
"I don't really need to tell you much about the governor," said Mr. Dittman. "He has been exposed so completely by his own party in the primary campaign that it leaves little for me to tell. But I would call your attention again to a few of the charges made against him, which he has never been able to deny."

Mr. Dittman then went over the Philipp failure to reduce commissions as promised, his attempt to emasculate the compensation act, and his removal of Emory to place Weigle at the head of the state pure food bureau. Mr. Dittman also alleged that he had handed the railroad commission over to the corporations, citing the appointments of Walter Alexander, lifelong railroad employee, and Carl D. Jackson, water-power attorney. He read the famous "My Dear Maxey" letter, in which Jackson advised an Antigo gas company how to proceed to get around the complaint of a widow named Emily Bolt.

There was repeated applause during Mr. Dittman's speech, his mention of national issues and ringing endorsement of President Wilson especially evoking enthusiasm.

Mayor Bentley, in his speech, took a different line than most of the campaign speeches of the year, ignoring the immediate issues of the year for what he declared to be the great fundamental question at the bottom of this campaign as well as all others.

Issue Money vs. Men
"The question which this nation must solve," declared the mayor, "is whether man or money shall rule. It is at the bottom of this fight, and it is the basic issue upon which the future of this great country depends. The old guard which is behind Mr. Hughes is the same old guard of plutocracy that has controlled the republican party, if we dare to say, from the day of its birth. And the record of our party, the record of the Wilson administration, is a record enacted in the interests of the plain people."

BUILD UP YOUR BLOOD

It is a hopeless task to try to restore your health while your blood is deficient in quantity or quality. The blood circulates throughout every portion of the body except the hair and nails. It takes the nourishment from the food and distributes it to the various muscles and organs; it takes also any medication that is administered through the mouth. The blood is the only means by which medicine can reach the nerves. If the blood is thin its carrying capacity is lessened because it is the red corpuscles in the blood that carry oxygen and other needed constituents to the various parts of the body. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People increase the red corpuscles in the blood. They enable it to absorb more oxygen, to carry more life and strength to the weakened organs. In any disease in which the patient becomes thin and pale Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be used successfully to combat the anemia and build up the health and strength.

"Building Up the Blood" is a booklet, full of good information. Every mother and every growing girl should have one. It is sent free on request by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Price 60 cents.

FIRE DESTROYS BAKING PLANT AT M'GREGOR

M'GREGOR, Iowa.—(Special.)—The bakery building of the Bickel Baking company of McGregor burned Thursday night the fire starting about half past seven. The cause of the fire is unknown. The building is practically a total loss. Machinery and supplies are badly damaged. The loss is estimated between $4,000 and $5,000 which is partially covered by insurance. Flour to the value of $2,500 stored in a warehouse some distance from the bakery was out of the reach of the flames.

The Bickel company has made arrangements with a Dubuque Baking company to ship bakery goods here for local trade and for reshipment to customers in other towns. As soon as the loss is adjusted definite arrangements for rebuilding will be made. The Bickel company consisting of John D. Bickel and son Karl D. Bickel is one of the largest business concerns in McGregor, shipping bread over a territory one hundred fifty miles in radius.

Golden Wedding
Mr. and Mrs. William H. Oelke celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home near Farmersburg on Thursday. The family is one of the old prominent families of the country near McGregor and the event was one of much interest. Of added interest was the fact that it was the first reunion of the family in twenty-four years. There were present eight children, fourteen grandchildren, two brothers and a sister of Mr. Oelke and the one living sister of Mrs. Oelke besides a number of cousins. The children gave the father a gold headed cane and the mother a gold-headed umbrella engraved in German.

Local and Personal
The many friends of Clayton Nelson are proud of the news that he has been elected president of the Freshman class at Upper Iowa university. Clayton graduated from the McGregor high school last June and entered Upper Iowa university in September. He has also been chosen assistant master of boy scouts.

The chorus choir of the Congregational church gave a Halloween party in the church parlors. On the same evening a large gathering of young people was entertained at the Methodist church by the Epworth league.

The State bank has been in the hands of decorators for several weeks. A new steam heating plant has also been installed.

Two young men from St. Paul with a fine launch and camping outfit landed in McGregor yesterday broke and sold their outfit to C. M. Brooks for $50.

Mrs. John Hartwick and Mrs. Peddicord are in Minneapolis this week representing the local church at a Methodist conference.

Mrs. W. F. Huntington of Vancouver, B. C., and Mrs. O. Burdick of Chicago are in town the guests of Mrs. W. F. Daubenberger.

Clifford Oleson, a student at the Davenport School of Aviation has been home for a short visit before going to New Orleans where the school will establish winter quarters.

The river has been rising at this point for a week and is now five feet above low water stage. Fishing continues very good. Commercial fishermen have had one of the best seasons ever known in this vicinity and are making good hauls now. One party made a two days' catch which they sold for $100.50; another secured in one day, fish to the value of $72. A party of six fishermen who operate near here are averaging $300 a week from sales.

True Americanism Will Elect Hughes

"A CROSS the road we are to travel this next four years, even though we start right and move with prudence and courage, serious hazards are thrown like the breaks in a roadway made by a torrential rain. These all rise out of the war torrent which has overwhelmed Europe."

"WHEN this war began over a million American working men were seeking vainly for employment. When the war ends and the developed energies of a new Europe are thrown into commercial production, our nation will face a competition such as it never knew."

"ONE of two things must happen--either millions of men will be seeking work in vain or else there must be thought out in advance the problem of commercial organization as France and England and Germany are seeking to think out the problem today."

"EVERY one of these nations is preparing to defend its own market by a protective tariff."

"If we are to save our laboring men from a catastrophe we must plan a tariff protection along sound, just and economic lines. To this endeavor I pledge myself and the men who are to be my colleagues."

MRS. McHUGH ADVISES ALL SUFFRERS TO TAKE TANLAC FOR THEIR RELIEF

Nothing shows the real merit and efficiency of Tanlac like the signed statements of grateful persons who have been relieved through its use. Such a one is Mrs. Kate McHugh, and she was glad to tell the Tanlac demonstrator just how appreciative she was of Tanlac.

"I had an awful cold for about a month," she began. "I am also subject to rheumatism, but at this time it seemed to bother me worse than ever. My head ached all of the time. I could sleep but little, it seemed to me I was awake every time the clock struck."

"My grandson who had used Tanlac and was benefited advised me to take it. He said, 'Grandma, it did me so much good you cannot make a mistake by at least trying it.'"

"My grandson was right. I did not make a mistake but on the other hand have been wonderfully relieved. My cold is almost gone, my headaches are not so severe or as frequent as they were and my rheumatism is improving steadily. I sleep all night without waking up once, and I have taken only one bottle of Tanlac, mind you."

"I am anxious to tell all of my friends what a good friend Tanlac will be to them if they are ever suffering from sleeplessness, rheumatism and headaches."

Tanlac can be obtained here only at C. A. Begun's Drug Store in the Majestic Building, where J. C. Henderson, the Tanlac man, is telling the public more about Tanlac.

SETTLER OF THE DESERTED VILLAGE OF NEWPORT DIES

P. J. Mechler Succumbs at Age of 88 at His Son's Home in Kilbourn

HELPED BUILD NEWPORT

City Near Kilbourn Which Is Now Cornfield First Place in Which He Settled in the United States

KILBOURN, Wis.—(Special.)—P. J. Mechler, the oldest resident of Kilbourn, and one of the first settlers of Newport, once a thriving city of fifteen hundred people, but now depopulated and turned into cornfields, is dead at the home of his son, F. P. Mechler.

Born in Bavaria, eighty-eight years ago, Mr. Mechler came to America with his wife over sixty years ago. His oldest son was born in mid-ocean. Upon landing at New York, Mr. Mechler came directly with his family to Newport. The town then consisted of a house or two and a single store. Mr. Mechler resided there until the settlement became a small city, and finally dwindled to a handful of inhabitants. He stayed until nearly everyone had left and then made his home here. In partnership with Mr. Leute he created the brewery here, and later operated a grocery store. He has also engaged in the retail hardware business, and about twenty years ago was retired from active business.

Two sons and a daughter survive. They are E. P. Mechler of Marshfield, F. J. Mechler of Kilbourn, and Mrs. A. Knippel of Wausau. He is survived by twenty-two grandchildren and five great grandchildren, also.

Funeral services for the well known resident will be held Saturday morning from the Catholic church here.

HOT TEA BREAKS A COLD—TRY THIS

Get a small package of Hamburg Great Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

"I got no relief until I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I washed the affected parts with Cuticura Soap and then gently rubbed on the Ointment, and in two weeks I was healed." (Signed) Miss Ella M. Yates, Coleman, Mich., July 14, 1915.

WEEK'S OFFERING IN MOVIELAND AS SEEN IN LA CROSSE

By N. D. Cecil

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree of English Stage Fame Comes to Majestic in "Old Folks At Home"—Blanche Sweet One of Dome Hits Next Week—Camp Douglas Filmed at the Strand—Clara Kimball Young and House Peters Star at Bijou—Rare Treats Promised

Majestic

IN AN ENTIRELY different role from that in which she ever appeared Bessie Barriscale is attracting considerable attention at the Majestic today in "Plain Jane." Miss Barriscale has a role similar to that played by Cinderella in the fairy tale, but "Plain Jane" is a real, live person.

Sir Tree Here
Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, peer of dramatists of Britain, who has recently made a few choice pictures for Fine Arts of Triangle, will appear on the Majestic screen Sunday and Monday for the last time, in his production of "Old Folks at Home." Sir Tree has the role of John Cornburn, a Yankee farmer whose intelligence and knowledge of state politics takes him to the state senate. Tree lays aside the costumes romantic in character and acts the parts of a rural American with grace and dignified effectiveness. The picture contains great charm.

"Market of Vain Desire"
Remember "Shell 43" and "Alias Jimmy Valentine?"
H. B. Warner, star of those successful productions, the former of which was seen at the Majestic recently on the Triangle program, comes back to that theater's screen Tuesday and Wednesday in "The Market of Vain Desire." Warner, probably the most versatile actor in Filmland, comes this time in a play vastly different from anything he has been seen in before. His "The Beggar of Cawnepore," displayed his versatility in a startling manner, but his latest production is a surprise from start to finish. The picture presents an acknowledged truth in a rare manner.

Pathe Offering Features Ruth At The Casino

Ruth Roland

"Return of Draw Egan"
And now comes the popular idol of western screens, our old friend, William S. Hart. Hart is seen so frequently, and with such extraordinary success in La Crosse that the "fans" are almost tempted to call him "Bill." He will be seen at the Majestic Thursday, Friday and Saturday next week in "The Return of Draw Egan." Hart also has versatility, but whenever his shadow is shown, there is also a sigh of pleasure when the audience learns it is a western. "Bill" seems to be cut out especially for that type of story. In that respect he is like Broncho Billy, of the old A. B. C. (American Biograph company) days. Imagine Broncho Billy playing the part of an Astec god? It just can't be done. "The Return of Draw Egan" has all the dynamic pep that Hart ever displayed, heaped in a pile.

Domedope

VIRGINIA PEARSON, one of the most notable figures of Fox photoplay productions, is playing at the Dome today, in "Blazing Love." The story is strong, and headed by Miss Pearson, the cast is extraordinary. It has that knack of never losing interest for a moment.

"The Soul's Cycle"
Beautiful Margaret Gibson is featured in Sunday's chief offering at the North La Crosse theater, "The Soul's Cycle," a drama of yesterday and today, produced in the studios of Mutual and sent out as one of their Masterpieces. The ancient philosophy of the transmigration of souls has been taken by the scenario writer as the basic theme of the play. Two epochs are pictured. First is portrayed the life in old Grecian times. The second half of the picture has its setting today, centuries later, and the characters are the reincarnated souls of the people about whom the first half of the film revolves. A popular Vogue comedy completes the program.

The always popular Lionel Barrymore and Blanche Sweet are in the lead roles of "Men and Women," coming as the center of attractions at the Dome Monday. The latest Selig news is on the bill along with a nifty Davey Don comedy, called "Otto, the Salesman."

One of the best five-reel mixed programs, including comedy and drama, is promised by Messrs. Gibson & Miller of the Dome for Tuesday. "The Kiss of Hate"

Miss Ethel Barrymore will undoubtedly be one of the biggest drawing cards, photographically speaking, in La Crosse, Wednesday, when she appears at the Rose street theater in Metro's production of "The Kiss of Hate."

"Timelock 776" is a thriller promised by the Dome next Thursday. Dealing with a gripping subject, and offered by a large and prominent cast, it can be predicted that the film will draw large attendances.

Friday will bring Mary Anderson, Jack Mower and Corinne Griffith in the Broadway Star picture, "The Waters of Lethe," "Hurled through the Air," an episode of "The Hazards of Helen," and a comedy, are also on the bill.

Theda at the Dome

Theda Bara comes to the Dome to close next week in her famous picture, "The Eternal Sapho."

Bijou

FANNIE WARD, supported by her husband, is playing the Paramount success, "Each Tear a Pearl," at the Bijou today for the last time. The film has won a place among the La Crosse picture lovers who have seen it.

"The Parson of Panamint"
Dustin Farnum returns to the Bijou Sunday in his best Pallas-Paramount play, "The Parson of Panamint," first published in the Saturday Evening Post. The picture opens a red letter week for big plays at the Third street theater. Three features

Jay Wilson Leaves Legitimate Stage to Play Detective With Pauline Frederick on Screen

JAY Wilson, former La Crosse man, and prominent in stage circles the country over, is in the movies. Having risen to a high pinnacle on the legitimate stage, Jay has skipped the inconsequential rungs of the ladder of a photoplay career, and has joined Famous Players.

Wilson will be seen at the Bijou week after next in a Paramount success, "Ashes of Embers," in which the famous Pauline Frederick is the star. The former La Crosse man appears in the role of a detective, one of the parts which is opposite that of Miss Frederick.

The announcement that he will appear on a La Crosse screen is met with just a mite more enthusiasm than the news that he has aligned himself with the art of the cinematograph. Wilson can be complimented both upon his ability to secure a berth with Famous Players, and for the opportunity which throws him in the company of Miss Frederick.

Wilson's most memorable successes have been in "Under Cover," and "The Greyhound." He has been on the stage for several years and is prominently known throughout the dramatic world. There will undoubtedly be three cheers when Jay puts in an appearance in the old home town, and it is safe to say that they will be hearty ones, even though he isn't here in the flesh.

Friday only, brings forth an apology from the theater management for the short engagement of the well known actor. The engagement has been shortened on account of the added number of pictures next week. The story is a powerful one dealing with political life in Washington.

"The Big Sister"

Mae Murray comes to the Bijou Saturday in her Paramount-Famous Players success, "The Big Sister." Pictographs are also on the program.

Strand

OF PARTICULAR INTEREST to Strand-fans is the announcement that their particular favorites, Miss Helen Holmes, is soon to offer her latest serial. It is called "A Lass to the Lumberlands," and will open about November 17. Miss Holmes recently won great favor at the

HOWARD MOORE OF RUSHFORD IS DEAD

RUSHFORD, Minn.—(Special).—After an illness extending over several months, Howard Moore, a resident of this city, passed away at his home on Church Hill, last Friday morning, November 3, at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Moore came to Rushford from his farm, about five miles northwest of here, three years ago, with his mother and sister residing in the A. T. Kjos residence until last year, when Mrs. Moore built a cozy and modern residence on Church Hill, where they have since resided. Mr. Moore, in coming to town, went into business with Swen Swenson at the latter's garage, continuing there until this spring, when he sold out his interests in the firm. Though employing the best of medical attendance, complications in his case were such as baffled physicians and for the past month he had failed very fast.

Of a quiet, retiring nature, he made little or no complaint during his periods of suffering, and even when compelled to take to his bed, this fall, still maintained that he was not so badly off as was thought. He is survived by his mother, two sisters and one brother: Mrs. S. H. Moore and Miss Alice Moore of this city.

Mrs. Edith Fobes of Redwood Falls, Minn., all of whom were at his side when the end came. Funeral services will be held Sunday at 2 o'clock from the home, and at 2:30 from the Presbyterian church of Rushford.

Local and Personal
A business deal was consummated when John Bratland of Brooklyn purchased from Mrs. Crampton of this city, the residence property formerly owned by that lady in Brooklyn. The house has been occupied for a number of years by Steve Hennessey and family, who have now leased the residence directly back of the Henry Warnson home and which is owned by the latter gentleman. Mr. Pherson, the city baker, whose family had resided in the Warnson house for some months, has moved into the Hounre residence formerly occupied by John Frisvold and family.

The ladies of the local W. C. T. U. are planning a "Poster Hike" for next week. They have also arranged for two splendid addresses by Mrs. Hanson of Minneapolis, the exact date not having as yet been ascertained by the union. A more extended notice will be given later, when preliminaries have been arranged.

All our city school instructors are this week in St. Paul, attending the two days' session of the Minnesota Teachers' Educational convention.

Miss Lily Berg of Ferry street, who since last summer has been with the family of her sister, Mrs. George Maass, near Moose Lake, Minn., is expected home about the middle of this month. She will visit at Minot, N. D., with her cousin, Mrs. Luskow, and at St. Paul with other relatives before completing the journey home.

Gynther Overland of this city has leased the Evan Tuff farm for the coming year and will move onto the place in the spring, should nothing unexpected occur to prevent.

Mrs. Whitlock, who has for the past month been at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James McDonald of Brooklyn, has returned to her home in Dakota, Minn.

William Robertson of Stevens avenue has so far recovered from the stroke of paralysis which he suffered this spring as to come downtown in pleasant weather.

William Baerman, who has been in rather poor health lately, is also able to take a short walk downtown in pleasant weather.

FINED FOR KEEPING VENISON

Easy Way to Get Rid of Itching

Don't worry any more about that itching skin-trouble. Just get a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap at any drug store. With the Resinol Soap and warm water bathe the affected parts thoroughly, until they are free from crusts and the skin is softened. Dry very gently, spread on a thin layer of the Resinol Ointment, and cover with a light bandage—if necessary to protect the clothing. This should be done twice a day. Usually the distressing itching and burning stop with the first treatment, and the skin soon becomes clear and healthy again. For trial free, write to Dept. 9-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Strand in "The Girl and The Game." "The Broken Law"

A story of the gypsies, with William Farnum in one of his famous red-blooded roles, will hold the screen on Sunday. It is called "The Broken Law." Farnum, in search of a lost half-sister, joins the Romany tribe and fights his way to its leadership. An enemy charges him with causing the downfall of a girl of the gypsies, and she and he, according to Romany custom, are flogged from the camp. The picture is full of picturesque incident and beautiful settings, not the least thrilling of which is a scene in which an automobile crashes through a bridge railing into a river. The play ends with the death of the villain by a shot through a church-window as he is about to marry, his bride collapsing into the ready arms of the stalwart hero.

Camp Douglas Filmed

Tuesday Strand folks will have a chance to see the first motion-picture story woven around the Wisconsin militia at Camp Douglas. Many of the scenes were taken at the camp, and the rest were taken down on the Mexican border. It is also noteworthy that the heroine of the picture is Myra Dietz, daughter of the Defender of Cameron Dam. Seldom has there been shown a picture full of more interesting points to Wisconsin people.

Wednesday the Strand will see "Mister 44," which shows Monday and Tuesday at the Casino. Friday will be amateur night and the management promises a program of the usual caliber of entertainment.

Casino

PACKED HOUSES greeted the display, at the Casino Friday, of "Is Any Girl Safe?" This smashing drama of the underworld and the white slave traffic has played to large business, a fact not surprising in view of its sensational topic. Few motion pictures of recent months have carried more thrills than "Is Any Girl Safe?" and the house management was preparing for a return of the crowds Saturday evening. Incidentally, Manager Mack is performing the difficult stunt this evening of showing the same film at two houses on the same night. By whisking the films from the Casino to the Strand as fast as they are run off, in an automobile, he reaches both houses without delay.

"Social Buccaneer"

Sunday at the Casino sees the return of that much-loved idol, J. Warren Kerrigan, this time as a modern Robin Hood in "The Social Buccaneer." With Louise Lovely opposite him, and a good supporting cast, Kerrigan makes the most of a splendid vehicle. It radiates atmosphere, some unique scenes in China being shown as well as excellent photography and splendid interiors for the society scenes. Kerrigan is cast as a socially-inclined young man who robs the rich and gives the proceeds to charities.

She fell in love with a chest-measurement of 44 inches, and that started the odd story which May Allison and Harold Lockwood will unfold at the Casino Monday and Tuesday. It is called "Mister 44," and tells of a poor sweat-shop worker who slips a note into one of a shipment of shirts, size 44, which go to the far north-west. An engineer, scion of wealth but a real man of the woods, answers the note and his letter is so convincing that the girl takes him at his word and goes west to put herself under his protection. And then, when she finds out his social position, she runs away again, and is back in the sweat-shop when the engineer finds her and wins her. There is no lack of thrills when the two are wrecked in a canoe over rapids in a Canadian river, and a good fast fight in which Lester Cuneo has a part.

Ruth Roland in Town

Wednesday and Thursday Miss Ruth Roland will play in a Pathe picture called "A Matrimonial Martyr," in which she substitutes for a neglected wife who wants to get away to Reno, the land of the divorce. Ruth has a better-than-usual opportunity, with an unusual chance to display her versatility, and the picture is further enhanced by the fact that it is one of the beautiful hand-colored Pathe offerings.

Friday the Casino has been rented by the Stationary Engineers, who will offer a picture showing how pipes, stationary boilers, and such things are made.

LA CROSSE TRACTOR STOCK MOVES RAPIDLY

The LA CROSSE TRACTOR COMPANY has been formed under the laws of the state of Delaware, with a capital of $1,000,000 Common and $500,000 Preferred Stock, for the purpose of engaging in the manufacture and sale of FARM TRACTORS. This company has arranged to take over the business of the Sta-Rite Engine Company of La Crosse, Wisconsin, and will have experienced men in charge of its selling organization.

For a number of years the Sta-Rite Engine Company was engaged in the manufacture of gasoline engines but during the past year has been principally engaged in the manufacture of a light farm tractor.

The principal stockholders in the Sta-Rite Engine Company are:

L. F. EASTON,

L. C. COLMAN,

F. P. HIXON,

H. J. HIRSHHEIMER

and they are sufficiently satisfied with the result of their experience in manufacturing tractors, and with the future prospects of the tractor business, so they are willing to take stock in the new company covering the entire amount of their interest in the Sta-Rite Engine Company. They have further underwritten the amount of $100,000 Preferred Stock in the new company, to be paid for in cash.

The gentlemen named have also agreed to serve on the board of directors of the new company.

The Articles of Incorporation provide that the Preferred Stockholders shall elect a majority of the Board of Directors until such time as the Common Stock in the Company, irrespective of good-will and other intangible assets, is worth par on the books of the company.

The Preferred Stock is divided into shares of $100 each and is entitled to cumulative dividends at the rate of 7 per cent per annum.

About $275,000 out of the $500,000 Preferred Stock will be offered to the public at par with a substantial bonus of Common Stock. This company is not being exploited as a "sure thing proposition" but should be regarded as carrying the usual business risks with most excellent prospects for a very handsome return to the investor.

No subscription will be received for less than ten shares of this stock. We shall be pleased to call upon interested parties and exhibit prospectus and go into full particulars concerning the tractor industry and the prospects of the La Crosse Tractor Company.

Of the $50,000.00 which was set aside for La Crosse investors, a large portion has already been sold, and under the pressure of steady demand it is evident that La Crosse people who desire to participate will have to hurry their subscriptions

HOLD-UP ROAD-HOUSE
PARK FALLS, Wis., Nov. 3.—Two masked men held up a road-house near here and shot the proprietor through the arm. The robbers then forced a visitor at the road-house to take them in an automobile to the railroad, some miles away. Because his engine refused to run he was beaten over the head with the robbers' revolvers.

Prolonged visits are apt to deal hospitality a death blow.

TABLOID OPENS TO PLEASED HOUSE AT THE THEATRE

"Fraternity Boys and Girls," the Churchill musical comedy tabloid opening its week-end engagement at the La Crosse theatre on Thursday, proved itself all the press agents said it was, and was received in hearty fashion by pleased audiences. The production's predicted popularity in La Crosse is enhanced to some degree by the fact that it is the first entertainment of its kind to appear at a local theater this season, although the favor it earns is purely on its merits.

The chorus is a particularly charming one, capable of singing well the long list of attractive songs prepared by David M. Wolff. Costumes are startlingly pretty and have a fresh look which added greatly to the whole show. As far as scenery and settings go, the production has been beaten by a big margin. Taken as a whole the entertainment is simply a miniature musical comedy of the class with which the Schuberts became famous. Miss Sylvia De Frankie, star of several recent large musical productions, is naturally the leading attraction. She is known as "Cuddles." The plot opens in a girls' dormitory in the college. The fun starts with a snap and is continued through a well connected story. There are six separate scenes, all calling for different settings. John P. Morse, in the role of Hippo Newboy, couldn't be anything but funny if he tried. The balance of the male portion of the cast is clever.

ANTHRACITE TO SELL AT $15 IS DEALERS' CLAIM

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Anthracite coal will cost twice what it cost last year in Chicago, with the first breath of winter, dealers declared on Friday. The anthracite supply will be entirely exhausted in three weeks on heavy buying and then prices are expected to go to $14 and $15 a ton. They claim that the east will use practically all the anthracite produced.

"BRAINS BURNED OUT ACTING AS BRAKES" PRESIDENT DECLARES

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—In a spirited attack on the opposition of big business to progress, President Wilson Thursday afternoon told the business league luncheon that "the leading businessmen of the country and their legal counsel have deterred with subtle genius all progressive legislation."

"My friends," he said, "brains have been burned out, acting as brakes. And these men," he continued, alluding to the "brakes" while the crowd cheered, "have been doubly lost. They have lost their influence and have lost their opportunity to do a great public service."

The president's appeal was one for the cause of the "common people," the "root and very foundations of the nation."

"I have seen things in the last few weeks that have touched me deeply," he said. "I have seen poorly dressed women holding children in their arms look up with tears in their eyes and thank me."

"Why should they do that to me? I do not know, unless they feel that I have tried to do them justice." He said perhaps the reason was that the poorer people had so long been trained to believe men in high places gave them no consideration, that they regarded anyone who tried to do them justice was the friend.

SQUELCH OLD CURFEW

ARKANSAS BUSINESS ACTIVE
LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 3.—The good cotton prices have caused a great business boom in the interior of the State. Country merchants say the demand for merchandise is so great that they cannot fill orders. There is more money in the Little Rock banks than ever before.

His Probable Deduction.
"Mercy!" virtuously exclaimed the traveler who had halted his motorcar in front of the residence of Mr. Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, with the intention of inquiring the way to Torpidity, only to be temporarily swerved from his purpose by loud and violent language addressed by the said Johnson to his four-year-old son, Bearcat. "What will your offspring think of your yelling denouncing him as a blankety-blanked (I do not care to repeat your oaths literally) son-of-a-horse-thief?" "Well," was the reply, "if he's as smart as I was at his age he'll sorter suspect that I'm liable to get mad after a while and rough him up some."—Kansas City Star.

Accomplished Her Task.
While Chopin probably did not time his "Minute Waltz" to exactly sixty seconds, some auditors insist that it live up to its name. A celebrated pianist, on her last western tour played the "Minute Waltz" as an encore, first telling her audience what it was. Thereupon a huge man in a large riding suit took out an immense silver watch, held it open almost under her nose and gravely proceeded to time her. The pianist's fingers flew along the keys, and her anxiety was rewarded when the man closed the watch with a loud snap, and said in a booming voice, "Gosh, she done it."

STOP DANDRUFF! HAIR GETS THICK, WAVY, BEAUTIFUL

Girls! Draw a cloth through your hair and double its beauty.

Spend 25 cents! Dandruff vanishes and hair stops coming out.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, gloss and lustre, and try as you will you can not find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

Averages 100 Miles Per Hour In Long Flight

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Victor Carlstrom swooped down from the sky Friday, landed on Governor's Island and closed his lightning-like journey from Chicago. He had hung up a new American non-stop record Thursday and had made his journey at an average speed of more than 110 miles an hour.

Carlstrom averaged 137 miles an hour on the last leg of his flight. A stiff wind blew at his back all the way.

Officials of the Aero club of America, commenting on this feature, declared that so far as official records show, it is the fastest time ever made by an aeroplane.

Yesterday he was in Erie, Pa., 425 miles from Chicago. In breaking his own American non-stop record, he was about 340 miles behind the European record, approximately 800 miles, a journey from the French lines to Chelm, Poland, by a French military aviator.

FIREMAN KILLED WHEN TRAIN GOES THROUGH SWITCH

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Nov. 3.—The Southwest Limited, fast Milwaukee train, westbound, was wrecked on Thursday evening when it ran into an open switch. Leo Miller, fireman of Chicago, was scalded to death; F. Skuse, engineer of Chicago, lost his left leg and the Pullman conductor suffered a fracture of the bones of his face. The engine, baggage car and two steel coaches left the track and were piled up in a tangle.

CONDITIONS WORSE THAN FILM SHOWS SAYS N. Y. SLEUTH

Far from being overdrawn, says Lieutenant Costigan, head of the New York detective squad employed in tracking down the ring leaders of the white slave traffic, "Is Any Girl Safe?" which will appear at the Casino in La Crosse Friday and Saturday, does not do justice to the situation.

"It's not half told," said the sleuth after seeing the picture. "If the public were to know what I have seen—but I suppose a picture can't show it."

And yet "Is Any Girl Safe?" does not beg the question it discusses. It shows, frankly, although with all delicacy, the methods of the human vultures who prey upon the helpless poor girls of great cities. The wives by which damsels are lured into the power of the slavers are mercilessly exposed, not for the sake of exposure, but for the lesson to be drawn. Not the least interesting scene is a police raid, and there is a battle in a resort that is the last word in thrilling action.

The picture recently broke all records for a five reel production in Minneapolis, where it has just concluded its first showing in the west. Everywhere its visualized sermon has been well received in its attacks upon the buzzards of society who sell souls for gold.

The picture is shown in La Crosse by the Anti-Vice Motion Picture company, which has leased the Casino for the two days, Saturday night, as well as at the Casino, it will be shown at the Strand.

NATIONAL

Wilson's administration has placed upon the statute books more legislation in the three and one-half years of his administration, in the interest of the Common People, than the Republican Party has in the last thirty years. There is not one of them that they dare to say they would repeal. These laws can be ruined if administered by Wall Street interests, as demonstrated in Wisconsin by Philipp's administration. Wilson has kept us at Peace with Honor and Prosperity such as was never known before. He should have the support of every one in this election. Any differences in our own country should be laid aside for four years. A vote for Wilson is a vote for Peace and Prosperity.

STATE

Don't forget our State Ticket. Mr. Williams, our candidate for governor, and our entire State Ticket will put the control of State Government back in your hands instead of the big corporations who have had the control of Wisconsin for the past two years under the Philipp administration. The only voice that you have in this matter is your ballot on election day. See that it is cast right.

Our candidates, for the State Senate N. C. Bacheller, and the Assembly, Joseph Wolford in the First district, and R. W. Davis in the Second district, will represent you and your interests and not the special interests.

COUNTY

The Democratic County Officials that have been elected in La Crosse County in the past eight years have been the most efficient of public officers, obliging and courteous and have attended directly to your business. Do not forget the Candidates on the County Ticket.

A. C. WOLFE, County Chairman.

PURE BLOOD MAKES HEALTHY PEOPLE

Hood's Sarsaparilla surely and effectively removes scrofula, boils and other blood diseases because it drives out of the blood all the humors that cause these diseases. They cannot be successfully treated in any other way. External applications for their removal have proven almost useless, because they cannot drive out the impurities that are in the blood.

Hood's Sarsaparilla makes pure rich blood, perfects the digestion, and builds up the whole system. The skin becomes smooth, clean and healthy. This great blood remedy has stood the test of forty years. Insist on having Hood's, for nothing else acts like it. There is no real substitute. Get it today. Sold by all druggists.

The candidate particularized on commercial conditions here and abroad after the war in his speech here. He quoted again from the speech of Chairman Hurley of the federal trade commission on the need for combating European rivalry at the close of the struggle.

Nearly every business proposition looks like a winner on paper.

REPUBLICANS WANT MILITARY EXPENSE LAID UPON PEOPLE

True Inwardness of Tariff Demands Is Hope to Escape Preparedness Income Tax, Says Kneen

SO G. O. P. IS IN REVERSE

Now That Tariff Commission Is Law They Want to Go Back to Old Hanna Days

"I want to expose the 'nigger in the woodpile' in this tariff issue," said E. J. Kneen in an interview this morning.

"For years the republicans have been demanding reduced tariff and a tariff commission. The Wilson administration gave it to them. Immediately they reverse themselves and demand the old-time high protective tariff of Mark Hanna.

"Behold—the 'nigger'!" "Congress has just appropriated over half a billion dollars for army and navy preparedness. The republican 'interests' demanded this. They wanted still more of it. Now this immense sum of money must be paid in TAXES. The republican bosses wanted 'preparedness', but they don't want to pay the bill. They want the common people to pay the 'preparedness' taxes.

"President Wilson has arranged to collect these extra taxes through an INCOME TAX. "That hits the republican multi-millionaires. "The republican multi-millionaires want a great tariff to pay this 'preparedness' bill. "That lets the multi-millionaires out and hits every consumer in the United States. "It's the old story. Whenever Rockefeller and Morgan weep over the poor, down-trodden working man and farmer, it is time for the working man and the farmer to put a padlock on his purse.

DON'T THROW YOUR VOTE AWAY!

Did the Republican Party prevent the development of the Trusts?

Did the Wilson Administration stop the growth of Trusts?

Did regulation reduce rates?

Did the dissolution of the Standard Oil, the meat, and the coal trust, lower the price of gasoline, meat and coal?

If you are honest with yourself you will answer No!

A vote for remedies that do not cure, is a vote thrown away.

The Trusts Cannot Be Busted!

Because that would bring on an industrial breakdown which no political party could outlive.

They cannot be regulated because they have the financial power to regulate the regulator.

They cannot be controlled by the government because those who own the means of life of a nation always owned its government.

Let The People Own The Trusts!

The Postoffice is a good trust because it belongs to all the people. All other trusts are bad because they belong to a few people.

When all trusts belong to all the people than all trusts will be good trusts.

If there is one sound political instinct in the American voter, it is that he does not want to throw his vote away, therefore he votes for what he wants.

DON'T THROW YOUR VOTE AWAY! VOTE THE SOCIALIST TICKET STRAIGHT!

son expert, non-partisan tariff commission, perfected for the present and changed from time to time as conditions demand.

It Can't Be Done

"Now, if the republicans were honest in their demands for a tariff commission, the experts of which were to give us a tariff to fit every changing condition and meet the needs of both labor, business and the consumer, how can they make good on that score and at the same time go back to that 'protection in the fullest sense' which their 1916 platform defends? They CAN'T do it without destroying and ignoring the tariff commission that they have advocated and promised.

"In conclusion I would like to say a word to young men. I know hundreds of young men and I know they want to make this a forward-moving nation, a leader of civilization. And so I do not hesitate to say this to them:

"The democratic party, with its record of legislative achievements, appeals to the young men of the nation.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint with the attendant bad breath.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are pure—ly a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

tion, and should enlist your personal attention and effort in behalf of a continuation of the peace and prosperity which has blessed us as a people during the administration of President Wilson. The laws enacted by the administration and at the instance of President Wilson are of deep and vital interest and to the advantage of every young man, and it is your patriotic duty as well as the obligation which you owe to yourself and your own material interests to lend your vote, your personal assistance and your influence in behalf of the party which has done and which is doing so much for the people. The laws passed by the democratic administration have not only a bearing upon the present conditions of our national life and prosperity, but provide greater opportunities for the future welfare of every man and woman who has to make his or her own way in the world and whose interests are bound up in their trade or profession. To the young men who intend to engage in farming, the rural credits law is of vital interest and to his greatest advantage, providing, as it does, a means for securing ready capital at very low rates of interest, and insuring for every young man an opportunity to secure a start in life without the otherwise heavy burden of debt and high interest charges. Kindly study the record of President Wilson's administration and the laws enacted for YOUR benefit, as well as for the benefit of the masses of the people of this nation, and you will soon be convinced that, in foresight, knowledge not only of present conditions, but with a far-seeing eye for the future needs of all our people, and with the thought in view of bettering the opportunities of every man, the administration, prompted by President Wilson and guided by his great wisdom, has done more in the past three years in legislation than has been done in any period or during any time in the history and life of the nation. We invite your earnest co-operation and assistance in the present campaign."

According to information developed after the indictment, Rose took his wife to Germany after trying four times for a Minnesota divorce and instituted proceedings on the claim that she was his first cousin. This case was turned down and then it is claimed, he went to Turkey, turned Mohammedan and tried again unsuccessfully.

Returning to New York he gained a divorce before Justice Giegerich, but his wife, after getting the aid of an American consul in Germany, returned and reopened the case. Developments in this case are said to have led to the perjury indictment.

The police will forward a warrant to Minneapolis for Rose's arrest and they have already arrested Samuel Schielmann, an alleged accomplice.

SEES OKLAHOMA FOR WILSON

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 4.—That President Wilson will carry Oklahoma by 40,000 votes was the prediction Saturday of Democratic State Chairman Riley.

Socialist State Secretary Sinclair countered with a claim of 6,000 plurality for Benson.

TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

Get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little into your hand and rub well into the scalp with the finger tips. By morning most, if not all, of this awful scurf will have disappeared. Two or three applications will destroy every bit of dandruff; stop scalp itching and falling hair.

STOCK BRINGS HIGH PRICE

WAKESHA, Wis., Nov. 4.—Frank Harding, stock breeder, claimed Friday that all price records for calves have been broken in the sale by him of 43 pure bred short horn calves at an average price of $1,010. The highest price was brought for Good Stamp bull, which was purchased by S. Sin-Abor farms of Kansas City for $5,200.

"KATHLYN" BEASTS AND MISTRESS ON VAUDEVILLE BILL

The famous "movie" leopards which Olga toyed with in those never-to-be-forgotten films, "Adventures of Kathlyn," appear in the feature act of a snappy bill of vaudeville at the La Crosse theater Sunday. Olga, one of the principal characters of Miss Kathlyn Williams' photoplays, appears in person with her "pats."

Although her arms bear the scars of battles in which she escaped death by a hair's breadth, she is fearless in their cages.

The bill will be presented but one day, due to the three day stay in La Crosse of Churchill's tabloid, "Fraternity Boys and Girls." Its brief visit will see some of the biggest surprises of the season, and a feature is that it balances perfectly. Fun abounds throughout the entertainment.

Charles and Madeline Dunbar bring an original mimicry entertainment which draws well. Willison and Sherwood furnish the program with music. They sing cleverly a series of songs, and are said to be rare yodelers. Great Mars comes to the house with a novelty.

The present season of vaudeville seems to be a bit shy of good sketches, or sketches of any kind, and in the promised appearance of Willard Hutchinson and company, playing in their comedy skit, "A Leap Year Leap," the variety bill stock will undoubtedly rise. Willard and Hutchinson are past masters at the art of sketch producing.

SIR HERBERT IN YANKEE PICTURE

Is there an American alive who doesn't feel a thrill all over, when a real old-style "B'Gosh Yankee" picture is flashed on the screen of a motion picture theater? Hardly. With that thought in mind Rupert Hughes wrote a scenario, called "Old Folks at Home," Triangle-Fins Arts produced it, and together they picked out Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree for the leading role. Sir Tree is the dean of English actors. The picture begins a two-day engagement at the Majestic Sunday.

MISSIONARY TO CHINA TALKS AT SALEM CHURCH

WEST SALEM, Wis.—(Special.)—Mrs. C. S. Williams, at home on a furlough from her mission station in South America, will give an account of her missionary experiences Sunday evening, Nov. 5, at 7:30 at the Federated church. Mrs. Williams delighted her hearers at the recent meeting of the Synodical society at Fond du Lac and we hope that the church will be full to overflowing to hear her address Sunday.

Operations Successful
Mrs. Elmer Waite, recently of Bangor, but for many years a resident of West Salem, was taken by Dr. Guy Wakefield on Thursday morning to St. Francis hospital in La Crosse for a double operation, appendicitis and gall stones. Word was received late Thursday afternoon that

Has 85th Birthday
Oscar Elwell celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday Wednesday. His many friends and friends tendered hearty congratulations. While Mr. Elwell is in poor health, his good cheer does much towards making up for the fact that he must be confined to his home. His mind is as active as that of a young man.

Miss Esther Langlie was hostess at a Halloween party Tuesday evening at the home of her sister, Mrs. O. F. Campbell. The rooms were prettily decorated with Japanese lanterns and Halloween novelties, and the usual festivities of the day were indulged in, ending with a marshmallow roast at the open fireplace, after which luncheon was served. The guests were Misses Hazel Wells, Mary Shaefer, Donna Haut, Hazel Barr, Maud O'Holleran, Lavonne Miller, Messrs. Edwin Hazen, F. G. DENOUNCES MODERN SYSTEM OF SCHOOLS

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 4.—Denouncing the entire public school system of this country as an institution which "gives a lot of us a job," John M. Francis, superintendent of schools of Columbus, Ohio, was applauded by 2,000 Colorado state educators. He advocated before the Colorado State Teachers' association the abolition of the grade system in schools and advised instead that the schools be divided in respect to subjects only.

"You say what I advocate will tear down the whole system," said Francis. "But I say that it is time to do so. The system is crowded with fads and the most good it serves anyway is to give a lot of us a job."

"The three 'Rs' must go," added Francis. "They are merely incidentals in the modern system and they are the force which is threatening to undermine the educational system of the country."

SIMMS TO CANADIAN FRONT

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—William Philip Simms, manager of the Paris bureau of the United Press, will leave for the Canadian war front next Tuesday. Simms is the chief newspaper man to be given credentials for the trip to the lines held by the soldiers of the dominion. Many Americans are in the Canadian contingent.

Word of Simms having been given permission to visit the Canadian lines was received from the United Press London bureau today. His stories of the Canadian soldiers will be published exclusively by papers receiving the United Press service.

CONTRACTOR HAS TROUBLE WITH M'GREGOR WORK

NORTH M'GREGOR, Ia.—(Special.)—Dougherty and Siane, contractors who have charge of the cutting away of the hills and filling and grading of the terminal extension for the Milwaukee company here, have had trouble with the heavy rock formations of Whalen hill on the south side, where they are making room for the new waterway for Bloody Run. Ordinary blasting fails to loosen the heavy rock sufficiently, so they have brought a well drill, and are drilling a hole seventy feet deep, and from this expect to get results in blasting that will loosen up the hill so the work can proceed faster.

Several crews of men, pile drivers, bridgemen, carpenters and others are working on the new bridges being put in where the new Bloody Run outlet into the Mississippi will be, when the waterway is cut through. There will be two railroad bridges over two hundred feet long, and a wagon bridge will be along side these.

THINGS A MOTHER OUGHT TO KNOW

Mothers whose children are weak and run-down, who do not gain flesh and strength, who lack the rosy cheeks and bright eyes of healthy children, should remember that the safest tonic and body builder to give them is Father John's Medicine because it is a pure and wholesome medicine free from alcohol or dangerous drugs. Thousands of mothers give it to their children whenever they become weakened or run-down.

THE HASKIN LETTER

Finding Work For The Women

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN
WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 3.
NOT LONG ago, an elderly couple entered the office of a government employment agency in the middle west and told the matron in charge that they wanted to engage a daughter. "We wish to adopt a suitable orphan," the old lady explained to the somewhat amazed matron, "and so we thought we would consult the services of the government."
"Any preference as to color of eyes and hair?" inquired the matron, recovering her usual businesslike composure.
It appeared that they had none. They lived on a farm far out in the country, and what they wanted, the old lady, was a pleasant "homey" sort of a girl, who would keep them from being lonely, and whom they could make heiress to about two hundred thousand dollars' worth of property. After interviewing four hundred applicants for this position, the matron selected one girl she thought would do and introduced her to the old people. They immediately liked her, drove her proudly home in their motor car and after a trial period of ten months took out legal papers of adoption.

This is only one girl out of thousands who have been placed in good positions of one sort or another during the past year by the employment agencies of the United States bureau of immigration. The demands for daughters are scarce, but calls for servants, companions, chaperons and commercial employees are numerous. There are now eighty-two national employment agencies in the country, which are placing on the average of 16,000 men and women every month, and in perhaps a third of these the organization is devoted entirely to the placement of women and girls. The government representatives in charge are women, who understand labor conditions that affect their sex and are keen judges of ability and character. For, not only does the government find jobs for its unemployed, but it often directs their abilities and chooses occupations for them.

A few weeks ago, a tired looking woman came into the agency at Baltimore in quest of employment. Her husband had died, leaving her penniless when she had supposed that they were wealthy, and she was forced to seek work. The matron, after tactful and diligent inquiry, found that the young woman knew both French and Italian, played the cello, and was well versed in social etiquette, but knew nothing about business. Hence, the matron decided she would not do as a social secretary, which requires a head for detail, but that she would make an excellent companion for some rich old lady. With the co-operation of another agency in the north, the matron soon placed her in such a position.
On the same day that this case was settled, two young girls appeared at the matron's desk and filed applications for employment. When asked what they could do, they looked distressed and said they didn't know, but that they had to do something. They were obviously of good family, intelligent and well bred, and yet apparently they had no particular accomplishment that would earn them a living. The matron was becoming distressed herself when the older girl suddenly leaned forward and picked up a small brass candlestick from the matron's desk. "Why, that's Syrian," she exclaimed enthusiastically, "and very antique—where did you ever get it?"
"How did you know it was Syrian?" asked the ever alert government vocational guide.
Oh, she knew all about antiques, the young girl explained, and also had plans of how the various historic periods could be used in houses with good effects. "Very well, you're going to be an interior decorator," declared the matron, "and now what can your sister do?" The sister, it appeared, had a knack for designing costumes for her family and friends, but she was afraid they would not have any commercial value. The matron paid no attention to the last part of the girl's remark, but called up a couple of business men and a certain prominent clubwoman. Today, both of these girls are doing the work for which they are fitted in reliable business establishments.

Sometimes, a girl will apply to the government agency for a certain kind of position and be advised to change it to something else by the vocational guide in charge. Waitresses are placed in candy stores; cash girls placed in department stores; maids, and saleswomen into country domestic. Each employment agency puts great emphasis upon the fact that every woman should be self-supporting, either in the home or out of it, and that no work is menial so long as the person concerned feels that it is not. Positions are secured for girls only over sixteen years of age, and no girl is sent to any place which has not been thoroughly investigated.
A few years ago, the number of unemployed in the United States approximated six million. Every winter the breadlines of the big cities were so long that municipal measures had to be adopted to take care of them. The majority of the breadliners were willing to work, but could not get it or did not know how to go about it. Ohio was the first state to establish a free employment agency with state officials in charge who were authorized to investigate industrial opportunities for the benefit of Ohio men and women. Offices were opened in five different cities, and the experiment proved very successful. Twelve other states followed suit during the next decade, but while conditions were greatly improved there was need of greater co-operation.

In answer to a crying need, congress last session passed a bill authorizing the department of labor to establish a national employment bureau under the direction of the bureau of immigration to assist the unemployed in the United States. The country was divided into twenty zones with an employment headquarters in each zone and sixty-two branches scattered among them. In addition to this, the local postoffices throughout the states were used to gather and disseminate information through printed application blanks that were handed to each workman and employer who came to mail a letter. The blank filled in by the workman stated that he desired work; gave his qualifications and the kind of job he wanted. The employer's blank stated the terms upon which the employer was willing to employ; the kind of workmen wanted, and whether or not labor disputes existed. When laborers were required in large numbers for harvesting or building and construction, placards were pasted on the walls of the postoffice advertising the fact.
In securing employment for women great assistance and co-operation has been pledged by the women's clubs of the nation, who are enthusiastic in their support of the movement. At the convention held last January, the National Federation of Women's clubs formally voted to assist the bureau as much as possible, and since then twenty-one women's organizations have entered the campaign. Mr. Anthony Caminetti, director of the bureau of immigration, who is traveling over the country putting the employment propaganda into effect, believes that with the co-operation of the women's clubs the national employment agencies for women may be made the greatest benefit to the sex that has yet been accomplished. Already, women who were too timid and reserved to seek employment from other exchanges have no hesitation in taking their troubles to the government, which treats all personal information as confidential.

Thus the government is clearing the industrial road for women, and as a result more women are becoming breadwinners. Even women who have home responsibilities but are in need of money have been able to secure a few hours' work a day through the offices of the bureau. With the strength of the women's clubs behind the movement, it seems that the share of the nation's work done by women will increase for some time to come.

A Great Loss and a Greater Gain

This business has rounded out twenty-two months of existence by distributing to owners more than one hundred thousand cars.

Price-concessions on this car are rarely asked, and never given with Dodge Brothers consent or to their knowledge.

You can therefore figure accurately the amount invested by the public in Dodge Brothers cars, by multiplying the output by the retail selling price.

One hundred thousand cars at $785 per car means a sales-total in less than two years' time of $78,500,000—or, with freight-cost added, considerably more than $80,000,000.

There have been no bursts of speed in the up-building of this great business.

At no time has there been even an attempt at stimulation of sales or of production.

Never for a single day has production been speeded up for the sake of attaining a total.

On the contrary, it has been held down every day within the limits of close, careful, conscientious manufacturing.

Both production and sales have been stable, steady and spontaneous—scrupulous care in the one, producing huge volume in the other.

At this moment, as at every other period, although producing a large volume every day, Dodge Brothers are "losing business" by their policy of keeping production within the bounds of continuous betterment.

In that sense they have doubtless suffered a great loss in the past and will endure a great loss in the future.

But over against this great loss is an infinitely greater gain.

The people of the United States have implicit faith in the integrity of Dodge Brothers manufacturing methods.

One hundred thousand owners—or rather, one hundred thousand families—are practically of one mind concerning the car and the men who make it.

This business and its product are blessed with a friendship probably without parallel in the history of American manufacturing.

Fresh from the factory, or sold at second-hand, from one end of the nation to the other, the car has special value and a special reputation, because of the name it bears.

Because of the name it bears, you may be sure that the principle behind the car will never be changed a hair's breadth.

Dodge Brothers have only one idea in the upbuilding of their business.

That idea is to build so soundly and so well that the good will which they have won will grow and endure forever.

The gasoline consumption is unusually low.
The tire mileage is unusually high.

VAN HISE OPPOSES FOOTBALL IF ALL STUDES CAN'T PLAY

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 4.—It was evident Saturday that President Charles R. Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin, did not time his Milwaukee attack on college football Friday night to get its full effect. Badger rooters here were yelling themselves hoarse for their eleven which is several hundred miles away to battle with Ohio State at Columbus.

The losing team will be forced from the Big Nine race and every rooter is giving the Badger team his long distance but complete support. Dr. Van Hise stated that he was against college football unless the majority of the student body could play the games.

BOYS TIP TOMBSTONES

MARINETTE, Wis., Nov. 4.—Marinette police expect to arrest a number of young men who entered the Woodlawn cemetery here on Halloween night and overturned five tombstones.

Torchlight Parade With Earth-Shaking Cheering Leads Riverside Game

"Skyrockets" and "firecrackers" echoed and boomed from the walls of downtown buildings Friday night, hurled from six hundred frantic throats, while the glare of red firefuses lighted up the faces of thousands of citizens who blocked the sidewalks to see the big football parade of the high school. It was by long odds the most spectacular and successful event of the kind which student enthusiasm has ever attempted in La Crosse, and the fact that the business district was crowded as if for a circus parade showed that the citizens at large had entered into the spirit of the marchers.

Headed by a diminutive figure of Charlie Chaplin and a band, the parade stretched over six blocks. There were numerous banners and signs carried above the heads of the marchers, and several symbolic groups predicting dire things for Riverside in Saturday's game. A party of hilarious pallbearers bore a black coffin, with "Milwaukee" emblazoned upon it. Another party of girls with Red Cross bands on their arms walked with measured tread behind a stretcher in which was an inert form bearing the placard "Milwaukee's Fate." The line concluded with "Prof. Baier's World Renowned German Band"—a score or more of youths in weird and making noises which were more uncanny than a score.

The students were assembled in the different recitation rooms at the high school by leaders of respective units. They were called at 7 o'clock to form in line. Crowding was eliminated and some of the best marching units were saved to bring up the rear.

Into Business District
The paraders marched north to Main street and then turned west, going through the business district to Third and Main. From Third and Main the parade went around the block going past the La Crosse hotel, the knitting works and coming up Main street again facing east. When Stavrum's store was reached the lines marched together into mass formation. Led by John Robinson and Myron Locke, the six hundred rooters made the foundations of the buildings shake with their cheers.

Arouse Riverside Men
Following the band in perfect order the parade continued to the Hotel Stoddard where another mass was held for the Milwaukee players. Brilliant red torches turned night into sunset and the Riverside players looked out of their windows to see demonstration. The last mass was held in front of the La Crosse theater.

Although the regular parade was finished, this did not keep some of the liveliest ones from yelling and playing far into the night. "Pro-

BADGERS OR OHIO ELIMINATED FROM CONFERENCE RACE

Wisconsin Expected to Have Worthy Opposition in Jack Wilce's Gridiron Warriors

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Either Ohio or Wisconsin was due to be pretty sore Saturday night—unless their struggle at Columbus should result in a tie, a not improbable outcome between two such closely matched elevens. Defeat of either team today meant its elimination from the Big Nine championship race.

The Badgers, under the brilliant tutoring of Dr. Withington, have shown remarkable form this season but the Buckeyes expected to prove formidable opponents for the fast Wisconsin machine.

Notre Dame left South Bend for West Point in better shape than they have been this season. The Catholics have pointed for the Army all season and are prepared, they believe, to stop the rushes of Oliphant and his co-stars.

Illinois was not expected to endanger the championship hopes of the powerful Minnesota eleven at Minneapolis and the best that Zuppke hopes for is to hold down the score.

Northwestern, undefeated so far, is doped to beat Indiana.

enough to accommodate the whole team have been put up for winter. The team was to dress for the game at the Y. M. C. A. and to be taken to the field in automobiles by high school students.

Riverside started the season with a very green team. They have been defeated by Milwaukee North. But Coach Kahle, Riverside mentor, considered to be one of the best football coaches in the state, has developed a team which is the terror of every high school in Wisconsin.

Around Quarterback Machette and Right Halfback Weisel he has built a speedy offense. Even though it was defeated Riverside supporters are still hoping for a championship on the record of later games.

Fiercest Fighting Since Italy Entered War Carried on Where Cadorna Pushed Attacks

VIOLENT FIGHT AT VELIKI

Italians Under Cover of Darkness Scale Shell-swept Slopes and Drive Out Defenders with Bayonets

ROME, Nov. 4.—Twenty-five thousand Austrian soldiers were killed, wounded or captured in the first four days of General Cadorna's new sweep on Trieste.

No offensive on the Austro-Italian front since the beginning of the war has been marked by such fierce fighting. Battling in the Carso mountains, Italians and Austrians have met in hand to hand struggles that have continued at some places all night.

An especially furious combat preceded the capture of Veliki hill by the Italians. The summit was crowned by heavy Austrian artillery that drew a semi-circle of fire against the base of Veliki and prevented Cadorna's men from advancing in frontal attack.

Several small Italian detachments under cover of darkness reached the slopes on the side of Veliki outside this fire zone. Without waiting for reinforcements they scaled the sides, surprised the enemy and after a brief encounter with bayonets and daggers captured the Austrian battery.

In the fighting southeast of Goritz, Italian infantry charged over a wide area which has been flooded by the Vertebella river.

It is estimated here that 100,000 Austrian troops are defending the Isonzo lines now under attack by Cadorna. Several Austria battalions have been practically wiped out of existence.

NATION'S GREATEST
BROUGHT TO CLOSE

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The business of preparing the American voter for exercise of his choice as to the next president of the United States came to a close Saturday.

Saturday night was to mark the official end of the campaign—a free-for-all scramble for votes that has been marked, first, by the most strenuous stumping tour a candidate ever took; second, by reunion, manifested by a great many leaders at least of the two wings of republicanism that split four years ago, third, by raising of the issue of war or peace.

Both democrats and republicans are supremely confident of victory. Both great parties wound up the campaign with a flood of advertising in the newspapers throughout the country which in volume has never been surpassed in political history, and Saturday night were to burn the last red fire and shell the final words of oratory before the celebration of victory Tuesday night.

Hughes Confident

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Charles Evans Hughes' finish to the most strenuous race for a presidency that any man has ever run was on Saturday. He was to finish it in a series of meetings over downtown New York during the day and with a monster night mass meeting in Madison Square Garden. The republican nominee added about thirty additional miles by automobile during the day to the 30,000 he has traveled on rail and by motor since he started August 5.

Wilson Ends Campaign

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Nov. 4.—Putting on his "campaign knuckles," President Wilson officially ended his personal plea for re-election Saturday afternoon. Before 2,000 fellow Jerseymen, he pounded away with both fists regarding the ways and means employed by his opponents in seeking to oust him from office.

It was the most vigorous assault he has made on the republican party and its leaders; and despite the coldness and grayness of the day, the crowds warmed up to his speech and cheered repeatedly.

Frank Hix, who recently came to La Crosse from Ottawa, Minn., considers that what belongs to his wife, who is separated from him, belongs to him. Hix will spend twenty days in Sheriff George J. Ritter's jail.

NO CHANCE OF EARLY PEACE
SAYS UNITED PRESS HEAD
AFTER VISITING WAR CAPITALS

(After more than four months spent in South America and Europe, Roy W. Howard, president of the United Press, returned to New York Saturday. While abroad Howard met and obtained from the leaders in England, France and Germany their personal views on the war and the chances of peace. Though most of the statements made to him were made under the pledge that there should be no direct quotation, they furnish a basis for the conclusion reached in the following article. Howard is one of the very few neutrals permitted to visit the opposing belligerents during the past year.)

BY ROY W. HOWARD
(President of the United Press.)
NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Nowhere, either in England, France, or Germany, is there the slightest evidence yet of an approaching end of the war. In no country is there any indication that the struggle can be terminated within the next two years. There are innumerable indications that the end is much farther off. Lord Northcliffe, who more often probably than any other man, has correctly forecast the war's developments, is now urging the British to make no calculations based upon peace within five years.

Although pushing their offensive on the Somme with great vigor the British land forces will not have attained full fighting strength before next summer. The idea current in Germany that France is too nearly exhausted for further dangerous offensives is unwarranted optimism. The actual figures of the Somme drive, where the French (though only called on to protect the right wing of the British offensive force), have actually taken more ground and more prisoners than the British, is indicative of what the French have in reserve. So also the new thrust at Verdun.

On the other hand, the idea current in the allied countries that Germany sees either defeat or exhaustion as a near menace is quite without justification.

SALEM GARAGE IS WRECKED BY BLAST
OF TIRE AIR TANK

The village of West Salem felt a shock which residents at first thought was an earthquake, and upwards of $1,500 damage was done when a compressed air tank in the West Salem Motor company garage, on Leonard street, exploded at 9 o'clock Saturday morning wrecking several automobiles, tearing out a section of a reinforced concrete wall, hurling bits of the tank and tools in every direction, and injuring Arthur McKenzie, cement contractor of La Crosse, who is engaged in laying gutters for the village streets.

The air tank was comparatively new, and was supposed to be capable of withstanding a pressure of 200 pounds. Mechanics, discovering the air low in the tank when they went to work, had started the motor-driven pump. One of the men glanced at the gauge shortly before the big tank burst. He said later it registered only 180 pounds.

Close to the Tank
McKenzie was standing two feet from the air tank when it exploded. He was sharpening a tool at a work bench. Employees of the garage were standing close by. When the explosion occurred McKenzie was jammed against the vise, while the other men in the shop were picked up like bits of paper in the terrific blast, and thrown to safety.

William Larson, a mechanic, was blown against the rear door of the garage, fifteen feet from where he was working. Frank Wagner, another mechanic, was blown through the front door, fifty feet away.

Larson was stunned but quickly revived. As the blast of air subsided McKenzie fell to the floor, dazed. People who ran into the garage from the street picked nearly fifty bits of glass, blown from a window near where he stood, out of his back. One of McKenzie's hands contained many more pieces of glass, and a physician was called to attend him. He was severely bruised, although able to resume work within an hour after the explosion. McKenzie's working coat was torn to shreds and those in the shop consider his escape from death or more serious injury miraculous.

Bolts Are Bullets

When a TRIBUNE reporter, who drove to West Salem in an automobile while news of the explosion reached here, viewed the wrecked rear part of the building, the impression was that it had been attacked by artillery. Automobiles standing twenty-five feet from where the air tank had stood, were drilled with clean holes, made by flying bits of steel and bolts, and chunks of the tank itself. The demolished tank was blown about twenty feet away, through a wooden partition and against an automobile owned by John Winslow. One door of the car was damaged badly. The brass plate, bearing the name of the manufacturer of the air tank was found inside one of the radiators.

About eight feet of the reinforced concrete wall, near the air tank, was blown into the street, and several windows were shattered. Tools and every article lying loose around the shop were blown entirely out of the building or into corners.

Two Ford cars, standing closer to the tank than any of the other ten or twelve machines, were not damaged.

COTTON PEST IS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—The pink boll worm, most destructive to cotton of all known pests, has been discovered in the Laguna district, Coahuila, Mexico, within 200 miles of the Texas border. It was announced by the agriculture department Saturday afternoon. The department is taking immediate steps to prevent its invasion of the United States.

LOCAL CAMPAIGN WINDS UP WITH TWO BIG RALLIES

John Esch and "Ikey" Karel to Speak at the Yeomen and Centennial Halls

WOLFE TOUR LAST MOVE

Organized Campaign Over Except for Local Man's Dash Over the City Monday

With the exception of the home town tour of "Billy" Wolfe on Monday, the campaigns of both the republican and democratic parties in this vicinity will end Saturday evening with two big rallies. John J. Esch, candidate for re-election to congress, will speak at the republican meeting in Yeomen hall. Judge John C. Karel of Milwaukee, one of the Wilson electors, will speak for the democrats at Centennial hall. Both meetings are set for 8 o'clock.

The democrats will make a final foray into the county Saturday evening, with the appearance of A. H. Schubert at Holmen.

Betting Falls Off
Confidence was the attitude assumed by both sides as to the final result, but the supporters of both candidates were apparently less willing to back their judgment with cold cash. At the places where bets are posted, the situation was little changed from Friday. There was much Wilson money uncovered, but at the S. and S. cigar store there was still $175 of Hughes money which has been posted since Friday. It was predicted that this would be covered during the day, however, since there is known to be $1,000 of Wilson money at the Stoddard hotel.

Monday's activities in the campaign line will be limited in the city to the busy round of the city arranged for W. F. Wolfe. He is expected to make more than a score of brief appearances at factories and theaters, ending up with receptions at the Elks and Eagles clubs.

John Aylward of Madison will hold a democratic rally at Cashton, and A. H. Schubert of this city will finish up his strenuous stumping activities with speeches at Genoa, Stoddard and De Soto.

Judge Karel was expected to arrive in the city from Milwaukee at 5 o'clock this evening. The democrats have appointed a reception committee to meet him, and to remain with him during his stay in the city.

Congressman John J. Esch and Attorney James Thompson spoke at Holmen to an audience of about 400 people Friday night. District Attorney Otto M. Schlach and Attorney J. E. McConnell, spoke to an enthusiastic audience at Mindoro. Attorney Perry E. Slettedland and Attorney Frank Winter addressed an audience of fifty persons at Burr Oak. Congressman Esch's address at Bangor tonight will close the republican campaign in La Crosse county.

WAUKESHA, Wis., Nov. 4.—The pedagogical and student rebellion at Kewatin academy, caused by difficulties between James Buchanan, business manager, and Professor Lafebre, English teacher, was considered over Saturday, as a result of the resignation of Buchanan. Several of the students who have been living at Fountain Inn, the "camp of the ousted instructors", have capitulated and returned to the school.

Rumanian War Office Declares Attacks Repulsed Except on the Left Wing

BUCHAREST, Nov. 4.—Following the Rumanians' successful resistance on their northwestern frontier, the Germans on Friday attacked on the whole Dobrudja line after several days' lull in Mackensen's operations. On the right wing, resting on the Danube, the Rumanians repulsed all attacks. The Rumanian left wing first drove back the enemy but later was compelled to yield ground slightly.

The renewal of the attack in Dobrudja, however, is believed here to be only a feint to conceal the shifting of German troops to the Transylvanian front. It is estimated that the Germans must send five fresh divisions into Transylvania to fill gaps made in their lines in their last offensive and to add enough strength to enable Falkenhayn to make further progress.

EDITORIAL

THERE IS BUT ONE ISSUE

We give this little editorial a place by itself, here on the first page, where everyone will see it.

Today these United States swing and reel under the impact of a stupendous conflict for the presidency. Over the seas not even the horrors of the world's greatest war have served to subdue interest in our struggle, for it is the struggle of humanity, the portent of which they have seen written in their own blood.

What is this fight—what are its issues?

We have searched in vain for them, to formulate them. There seems to be no issue between the candidates, unless differing ways of doing the same thing be issues. What, then, gives the contest intense feeling and stirring activity?

It is this:

Two great men, heading two great parties, are fighting to the death—and to lose may mean party death—fighting as they never have fought before, fighting desperately to determine which of them shall seize and carry forward in the path of destiny the standard of the progressive movement. They know the party that carries the flag of humanity, that bears the people's commission in the cause of human service, is the party that will live and rule in the United States.

PROGRESSIVE LEADERSHIP IS THE ISSUE—THE ONE AND ONLY ISSUE—IN THIS PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN.

Here in Wisconsin we are about to decide whether we shall send back to the United States senate the FATHER AND DEFENDER OF THIS PROGRESSIVE CAUSE the possession of which has become the only national issue. During twenty years we have seen him. Alone, at first, he thrust the issue into republican councils. They thrust him out. He fought his way back. He gathered about him a little band, and the party outlined them. They struggled onward upward. Beaten, trampled, reviled, each biennial they came back, always with increased numbers, always with undimmed vision, always with undaunted courage.

Came a day when their power could not be denied. They carried Wisconsin by storm. They made for it a new government, they gave the state a new charter of liberty.

Then they swept on to Washington. Their leader stood alone in the nation's senate, hissed, insulted. But not for long. Others arrived to reinforce him. In the nation, as in the state, the tide of progressivism rose steadily, inevitably, until today progressivism is so nearly unanimous that there is no national issue between the parties excepting which of them shall have progressivism for its very own issue.

The Wisconsin issue is LA FOLLETTE. It is almost unanimous. SHALL WE NOT MAKE IT UNANIMOUS?

Collisions That Brought Disaster

1898, July 4.—The French liner La Bourgoigne collided with the steamer Comartys-shire with a loss of 580 lives.
1912, April 14.—The White Star liner Titanic collided with iceberg in the Atlantic with a loss of 1,635 lives.
1914, May 29.—Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Ireland collided with the Danish collier Storstad in the St. Lawrence river with the loss of more than 1,000 lives.
1916, November 3.—The British steamers Connemara and Retriever collided in the Irish sea with a reported loss of 300 lives.

TWO EXPERIMENTAL MARKET DAYS SET FOR END OF MONTH

Two market days on Friday and Tuesday, November 24 and 28, were decided upon at a meeting Friday night of the agricultural bureau of the Chamber of Commerce in the council chamber of the city hall. The market days will be experimental, on their success depending their adoption as a lasting institution.

The decision was made after a report of the investigating committee, composed of W. S. Woods, O. W. Muenster, E. J. Burnett and L. Tausche and Mesdames Lillian Finch, W. Thompson and L. F. Easton. The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce will meet next week to annex its stamp of approval, it was said by Secretary Kinsloe.

Three Problems

Three phases of the issue demand careful consideration, it was pointed out:

1. Proper advertising among the farmers of the territory contiguous to La Crosse.
2. Co-operation of the housewives of the city in the market proposition.
3. Impressing on the tradesmen the importance of setting equitable prices on their wares.

As to the first two questions there was little sentiment at the meeting but that publicity of the right sort will be served and the helping hand of the housewives enlisted.

It was on the third phase, that of prices, that the meeting consumed a great deal of its time. That cards be posted on the market displaying the prevailing La Crosse prices for produce and vegetables, for the information of tradesmen and buyers, was the suggestion of Chairman Evenson of the farmers' bureau.

Women See No Difficulty

That little difficulty in reaching equitable prices will be experienced was the opinion of a majority of the women present. They held that prices will automatically be set right, if the buyers are careful in picking bargains.

Patronage of the women of the city in the market was assured by Lillian Finch, president of the Twentieth Century club, who, with others, spoke of the success of the market day in other cities in predicting success in La Crosse.

A committee of four will be named by Secretary Kinsloe and Chairman Evenson on arrangements for the market days. A large tent will house the booths, it was announced.

Plans For The 1916
Charity Ball Are Nearing Completion

Preparations for the Charity Ball of 1916 to be held on Friday, November 10th, are practically completed, and it now seems certain that the ball will prove a decided success in every way. The proceeds are used entirely for charity, and the time and work necessary to carry the plans to a successful finish are donated by the women of the town. The decorating committee has worked untiringly for months and are promising something unusual in the way of decorations. The cabaret and concert is arranged for the best music engaged, and now all that is needed to make the 1916 ball the best ever held is a large attendance.

Establishment of Untold Sea Mystery in Sinking of Ships with All Aboard Prevented

51 PASSENGERS ON ONE

Connemara, Ferry Boat, Outbound from Greenore in Hurricane, Runs into Retriever

By ED L. KEEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Nov. 4.—From 90 to 100 persons are believed to have perished in the sinking of the small British steamers Connemara and Retriever after a collision in the Irish sea Friday night.

Only one survivor is reported thus far. A man named Royle, a member of the Retriever's crew, miraculously escaped death. He brought back the story of the greatest sea disaster since the sinking of the Lusitania and prevented the disappearance of the two ships with their passengers and crews from becoming an untold sea mystery.

It was first feared that upwards of 300 lives had been lost. A check of the number of passengers and crews carried by the vessels lowered the estimate of the casualty list.

The Connemara carried 51 passengers and a crew of thirty men. The Retriever numbered 13. It is not definitely known whether passengers were aboard the Retriever, but revised figures put the total number aboard the two ships at not more than 100.

Only fragmentary reports of the disaster had reached London Saturday afternoon. From these accounts it appears that the Connemara, a ferry of the London & Northwestern railway line, left Greenore, Ireland, at about dusk Friday evening for Holyhead, England, and collided with the inward bound steamer Retriever a few miles off the Irish coast.

The Connemara was carrying fifty-one passengers. So far as is known here, none of them was an American. Leaving Greenore, the ferry steamer ran into the teeth of a violent hurricane. Plunging along through the darkness and storm, with even greater difficulty, the smaller Retriever, in-bound for her home port of Nery, in Carlingford Lough, crashed into the Connemara. Whether the Retriever carried passengers is not known. Apparently few of the Connemara's passengers had retired when the collision occurred.

Crews of both steamers apparently tried to launch the boats. Seaport towns near the scene of the disaster reported the sea tossing so violently last night that it was doubtful if a single boat was gotten over by either steamer. It appears certain that any boat put over either was crushed against the steamer's side or capsized and sucked down in the boiling waters.

The first bodies were washed up along the County Down coast, just north of Carlingford Lough. At the offices of the London and Northwestern it is feared that, excepting Royle, every man aboard both vessels perished.

ALLEGED VOTING
FRAUDS PROBED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—An official estimate that 60,000 negroes have been transported recently from the south into Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and other states was made by the department of justice in a statement declaring that a number of the negroes have fraudulently registered, and that other election frauds disclosed include padding of registration lists reaching into thousands of false names in one city alone. The statement, issued with the sanction of Attorney General Gregory, gives warning that conspiracies to intimidate voters will be prosecuted promptly. It is the department's first official announcement that actual cases of fraud have been developed by its investigators.

GAY TIME SCHEDULED FOR ILLINOIS CLOSE

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—With waving of redlight torches and blaring of brass bands, the campaign was to come to a spectacular close in the middle west Saturday night. Both parties are making all possible noise to attract the "silent" vote, which is to swing the election. Managers of both parties say the middle west will give the answer Tuesday.

HOUSEHOLDERS WIN OIL PLANT FIGHT CHOOSE NEW SITE

Citizens of the south end of the city have won their fight against the erection of an oil plant at the foot of Fifth street, it was indicated by a call for a special meeting of the city council, issued Saturday by Mayor Bentley. The special meeting, besides reconsidering the vote by which the ordinance was passed permitting the erection of the Badger Oil company's plant, have before it an ordinance granting the company permission to build on another site. The new site chosen for the plant, according to the call, is at the intersection of Jackson street and the State Road. The meeting will be held Monday evening.

PRATT RUNS SIXTY YARDS FOR SCORE AGAINST VISITORS

La Crosse scored again in the second quarter, kicking goal. The score is 13 to 0 for La Crosse.

Three thousand people this afternoon saw Marcus Pratt run sixty yards for La Crosse for a touchdown in the first quarter of the game against Riverside High of Milwaukee, last year's claimants of the state title. La Crosse rooters went wild. Goal was missed.

The day was perfect for football, the field being in the best of shape. Riverside was outplayed throughout the first quarter.

DRUGGIST BATHED IN ACID WHEN BOTTLE BREAKS

Carl F. Runckel, proprietor with his brother, Louis Runckel, of a drug store at 124 South Fifth street, was severely burned about the face and arm on Saturday morning when a bottle of acetic acid broke, throwing the contents over him. First aid was administered at the store. Runckel is now at his residence, under the care of a physician.

CHICAGO LOOKS UP HIS RECORD HERE

A ticket from La Crosse to Prairie du Chien, dated October 16, turned the attention of the Chicago police department to this city Saturday, to look up the record of James B. Dunne, alleged shop-lifter and dope-fiend. Dunne is under arrest in Chicago. A bill-fold with the railroad ticket in it was found in his possession, and the Windy City authorities want to know how he came by it.

No loss of a pocket book has been reported to the local police, but they believe they have trace of Dunne in the person of a man who worked for a north side hardware store for a few days two weeks ago. A druggist of the North side said that the man had attempted to purchase "dope" from him.

Dunne is also believed to be wanted in Davenport for burglary.

GIRL SENT AWAY AT OWN REQUEST

She told the court she felt that she ought to be sent away.

An Open Letter to John J. Esch

Hon. John J. Esch,
Congressman Seventh District, La Crosse, Wisconsin.

Dear Sir:
About the first of April of this year I received from you the following letter:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Washington, D. C.

March 29, 1916.

My Dear Sir:

This session of congress has before it many new and grave questions which must be solved in the near future, questions about which there need be no partisanship. In order that your constituents may know your views, I should be very thankful if you would answer one or all of the following questions, returning this letter with your answers after the questions:

1. Do you favor an embargo on the shipment of arms and munitions of war to Europe?
2. Do you favor the adoption of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquor?
3. Do you favor the adoption of a constitutional amendment giving women the right to vote?

4. Do you favor preparedness, that is, an increase in our army and navy, and if so to what extent?
5. Do you favor warning American citizens not to take passage on armed merchant ships belonging to the warring nations of Europe?

The more answers I get, the more valuable this letter will be. Answer the above questions and urge your neighbors to answer them.

Yours very respectfully,
JOHN J. ESCH.

In compliance with your request I promptly answered the questions in the above letter, but in my reply I said to you it seemed to

You have asked hundreds of your constituents what they think about these matters. I repeat what I said when I answered your questions in April—that what you think about them is the more important question, because when you vote on them you are voting for your constituents. I respectfully suggest that you take the public into your confidence in your final address to the voters tonight.

La Crosse, Wisconsin, November 4, 1916.

ZELOTUS S. RICE

For District Attorney of Monroe County

(On the Democratic Ticket)

BECAUSE—

The County needs his constructive ability. During the past year alone his collections for the City of Sparta have amounted to more than his salary for five years. He will serve Monroe County equally well.

His record as an economical administrative officer is already established.

He will be fearless in his prosecution of law violators. A vote for him is a vote for law enforcement without fear or favor.

Republican Voters

If you want to vote the straight Republican ticket, you can mark an X in the circle at the top of the Republican ticket, then scratch the name of the Republican candidate for District Attorney and make your mark in the square opposite the name of ZeLOTUS S. Rice in the first left hand column on the ballot (the third name from the bottom,) thus:

District Attorney—
ZELOTUS S. RICE

Or you may scratch the name of the Republican candidate for District Attorney and write—in place of it, in the Republican column.

Z. S. RICE

Either way your vote will count for ZeLOTUS S. Rice for District Attorney.

Z. S. Rice Non-Partisan Campaign Committee.

WHETHER ARMS FOR DEFENSE IS LEGAL IS NOT SETTLED

Question Which Arose in Lusitania Negotiations Has Been Permitted to Lapse Into Obscurity

Marina Survivors State Submarine Followed Boats for Half Hour; Say Second Torpedo Fired

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Reopening of the armed merchantman controversy between this government and Germany is certain if it is proved the British steamer Marina was armed at the time she was sunk by a German submarine, statements of Secretary Lansing indicated Thursday.

Whether merchantmen have a right to arm for defense is still an open question between this government and Germany, Lansing admitted. This question will be the principal one if negotiations develop with Germany over the death of six Americans on board the Marina, it was stated.

While this government has maintained the right of merchantmen to arm for defense, Germany has never admitted it. The question first arose when the Lusitania was sunk. This government has insisted that merchantmen may arm with any guns not over six inches in calibre. When discussion of this point arose during the Lusitania negotiations, the state department showed the Lusitania was unarmed. Without a recession by this government from its position or an admission by Germany that merchantmen might arm, the question was permitted to lapse.

Claim No Aid Given
LONDON, Nov. 2.—The submarine that sank the British steamer Marina with the probable loss of six American lives followed the ship's boats for half an hour after the Marina went down, but offered no assistance, American survivors reported.

A. Devlin of Norfolk and P. S. Famin of Baltimore, among the Americans landed at Dublin, told practically the same story. The submarine was submerged when she fired the first torpedo, they said, but came to the surface and after seeing that the steamer remained afloat shot another torpedo into the port side.

Dispatches from Queenstown on Thursday said the missing members of the Marina's crew have been given up as lost. Practically all patrol boats that might have picked them up have been reported.

Consul Frost was to telegraph summaries of the affidavits he obtained from American survivors and also depositions of the surviving officers Thursday.

H. R. Middleton of Fredericksburg, Va., reported in press dispatches that he had perished, was saved. Consul Frost telegraphed on Thursday. The name of the sixth American victim reported Wednesday to be "Brue" is false, the consul reported.

Information Incomplete.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The state department continued gathering the facts in the Marina case and withholding what it learned from all reporters save President Wilson.

The president was kept in constant touch with every development, at his own request. He will be the first advised when Berlin's response comes to the department's request for information the German admiral may have concerning the disaster that cost six American lives.

From the American embassy at London and the consulate at Queenstown the state department sought data not only on the question of whether the Marina received warning before she was torpedoed, but as to the armament she carried and her relation to the British admiralty.

Bernstorff Calls on Berlin
Ambassador Bernstorff Wednesday afternoon said he had sent a wireless message to Berlin asking for all information that may be obtained there concerning the sinking of the Marina.

He expressed his own disbelief in the reports thus far received, which indicate that the submarine gave the Marina no warning.

Famous Union Leader Is Brought Back to Neighborhood by Tour and Goes to Mrs. Dittlinger

HE HAS HALF A DAY Goes from Blair via Galesville to Lewis Valley Farm Where Lost Sister Awaits

Whirled back to the vicinity of La Crosse by the wheel of his speaking engagements, Andrew Furuseth, famous father of the La Follette Seaman's act, was scheduled on Wednesday to take a little side trip up Lewis Valley on a matter entirely unrelated with politics or union affairs. It was to meet the sister he never saw, Mrs. Olina Dittlinger, whom the TRIBUNE found for him a fortnight ago, after he had been carried out of reach by his speaking engagements.

Mr. Furuseth spoke Wednesday night at Blair. He was to have come to La Crosse at noon Thursday with half-day free from engagements, in which his friends were going to whisk him by auto up the county past Holmen, to where his sister was waiting in her little farm home. At 2 o'clock, however, he had not arrived, and it was believed that he had gone from Blair to the Dittlinger farm via Galesville, in order to have a longer time to spend with his sister. This would be much the shorter route, and with his visit rigidly curtailed by his speaking dates, it was believed that Mr. Furuseth had availed himself of the quickest way, in order to spend all the time possible with his lost sister.

NEENAH SWITCHMEN BRING INVESTIGATION OF HOURS OF LABOR

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 2.—A statewide investigation of hours and conditions of labor for railroad switchmen may result from the hearing to be held in Neenah Thursday by the railroad commission on November 9 in the case of the complaint of the E. R. Knowlton Lodge No. 257 of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, against the conditions existing in the Soo yards at Neenah and Menasha.

It is charged in the complaint by the railroad men that there are only two crews of two men each employed in the Neenah-Menasha yards and that this is an insufficient number to protect life, health and safety of the men and the public.

ON BOARD THE HUGHES SPECIAL, BATAVIA, N. Both entered into the spirit of the festivities, wore fancy caps and blew horns.

Dr. Haffner, Physician of Chihuahua, Knocked Senseless; Relief Train Hurries from Juarez

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 2.—Twenty-eight Mexican de facto soldiers, forming the escort to a train on the Mexican Central railway line, were butchered in cold blood, four hundred passengers were lined up and robbed and a German subject beaten senseless by two hundred Villista bandits at Laguna last Monday, when the railway line was cut by the Villistas.

Official announcement to this effect was made here Thursday by Consul Soriano Breve.

The town of Laguna is about 150 miles straight south of the American border. An official bulletin giving meager details of the "butchery" reached the border when the wires were reopened Thursday.

Bandit Chieftains Murgu and Guesado, allied with Villa and noted for their cruelty, were in command of the Villista detachment.

The train, which left Juarez Monday, was crowded with passengers. All were ordered from the cars, lined up and robbed of their valuables and in some cases of their clothing and shoes.

Dr. Haffner, a German physician of Chihuahua City, was returning from El Paso to his home. One bandit struck him over the head with a rifle butt, rendering him unconscious, according to advices received at the Carranza consulate. Few other passengers were harmed, it is believed, unless they resisted.

As information of the affair reached Chihuahua City, a military train with 400 de facto soldiers aboard was hurried north to San Juan in an attempt to strike the raiders.

The consulate's announcement tacitly admitted that the railway line is still severed at several points and Chihuahua City still isolated. No trains were leaving Juarez Thursday.

The official bulletin continues: "The main column of General Maycotte reached Ortiz, about eighty miles south of Chihuahua City yesterday, on the way to Santa Rosalia. San Buena Ventura and Namiquipa recaptured by government troops. Three bandits executed at Namiquipa."

By isolating Chihuahua City from all food supplies, munitions and troop reinforcements, Villa plans to force an evacuation of the city by Carranzistas, military men here believe. Unless the break in railway lines is repaired within a very short time, it is generally conceded General Trevino will be pushed to the extremity of leaving the capital.

The city has a heavy garrison of Carranzistas and a large civil population dependent upon food supplies from the north and south.

Officials of the Mexican de facto government announced Thursday that two military trains have been sent out from Chihuahua City with several hundred de facto soldiers to guard the operations of the repair train in the effort to throw up temporary bridges in place of those burned by Villistas. Officials declared trains would be running again in a few days.

From reliable sources it was learned that a Villista raiding party under command of General Salazar was hurried farther north to destroy more bridges and harass trains, if any were sent out.

WILSON, "BOB" AND WILLIAMS VICTORS IN SCHOOL BALLOT

Wilson Leads Hughes by Nearly 150 Out of Thousand Votes Cast by Pupils and Faculty

JOLIVETTE AND WEBER Lunde, Tetley, Kleeber, Schlabach, Thompson and Lueth Lead for County Offices

If the sentiment at the La Crosse high school accurately reflects the sentiment at large in the city, the vote next Tuesday, so far as La Crosse is concerned, will result in the victory for the following:

Woodrow Wilson, "Bob" La Follette, Burt Williams.

Close to a thousand votes were cast in the high school poll which concluded Wednesday evening, following a hot campaign inside the walls of the institution, in which mass meetings, literature, posters and all the machinery of a regular campaign were employed.

As a result, Wilson received 496 to Hughes 359. Williams beat Philipp 477 to 377. La Follette defeated Wolfe 491 to 372.

The County Race.

An interesting angle of the high school vote is the outcome of the contests for county offices, about which there is considerable speculation. According to the high school showing, Ole Lunde, John Weber, W. L. Tetley, Leonard Kleeber, Bert Jolivette, Otto Schlabach, Andrew E. Thompson and Henry Lueth are in the lead.

John J. Esch was given a two-to-one vote over Herman Grothophorst for congress. Carl Kurtzsch for county clerk, and John J. Esch, republican candidate for member of congress, both polled this total. The results are as follows:

SAYS WILSON FEARS SHIFT

WICHITA, Kas., Nov. 2.—"President Wilson's campaign managers," said Allan Benson, socialist candidate for president, before 2,000 persons Wednesday night, "are resorting to desperate measures in an attempt to stop the heavy shifting of voters that they know has already started from the democratic party to the socialist party."

KOENIG HOPES TO LAND $10,000,000 CARGO FROM DIVER

Deutschland's Load Said to Contain Jewels, Besides Possibly Stocks and Bonds

THE CREW IS IDOLIZED Sailors Escape Townswomen Only by Signing Photos of the Merchant Diver

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 2.—Smiling Captain Koenig, skipper of the green German submarine freighter Deutschland, confidently thought Thursday he would be able to unload his $10,000,000 cargo without interference from the United States.

He claimed there was no hitch about this, but Collector of Port M. Govgrn of "Connecticut," evidently thought different, for he hastened to Hartford Wednesday to confer with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, presumably about the jewels and the stocks and bonds said to be aboard.

Town Aroused

Sporting New London is wider awake now than it has been since the days when the British sneaked up the channel, captured the fort atop the Groton hills and slew the brave American commander.

Captain Koenig and his crew are cheered every time they appear on the street. A sixteen-year-old member of the crew, with several sturdy fellows, members narrowly escaped employment.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 2.—"We'll probably turn the Deutschland into a museum after the war and charge ten cents admission," said Captain Koenig, her commander, Thursday.

"But now, though, we're planning to have no visitors aboard except the mayor of New London."

The story goes that when the Scott greeted the Deutschland and inquired if it wanted a tow, a voice from aboard the submarine answered "No, we want beer."

Anti-American Feeling Strong

Scuffs at Blockade

"It's only a spy system, a chain of commercial agents," he said, "and if the British navy comes out, why we'll be ready for them, though, frankly, we cannot catch up to England's naval strength during the war."

Germany thinks the war will last at least another year and it is confident of the outcome.

The submarine is the vessel of the future. Battleships are no good any more and anybody who doesn't see that must wear blinders. I think the United States is beginning to realize it."

BERLIN ADMITS FALL OF LAST VERDUN FORT IN HANDS OF GERMANS

SAY RUMANIANS HOLD ON

Austro-Germans Checked in Advance on Campolung, But Continue Attacks on Alt Valley

PETROGRAD, Nov. 2.—Field Marshal Mackensen has halted his advance in Dobrudja, apparently because of a shortage of men to protect his long line along the river Danube.

Dispatches from Bucharest declare that Mackensen has been forced to send several regiments to the Transylvanian front to aid Falkenhayn. The withdrawal of these troops is said to have checked his offensive operations.

Practically everywhere along the Transylvanian front except south of Red Tower pass, the Rumanians are holding their own. The Austro-Germans have been checked in their advance on Campolung, but are continuing their heavy attacks in the Alt valley, where the loss of two villages by the Rumanians was officially conceded Wednesday.

Constantia Shelled

BERLIN, via Wireless to Sarville, Nov. 2.—Enemy warships have shelled the Rumanian black seaport of Constantia recently captured by the Germans and Bulgars, without success, it was officially announced on Thursday.

Rumanian attacks against the Austro-German troops that had advanced beyond Althaus and Predal pass failed under loss, the war office stated. "We captured eight officers and two hundred men. South of Red Tower pass engagements which are favorable to us continue."

On the Macedonian front, Serbian advances in the Cerna bend and north of Nidze Planina were repulsed. "On the Strumitza front there have been active foreground engagements."

French attacks in the sector of Les Boues and Rancourt brought small advantages for the enemy. Northeast of Morval and on the northwest edge of Pierre Vaast wood the enemy attacks were generally repulsed with sanguinary losses. Our troops, in spite of tenacious French resistance, made an advance in the north of Salliy.

Claim Defeat of Russian
"In the eastern war theater Prince Leopold's front, in the army group of General von Linsingen, Westphalian and East Prussian troops, under Major General von Dittfurth's command stormed Russian advanced positions near and south of Vitovka on the left bank of the Stokhod. Besides suffering heavy losses, the enemy left twenty-two officers and 1,508 men in our hands. We captured ten machine guns and three mine throwers. Our losses were small."

Further south, near Alexandropol, we brought back six prisoners from a successful reconnoitering raid. On the Archduke Carl's front, in the Carpathians, there were successful enterprises against Russian advanced positions north of Dorca Vatra.

FORT LITERALLY BLOWN INTO BITS BERLIN DECLARED

Statement Says Fort Was Evacuated During Night Without Disturbance from French Attackers

ARTILLERYING TERRIFIC

Vaux Follows Fort Douaumont, Which Was Retaken by the French in Their Recent Offensive

BERLIN, via Wireless to Sarville, No. 2.—Fort Vaux, on the northeast front of Verdun, has been evacuated by German troops, it was officially announced Thursday.

"The artillery engagement on the east bank of the Meuse repeatedly increased to great intensity," said the war office. "The French directed especially heavy destructive fire against Fort Vaux, which had already been evacuated during the night by our troops, following a given order and without being disturbed by the enemy. Important parts of the fort were blasted by gas before withdrawal."

Fort Vaux was the last of the Verdun forts remaining in the hands of the Germans. Fort Douaumont, having been recaptured by the French in their recent offensive, United Press dispatches from the Verdun front Saturday night declared that Fort Vaux was surrounded on three sides by the French, whose artillery was ringing the fortress with fire, cutting off supplies to the Germans.

Captured June 6

Fort Vaux was captured by the Germans on June 6, after a terrific battle. It occupied a strong position on the summit of a hill and the French had repeatedly repulsed storming attacks up its steep sides. The Germans systematically reduced the French defenses by constant artillery fire until the fort was no longer tenable. Its evacuation by the Germans came on the 32nd day of the great struggle at Verdun.

North of the Somme artillery activity was renewed in local action. An English advance north of Courcellette was easily repulsed.

French attacks in the sector of Les Boues and Rancourt brought small advantages for the enemy. Northeast of Morval and on the northwest edge of Pierre Vaast wood the enemy attacks were generally repulsed with sanguinary losses. Our troops, in spite of tenacious French resistance, made an advance in the north of Salliy.

ALUMNI ROOTER-KINGS LEAD FOOTBALL MARCH BEFORE BIGGEST GAME

Downtown La Crosse will rock with cheers and music Friday evening. It will not, however, be related to the presidential campaign. It will be an outpouring of high school spirit preparatory to the big game of the 1916 football season—Saturday's contest with Riverside High of Milwaukee. Upon the outcome of the Riverside game depends La Crosse's claim to a second state championship. Moreover, the Red and Black team has been undefeated for two years and is going into the game determined to keep its record clear.

Led by a band and illuminated by red fire and torches, the parade will start from the high school at 7 o'clock Friday evening, Myron S. Locke, advertising manager of the Doerflinger store, but once a famous cheer leader of the high school, and John Robinson, also a former rooter king alumnus, will be the drum majors of the march, and many alumni of the high school are expected to join in the procession and add their voices to the familiar yell.

The parade will march from the high school down Sixteenth street to Main, west on Main to Third street, north to State, west to Second, south to Main, east to Third. At Third and Main streets the parade will mass for a rooting session.

From Third and Main the march will continue to Pearl street, east on Pearl to Fourth, north to State street. At Fourth and State streets there will be another demonstration, and from there the parade will go up State to Fifth and south to the La Crosse theater where there will be more cheers. The parade will disband at Fifth and King streets.

LABOR

Do You Want Freedom or Do You Want Slavery?

American labor was enslaved. The injunction was its yoke. Woodrow Wilson destroyed the yoke and set labor free.

Woodrow Wilson was the first president to give labor a place in his cabinet. He made William B. Wilson, a union miner, secretary of labor.

A republican advertisement, seeking to paint Hughes as a friend of labor, quoted "Legislative News", published by the New York State Federation of Labor, as follows: "He (Hughes) was the greatest friend of labor laws that ever occupied the governor's chair in Albany."

That was in 1910. Let us see what "Legislative News" thinks about Mr. Hughes now. On October 31, 1916, Editor John M. O'Hanlan said:

"I am supporting President Wilson both personally and in 'Legislative News'. As a candidate for president x x x x Mr. Hughes has attacked the sincerity and intelligence of organized labor. x x x x The entire labor movement of the state of New York, almost without exception, is in favor of the re-election of President Wilson. No wage earner should fail to support him."

Thomas E. Ryan, chairman of the New York State Board of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, in his official report says:

"As governor Charles E. Hughes vetoed these labor measures: A FULL CREW BILL; A VESTIBULE BILL; AN ANTI-STRIKEBREAKERS' BILL; AN ANTI-COLLISION BILL; A CONEY ISLAND FIVE-CENT FARE BILL."

Following is the statement of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor:

"In my experience with United States Congresses during two score years I have not seen anything like the fine spirit toward labor, toward the rights and welfare of all the people, pervading all the branches of the Wilson administration. Labor has been recognized neither in the spirit of deference on the one hand, nor of patronage on the other."

"But the spirit of recognition has been the right one: that labor should be made part of the National Councils; that its patriotism should be conceded, and that its knowledge of its own needs should give it

paramount voice in legislation directly and peculiarly affecting its own rights."

"This fundamental right spirit has guided the Wilson administration to wise and righteous labor legislation. Because of that spirit and its results in definite laws and policies, how can liberty-loving Americans loyal to the Republic and its ideals fail to sustain an Executive who has done so much for their realization?"

SAMUEL GOMPERS,
President, American Federation of Labor.
Washington, D. C., August 25, 1916.

The following labor leaders have publicly endorsed President Wilson for re-election:

ANDREW FURUSETH, president International Seamen's Union of America.

JOHN B. LENNON, treasurer American Federation of Labor.

PAUL SCHARRENBURG, secretary California State Federation of Labor.

T. A. HANSON, Secretary - treasurer International Seamen's Union of America.

JOHN R. ALPINE, president United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters.

JOHN FITZPATRICK, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Against the word of all these great leaders of labor Mr. Hughes brings to sustain his claim for labor support ONLY THE STATEMENT OF A SINGLE LABOR leader made in 1910, but now emphatically REPUDIATED by its author.

So much for what men think; what men do is of greater importance. Over the shoulders of the Adamson bill, which he condemns and declares unconstitutional, Mr. Hughes is attacking the Wilson labor program consisting of forty-two labor laws constituting LABOR'S CHARTER OF FREEDOM. Had he remained a justice of the supreme court, MR. HUGHES WOULD HAVE VOTED TO DESTROY THE ADAMSON LAW. What would he do as president?

Men, what shall it be:

FORWARD WITH FREE LABOR, UNDER WILSON OR BACKWARD TO SLAVE LABOR, UNDER HUGHES?

Cedar Rapids, Ia., boys, spent some time in McGregor Tuesday. On the sixth of October they shipped their canoe and outfit to Blue Earth, Minnesota. From that place they paddled down the Blue Earth river to where it joins the Minnesota river to Mankato, then down the Minnesota to a point above St. Paul where they entered the Mississippi. They expect to finish their trip at Dubuque, taking train from there for home. They had a somewhat exciting time on the Blue Earth river on account of low water and rapids, were held up on the Minnesota river by a snowstorm and had a stormy crossing of Lake Pepin but otherwise say the trip was fine despite the lateness of the season.

Special for Candidate
The special train with Democratic Nominee for Governor E. T. Meredith, National Committee man W. Marsh, United States Attorney Porter Maurice Connolly and other prominent speakers aboard will reach North McGregor from Mason City at 1:55 p. m. Friday and leave McGregor at 2:35 giving forty minutes time for the speakers to make short addresses. The Iowa State Band, the finest band in the state, will be on the train and will play at both towns. The local committee is billing the country around McGregor and it is expected a crowd will be here to greet and hear Mr. Meredith and his distinguished party. The train will make ten minute stops in Clayton county at Luana, Monona, Clayton, Guttenberg and Buena Vista.

Books Show Advance
As an evidence of the problem that all bakers in the United States are facing at the present time the books of the Bickel Baking company of McGregor, a concern that is doing a large business in Northern Iowa, Southern Minnesota and Southwest Wisconsin, show the following extreme advance in materials since 1914. At the beginning of the war in July, 1914 flour was $4.25 per barrel; it is now $10.00 to $10.50. Sugar, 100 pounds was $4.50; it is now $7.85. Lard, 100 pounds, was $10.00; it is now $17.00. Sweet con-

It is now $11.00. Raisins per pound were 60c; they are now 12c. Besides the advance in the ingredients used in making bread, box materials and bread wrappers have advanced seventy-five per cent.

Elwell Reports
W. H. C. Elwell who represented McGregor at the convention of the Mississippi Valley Improvement association in La Crosse will give the Commercial club here a report of the speeches and work of the convention.

DUTIES, CONSIDERED PROHIBITIVE, ARE IN EFFECT IN MEXICO

JUAREZ, Mexico, Nov. 2.—A new scale of duties on imports into Mexico went into effect Thursday, under a decree issued recently by First Chief Carranza. Duties on many staples, including food and clothing, have been raised to almost prohibitive figures and it was predicted importation of some articles would be stopped altogether.

The duty on oats, of which large quantities are being shipped to the American expedition, has been raised to $7.50 per ton. Wheat, corn and hay, however, are free. The heaviest duties have been placed on milk at twenty cents per kilo (two and a half pounds), ten cents per kilo on soap and flour and twenty cents per kilo on canned meats.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Vanish

(Helps to Beauty)
A safe, reliable home-treatment for the quick removal of superfluous hairs from your face or neck is as follows: Mix a stiff paste with some water and powdered delatone, apply to objectionable hairs and let it set for 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This simple treatment is unfailing and no pain or inconvenience attends its use, but to avoid disappointment be certain you get genuine delatone.

Save Your "Jits" Intrinsic Value Is Seven Cents

A nickel, at the present prices in the silver market, is worth between six and seven cents, according to the statement of a normal school pedagog who recently took the trouble to assay one of Uncle Sam's jitters. Hence, if you have twenty nickels, you have nearer a dollar and a quarter than a dollar, in actual value. The normal professor, however, did not mention any way by which the increased value of the despised "jit" can be realized. Inquiry at the banks discovered that they are still taking Uncle Sam's word for it that a nickel is only five cents' worth.

Bullion in a nickel is ordinarily worth something less than five cents. A silver dollar, in normal times, is only worth about 67 cents. The only time you can be sure of having exactly a dollar is when you possess twenty-two and a fraction trains of gold.

Sawdust Extinguishes Fires

Spreading over burning gasoline a mixture of 10 pounds of bicarbonate of soda and 12 pounds of common sawdust has been found by the British Fire Prevention committee the most effective method of extinguishing a small fire of this kind. The sawdust, though not necessarily wet, must be free from shavings and chips, and even alone proves better than such materials as sand. It is explained that the coating of sawdust excludes the oxygen of the air from the liquid, while the carbonic acid set free from the salt by the heat tends further to smother the flame.

DEUTSCHLAND CAME THROUGH CORDON OF HOSTILE BOATS

Submarine Submerged for Considerable Distance to Avoid Contact with British Warships

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 2.—Phishing and diving—at times in the teeth of a storm—the German merchant submarine Deutschland made her second trip to the United States through a veritable lane of allied warships. She came out of the darkness and the waves during the early morning hours on Wednesday. Nosing her way up the sound she was quickly warped in alongside her "mother-ship" the Willahad, and with her sailors at liberty some of the details of her second remarkable voyage were learned.

Avoid Hostile Craft
At one time the submarine freighter was submerged for ten hours in mid-ocean. The Deutschland was forced to spend this time beneath the waves owing to the presence of hostile war craft lurking nearby, one of the crew declared. Captain Koenig, the smiling commander, who brought the Deutschland on her first voyage, was again in command, but up to an early hour Wednesday afternoon had been so busily engaged with officials of the company operating the merchant submersible he had not been able to tell his story of the second trip.

"We saw lots and lots of hostile ships," said one of the Deutschland's sailors. He was a big six-foot German. Smiling good-naturedly he told in German snippets of the story of the trip which again brought the Deutschland over and under the ocean.

"There were many more enemy warships out than we saw on the first voyage," he went on. "There seemed to be a regular lane of cruisers and ships of other types."

Submerged Great Deal
"I do not know how much of the trip was under water, but the longest continuous period we were submerged was ten hours. This was somewhere in about mid-ocean. Hostile ships were sighted and we were forced to drop out of sight."

"But, it's about the same old story now. Not much difference between this trip and the first one except the enemy ships," the sailor concluded.

BETROTHED

By ELIZABETH SHIELDS

(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

It was two weeks before Hilda's wedding day. She looked thin and unhappy and a wistful smile trembled at the corners of her mouth. Dreamy-eyed, she watched her mother select her trousseau.

"You act as if you were not interested in your gowns," complained her mother.

"It's taking an awful lot of time and energy," reflected Hilda.

"Well, I never!" gasped her mother. "And I'm sure I'm doing everything I can to save you. Her tone was hesitant, a little hurt. Of course it takes time to get the finest and best that is in the shops."

Her mother turned to her, mutely beseeching. Speech was impossible. "O, well," laughed Hilda, "something might happen, you know."

"You're acting very much as though you hoped something would," her mother gazed helplessly at her. Halfheartedly Hilda undid the wrappings of numerous bundles. Both gowns and hats were tossed aside in an indifferent heap.

"Your actions are very unbecoming," remonstrated her mother. "You are one of the very fortunate girls. Think of becoming a bride of such a man as Stuart Dale!"

Hilda wished people, her mother included, would stop singing Stuart's praises. During the three swift months she had been engaged, she had listened desperately to it. None of her friends, had they known her state, would have been able to find any possible reason for her discontent, except of course that Pete O'Neill affair. But they would have laughed at that.

Stuart was the one perfect man the town boasted. Like Hilda's family, his wealth was great. The homes

SCIATICA AND DEEP SEATED RHEUMATIC PAINS

Probably no affliction is more common or responsible for more intense suffering than rheumatism. Thousands of otherwise robust persons drag through a life of misery and agony.

Here is a new treatment that the doctors, Simplex, of Moore's Emerald Oil and apply to the affected parts. It's easy and pleasant to use, and there is no doubt but what it yields quickly to its powerful, penetrating influence. The first application brings blessed relief. All good druggists have it.

HAVE YOU A FRIEND WITH SKIN TROUBLE?

If you know a friend suffering with eczema or some such itching, burning eruption, what greater kindness could you do him than to say:

"Why don't you try Resinol Ointment? I know you have experimented with a dozen treatments, but I believe Resinol is different. In the first place, doctors have prescribed it for years. And then, Resinol does not claim to be a 'cure-all'—simply a soothing, healing dressing, free from all harsh drugs, that USUALLY proves successful in just such cases as yours."

of the parents of both young people were the pride of Claremont. In social position, in money and fashions, every other family in the town meekly followed. Stuart was handsome, with just proper width of shoulders. His brow was noble. He had a perfect command of his own mind. His hair was black and smooth. Immediately following the announcement of their engagement, Hilda was showered with entertainment. Now parties were all over and the last moments were ardently given over to the trousseau.

Again she picked up the filmy lace and tulle garments. She stared dreamily into space. Her mother sighed.

"Weren't you the least bit uncertain about marrying father," she questioned her mother.

"I've never been uncertain about anything after I made up my mind to do it. Such talk is very upsetting, dear. I think you must be tired out. You're acting strangely."

Hilda shook her head. "No I'm not," she responded cheerfully. But she left the room and the house. She hurried down the road towards the shipping district of the town. She walked along in a slowly dying sunset that threw orange and gray and violet lights on the trees. She went on and on, wrapped in a sweetly confusing mood. She reviewed the short, eager courtship of Stuart's. They had known each other always. Then his feeling of companionship had suddenly changed to a consuming devotion. When he had won her the thrilling devotion had reduced itself, quietly to a sort of perfectly flawless companionship. Just like everything about Stuart. A bewildered, helpless look flashed in her eyes.

She had expected Stuart's love to make so much difference in her life. But it did not. She had her memories still to combat as acutely as if Stuart's love was not now part of her life. She hurried steadily on toward Main street, as if she would run away from the haunting thoughts of that night long before Stuart had asked her to be his wife. That one happy hour! Stolen happiness that belonged to her alone!

At this point in her thought her eyes trailed upward to a familiar sign above one of the store doors. "O'Neill's Feed and Grain Store," he read. She had been reading that sign all her lifetime, but she stopped as if fascinated at the words. Through the open doorway she encountered the eager questioning face of Pete O'Neill. She caught her lips between her teeth. In a panic she turned to run. A moment later Peter swung up to her. His blue eyes were ablaze.

"So you're engaged to that fellow Dale?" He swallowed hard.

"We're to be married two weeks from today. In the morning at ten," defiantly she gave him all the details. He stared steadily into her brown eyes. Her lids fluttered beneath his look.

"You can't marry him," he told her. "You haven't forgotten me. I'm marrying the man I—I love," her voice wavered. She turned to him entreatingly.

"You're marrying a man of your own kind, who can keep you in good style. You're afraid to trust yourself."

"He is the man of my choice," she interrupted him.

"But you can't forget me, Hilda. You're remembering now, that last night we met up there," he motioned in the direction of the hill.

Hilda was not looking at him now. "I don't know what night you're talking about," she said.

"Look at me, dear," he rushed on feverishly, "you don't belong to him. Why, you could not be a wife to him. You belong to me."

"You're talking about things that happened ages ago," said Hilda slowly. Her face was white.

"Why, girl, you were my sweet heart when you were 10 and you used to laugh at him. Maybe I'm not your kind, but I've always been your lover." He laughed bitterly.

The corners of Hilda's mouth quivered. "I'm to marry another man. You can't talk like that to me now."

"But you won't marry him. You're going to marry me, now, tonight," he said steadily.

"You're mad, Pete," Hilda lifted her eyes, fascinated. Pete always thrilled her. "That's all over between us. You must go away, so quickly."

Coming close to her, Pete whispered, "You could not be his wife, because you love me. You gave yourself to me that night up there."

White and shaken, Hilda pushed him away with quivering fingers. Almost sobbing, she whispered, "Go, please go. You deserted me, cruelly for weeks after that night."

"Deserted?" echoed Pete. "You never came to the meeting place anywhere. I watched for you there. I heard of your engagement. Then she looked up pitifully. "I was afraid to come to you again."

"Without warning Pete imprisoned her, his lips on hers. All the sweetness of romance was in his tender voice as he told her of his love. In reply to a question, Hilda smiled contentedly. "I shall be your wife, dear as soon as you wish," she said. At the lively stable Pete hurried her into a carriage and turned the horse toward the church that stood on the summit of the hill.

HATCHING MACHINE FOR FISH
Because of the increasing demand for fish to stock ponds and streams, the United States bureau has been compelled to develop a machine to facilitate hatching. It is an automatic hatching par of cylindrical shape and round bottom supported on glass knobs. It contains two outlets into which glass tubes are fitted. Fresh water flows in through one tube and waste water out through the other.
Two quarts of water passes through the tubes each minute at a pressure of eight pounds to the square inch.
In high temperature eggs may be hatched in three days although eight is the usual time. The hatching jar can hold 100,000 fish at a time.

DIGGING FOR THE BURIED ISSUES

Election day is at hand, and the net result of party efforts to date is to complicate the situation with confusion to which both parties have contributed. Beneath the surface of this campaign debris lie a few simple facts. Upon these facts must interpreta- tion and decision depend, and it is the province of the inde- pendent newspaper to arrange the important truths that are in- volved before the voter in a manner so simple as to facilitate him in reaching his conclusion.

Elements in the decision will be the characters and past records of the men as well as what they propose for the future, and these are all things that can be definitely ascertained.

To begin with, the men:

President Wilson is an idealist of the practical type. He does not lack constructive ability of that caliber essential in the high office which he holds. He is honest, an indefatigable worker and intensely patriotic. He is scholarly, a great rhetorician, but the charge that he is too academic in his treatment of public questions cannot be demonstrated in a general way. That he frequently changes his mind in relation to large public matters, is true, but it is at least tenable that the ability to change his mind was a valuable asset of a president who entered office with the habits of thought instilled by a century of peace, and who was suddenly confronted by a world war that made chaos of the precedents of peace. Humanity is strongly developed in his char- acter, with considerable caution, and an underlying strain of pugnacity.

Mr. Hughes possesses the highest type of the legal mind. His training goes largely to action and efficiency. He has initiative for big enterprises and a wonderful capacity for detail. His mas- tery of economic problems has been demonstrated in three ca- pacities: those of the attorney, the jurist and the executive. While less given to idealism than Mr. Wilson, the humanities occupy a large place in his character, and this side of his nature always manifests itself in his dealings with public questions. His is the vigorous type of patriotism, but is characterized by deliberation as well as force.

Here are a few chances for preference of the hair-line type, but the voter who must make his choice upon no other basis would find himself in the position of the admirer who wishes he might be alone with one of them, with "Colter dear charmer away". No fair citizen will question that both of these men are "presidential timber".

So much for the personalities of Woodrow Wilson and Charles Evans Hughes. Let us now turn to their public records.

Mr. Hughes' campaign, upon the retrospective side, is being conducted largely upon his record as governor of New York. In that capacity he fathered a compensation law, laws limiting the hours of labor for men in public utility service, a comprehensive line of child labor laws, a law for the semi-monthly payment of wages, and a legal program for welfare in workshops. He stopped race-track gambling and worked hard for a primary election law.

As governor Mr. Hughes vetoed the two-cent passenger fare law, five-cent Coney Island street car fare, equal pay for teachers bill; he publicly demanded the defeat of an income tax law.

Both his reasons for vetoing the latter measures and the efficiency of the laws which he did pass are debated. But consid- ering the period in which his administration came the general conclusion must be that the trend of his work was decidedly progressive. It has an important bearing upon the matter that the first act of Mr. Hughes' administration was to throw out Boss Barnes and his satellites and to conduct public affairs in the open.

Somewhat later than Mr. Hughes, President Wilson became governor of a state. In New Jersey he found much the same situation that Mr. Hughes found in New York—a boss-ridden state wherein was a crying necessity for definite constructive re- forms in the interest of the general public. There is a remarkable likeness between the state administrations of these two men. Mr. Wilson's first act was to annihilate bossism and to take his administration to the people. He prosecuted a program of re- formation one of the big assets of which was a law to rehabili- tate the states in the eyes of the nation. New Jersey had enacted a corporation law which invited trusts and combinations that desired to escape the regulation of other states to incorporate under the laws of New Jersey. Governor Wilson placed the cor- poration law of the state upon an honest basis.

Mr. Wilson's legislative program in New Jersey included employers' liability and workmen's compensation laws; child labor laws prohibiting employment of children under sixteen years between seven p. m. and seven a. m. and forbidding the employment of children during school hours; also establishing a fifty-eight hour week; a series of safety and health laws affecting labor; eight-hour day on state, county and municipal work; eliminating contract labor in prisons. No attack has been made by the president's opponents on any of this legislation and it is not alleged that his administration as governor was not in all essentials progressive.

There seems nothing dead in this "deadly parallel", and one is forced to the conclusion that as state executives Wilson and Hughes created no divergence that can be made the basis of a serious campaign issue.

GERMANS CAMPAIGN TO MAKE GOVERNMENT MORE RESPONSIBLE TO PEOPLE
By CARL W. ACKERMAN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
BERLIN, Nov. 2.—Agitation for changes to make the German govern- ment more responsible to the rep- resentatives of the people is contin- uing in the German newspaper and the reichstag.

Writing in the Leipzig Tageblatt, Paul Junck, a member of the reich- stag, demands that parliamentary under-secretaries be named to represent the government departments at all sittings of Germany's legislative body. He believes that these secre- taries should be present to answer queries and keep the reichstag in closer touch with the government's policies.

This is only one of a number of re- cent suggestions illustrating the growth of one of the most important movements in the domestic affairs of Germany in recent years.

No doubt more young men would be able to earn their own living if they did not have rich and foolish fathers to support them.

THE TRIBUNE'S DAILY TRAVELETTE

(By Nilsch)

MONROVIA
A dirty dilapidated little town is Monrovia, the capital of Liberia. The houses are built of wood, brick and corrugated iron. They are steep, narrow, shambling structures, with high pitched roofs and small balcon- ies that are crumbling rapidly to pieces. The executive mansion, as the president's house is called, was evidently once a pretentious struc- ture, but now it presents a rather sad appearance. Several of its win- dows are boarded over the window- panes have been broken and inside its elaborate furnishings are worn and faded.

The streets of Monrovia are merely crude footpaths through the jungle, occasionally bridged with crack- ing boxes and gin cases when lying over deep marshy ditches. Such a road leads to the big brick college where the Monrovians are supposed to re- ceive their education, but because it is usually hopelessly impassable the majority remain at home on their hal- conies, jolling half-dressed in rickety chairs and lazily fanning mosqui- toes.

The one word that describes Mon- rovia is "shriftless." Here came the negro slave in the early eighties, backed by philanthropists who want- ed to see him given a chance in his own country. And here is the negro slave today, idling away his life in the tropical luxuriance of the jungle, which feeds him without cul- tivation, and watching his one big chance fall to ruins.

After all, the negro can hardly be blamed if he fails in a task that has tried the nerve of white men. Colon- izing Liberia has not been all a de- lightful experience. There are still many lions, panthers and snakes in the jungle, which make road build- ing a dangerous occupation, and oc- casionally the interior tribes of ne- groes get obstreperous and eat a cou- ple of their more cultured brethren.

Monrovia is pitiful, but not ugly. Over all its shabbiness and decay grow the scarlet hibiscus, pink ole- anders and other tropical flowers de- corating with their brilliant blossoms the corpse of a fine ideal.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD
Says Cream Applied In Nostrils
Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold, catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, anti- septic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every in- crease of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant re- lief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nos- trils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing, no more headache, dizziness or strug- gling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a de- light.

Henry Appley came forward, his hand out. "Well, auntie," said he, "you don't look a day older than when I saw you last."

The old lady laughed in relief at the sight of the familiar face. She laid her hand in his and clung to it eagerly.

"How long ago was that, Henry?" she asked.

Mrs. Von Loben Sels shook her pretty head. "No," said she slowly, "that is what I can not decide. Ugh! I write, or would it be best to say nothing and leave all in the hands of the committee?" She paused in sweet humility. Was it for her to question the decisions of that august body? But Miss Varney's glance was not acquiescent. She shook her head, as though in doubt.

"What would you do?" asked Mrs. Von Loben Sels plaintively.
"Oh," protested Miss Varney hast- ily, "you should consult a wiser per- son than I."

The door opened and the family struggled in like aimless sheep, look- ing for Miss Varney as the shepherd who would provide their evening meal.

"Ask them," suggested Miss Var- ney quickly, as she rose to the sev- en melodious chimings of the old-fash- ioned clock.
"No, no," begged Mrs. Von Loben Sels in a whisper, catching Miss Var- ney's hand, "no, no, dear Miss Var- ney."

Miss Varney patted her hand re- assuringly as to her own secrecy, and hurried to the door, nodding gaily at the others. In the doorway she paused and turned to them.
"Dinner should be ready," said she. "I am going to see what the trouble is."

She nodded merrily, turned to leave and as quickly turned back again. She stepped hastily into the room, softly closing the door behind her and glancing swiftly over the crowd. Her eyes caught Ricky's and sent him a gleam for help; he re- sponded quickly, and reassuringly.

"Dear people," said she in a low hurried voice, her delicate hands clasped, "Miss Appleby is coming down-stairs. She has done this to sur- prise us."

She paused. No one spoke. Each thought vaguely of that forty million yet to be distributed.
Miss Varney still hesitated and it was plain that she had something more to say. She had become grave and her sweet eyes were full of per- plexity, an earnest plea for pardon if she hurt their feelings.

"Dear people," said she again, one hand behind her, reaching for the door-knob, "dear people, she does not—approve of—divorce."

In one last swift glance, her eyes sought Ricky's, then she turned and went quickly out and down the hall, leaving the door open behind her.

The room was very still, seeming to be full of a painful hush and none dared to look at his neighbor. Miss Appleby, the distributor of forty millions, did not approve of di- vorce. The announcement was appal- ing, astounding, hardly believable.

"If she does not approve of di- vorce, she is very ignorant of the higher ideals of womanhood," said Maude boldly, as a small boy whis- tled when passing a graveyard at night.

The others nodded feebly.
"Divorce, while no longer a dis- grace, is indeed an honor," contin- ued Maude, braver than the others. In the thankful thought that she was not divorced and Great-aunt Appleby could find no fault with her on that score. Forty millions would be a de- lightful addition to any one's bank account and Maude was as anxious as any of the others as to its ulti- mate disposal.

There was no time to say more. Miss Appleby appeared in the door- way, Miss Varney beside her. She was a sprightly, little woman, with a round, wrinkled face, gentle and kindly. Her white hair was arranged in a charming coil, softening the outlines of her face and counteract- ing the deep wrinkles of sickness under her eyes and around her mouth. There was a flush of ex- citement on each old cheek and her eyes were bright. Her short breath- ing and the evident nervous twitching of her hands betrayed how sick she had been and still was.

She entered eagerly in her haste to greet her relatives, a bit in ad- vance of her companion. In the doorway she paused in frank aston- ishment and glanced around the great room which was full of men and women where she had expected only a few. Could it be a surprise party? Had the neighbors received word that she was coming down that evening—but no, that was silly—no one, not even Miss Varney, knew that she planned to come. Besides, these were strangers, and "most" young. Her neighbors were old and wrinkled and sick like herself. She glanced at Miss Varney and laid one hand nervously on the younger wo- man's arm.

Henry Appley came forward, his hand out. "Well, auntie," said he, "you don't look a day older than when I saw you last."

The old lady laughed in relief at the sight of the familiar face. She laid her hand in his and clung to it eagerly.

OF DAISY DEAN

"Hidden Valley" is the title of a five-reel picture starring Valkyrie, otherwise known as the Baroness De- witz, early in November. Boyd Marshall is the leading man in the feature, which is the story of a heathen tribe in South Africa that captures an American girl and makes her their "white goddess." Valkyrie plays the part of the American girl although in real life she is a Danish baroness.

Mme. Petrova Has New Leading Man
Earle Fox, who won fame in the "legitimate" as well as in motion pic- tures, is supporting Mme. Petrova in her new production. In the play now being produced Fox is seen as a weakling who falls in everything he attempts because he is unable to con- trol a craving for drugs.

Mr. Fox was born in Oxford, Ohio. He attended the Miami Military Academy and Ohio State University, and went on the stage eleven years ago with a stock company in Cin- cinnati. Next he was seen in stock at the College Theater, Chicago.

William Hawtrey saw him there, was deeply impressed by his acting and engaged him to appear in "Dear Old Billy." He went to London with Mr. Hawtrey, and returning joined the "Third Degree" in Chicago. Afterward he was seen with Annie Russell, Wilton Lackaye and Doug- las Fairbanks. Four years ago Mr. Fox became a motion picture actor.

Art Lovers to See Ethelmary's Portrait
Little Ethelmary Oakland, the di- minutive Thanet-Patio star, has just finished posing for a full-length portrait by Emil Fuchs, who until the war broke out, was portrait painter to the King of England. This painting of Ethelmary shows the beautiful blonde child in one of her serious moods, with hands crossed in her lap, looking dreamily into space. She is dressed in a shimmering olive-green silk old-fashioned mother hub- bard with a quaint tam-o-shanter of the same color and material, edged in fur. The portrait will be sent to Mr. Fuchs' exhibition in Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, and several other cities, and will there-

The latest bulletin in connection with Olga Petrova is that the Beaux Arts Corporation, of Chicago, has offered her $2,000 a week for the first year and $4,000 a week for the second. It is further bulletined that the Beaux Arts people have deposited $350,000 in bank to guarantee the star's salary just as an evidence of good faith.

The Fox studios are glad to wel- come William Farnum back. He was absent from his work for about six weeks, being quite ill. But though he looks a bit pale and not quite as powerful, he says he feels fine, and will put as much realism as ever in his new picture, "Pier of Con- science."

My child, and Henry brought you down to see me. And now, who is this?" turning to Mrs. Fisher.
Mrs. Fisher, with the density of one who did not belong to the family and was without hope of a share in the forty millions, had not been im- pressed by the grim warning Miss Varney had given them. She took the old lady's hand and kissed her, saying gaily, "I feel that through Harold, you are my auntie, too."

"Harold, my dear?" questioned the old lady.
"My husband's little boy," ex- plained Mrs. Fisher, trying to make up to Mrs. Parker for her former mistake by constantly repeating the name of Harold.

"And who is your husband?" asked Miss Appleby, her nervousness in- creasing with her perplexity, a wor- ried expression creeping into her eyes as she tried to understand.
"Harold Montague Fisher," re- plied Mrs. Fisher. "Little Harold was named after him, you know."

"And what relation is Harold to me? I can't remember a Fisher in the family."

"Oh, no, Mr. Fisher himself is no relation," Mrs. Fisher was also get- ting nervous. She felt by the way the others were watching her that she had done something else wrong. The atmosphere had become strained. "No, Harold is your great-nephew on his mother's side."

"But aren't you his mother?" questioned Miss Appleby.
"No, oh, no," protested Mrs. Fisher, floundering helplessly now under the cold glances directed at her, aware that she had blundered, but not sure how.
"Is his mother dead?" asked Miss Appleby in a daze.

"No," Mrs. Allison Drake Fisher Parker could stand it no longer. "I am Harold's mother, aunt."

Miss Appleby turned. "Why, Al- lison?" Meekly she permitted herself to be kissed, and as one stunned she questioned on "I thought that you had married a Drake."

Hope Almost Abandoned When She Found Remedy

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Re- lieves Chronic Case of Long Standing.

After a long period of suffering with liver and bowel trouble that brought on piles, during which she had tried many remedies without obtaining relief, Mrs. Mary J. Jewell, of Berrien Springs, Mich., heard of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and ob- tained a bottle from her druggist. This simple, inexpensive laxative compound brought almost immediate relief, and Mrs. Jewell wrote to Dr. Caldwell about her case.

In her letter Mrs. Jewell says, "I had tried so many things for the piles, without being helped at all, I had about given up hope of ever be- ing any better. I knew it was the condition of my bowels that caused them, and after I had taken a bottle of your Syrup Pepsin I knew it was just the medicine I needed. I am very grateful to you for sending me the little book—the advice and in- structions it gives would teach any- one how to get well and how to keep well."

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, free from opiate or nar- cotic drugs, and is mild and gentle in its action, bringing relief in an easy, natural way, without griping, or other pain or discomfort. Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for fifty cents a bottle. To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes, be sure you get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 West Tipton St., Monticello, Illinois.

GREAT VICE FILM BREAKS RECORDS

More than 18,000 persons saw "Is Any Girl Safe?" during the first eight days of its run at the Shubert theater in Minneapolis. In reviewing the film, which was produced by the Anti-Film Motion Picture company of New York city, the Minneapolis Tribune said:

"In the presence of a crowd which filled the Shubert theater to overflowing last night, 'Is Any Girl Safe?' a sensational five-part anti-vice motion picture drama, was shown for the first time in the west, the initial exhibition of the film, which was produced by the Anti-Film Motion Picture company of New York, having taken place in the Maxine Elliott theater in that city.

"The film is a visualized sermon of experience concerning the traps set for innocent girls by members of the white slave crowd. Hal Reid, author of the scenario, has succeeded in laying bare the insidious and subtle manner in which girls are delivered into bondage and yet he has handled this delicate subject without offense, but with so much power that it is difficult to understand how an adult could leave the theater without a little healthier respect for the sacredness of womanhood and with considerable more anxiety regarding the vice conditions which recent developments have brought to light.

"The film is one of intense interest and abounds in heart throbs from the moment the two young villains begin in the first reel their machinations to 'barter souls for gold,' until the closing reel when Bill Kerns, one of the villains, triumphs, after his warped conscience has awakened in saving his own sister, from the clutches of his 'pal,' and another young woman he had himself sought to sell into slavery into slavery. The fight he puts up, after his reformation takes place, is the big scene of the picture.

BESSIE BARRISCALE IN "PLAIN JANE"

Bessie Barriscale, than whom there is no bigger favorite on the Thomas H. Ince list of stars, has a modern Cinderella part in "Plain Jane." Triangle hit opening a week-end engagement at the Majestic Thursday.

She is the drudge in a cheap boarding house in a college town and worships the very ground a certain college man walks on. He spurns her affection. Then "Plain Jane" reverses matters by going to college herself. Silks take the place of the smudgy gingham and her beauty is brought out in a flash that in itself, makes "Plain Jane" a distinctive success as a photoplay.

Particularly does the picture bring to the La Crosse audience Miss Barriscale's power of versatility. Although the film may be called heavy in spots, it is spiced freely with splendid comedy. The story is a strong one, Ince having worked it out to perfection.

The original Triangle style of photography adds a charm to the production, and it is a safe wager that both Triangle and Bessie Barriscale stock will rise before the end of the present week.

CHILD GETS SICK CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach or bowels.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

STAR OF MUSICAL COMEDY RECENTLY FROM MINNEAPOLIS

Miss Sylvia De Frankie of
"Fraternity Boys and Girls"
Fresh from Broadway

Sylvia De Frankie is featured in the tabloid musical comedy, "Fraternity Girls and Boys," opening its engagement to a pleased audience at the La Crosse theater Thursday afternoon. Miss De Frankie is well known in musical comedy circles in Chicago, New York and many other cities, having been with Ralph Herz in "Dr. De Luxe," Hyman and McIntire in "The Girl of My Dreams," and "When Love is Young," and "The Elopers," during its run at the La Salle in the Windy City. For the past two seasons she has been cast with Klav and Erlanger's "Around the Map" at the Amsterdam theater. Miss De Frankie is a cute little mite who is not easily forgotten, and has a host of friends in the amusement world.

"Fraternity Girls and Boys," was well liked in Chicago. It is the production of E. P. Churchill, and promises to draw musical comedy lovers to the La Crosse for the balance of the week.

The show is so built that one good thing follows another so rapidly that there is little chance for big applause for individual hits, occurring frequently. The audience is kept in good humor all the time by comedy numbers, stage pictures, and novelties.

The music and staging are among the biggest features. The cast is composed of some very pretty girls, who can sing well. As for the songs they sing, they are chosen from the tried hits of the past season. The Golden Gate quartette adds a distinctive charm to the splendid entertainment, and were voted by the afternoon audience Thursday to possess faculties for making rare harmony. Costumes are pretty, and there is something about the whole production which stamps it thoroughly big.

"Goodnight Corns!" We Use "Gets-It!"

3 Drops in 2 Seconds. That's All! "GETS-IT!" Does the Itest. Never Fails.

"Really, I never could see how some few people use the most difficult and painful way they can find to get rid of corns. They'll wrap their toes up with bandages into a package that fills their shoes full of feet and makes corns so painful they've got to walk sideways and wrinkle up their faces. Or they use salves that eat right into the toe and make it raw and sore, or they'll use plasters that make the corns bulge, or pick and gouge at their corns and make the toes bleed. Funny, isn't it? "GETS-IT!" is the simple, modern wonder for corns. Just put 3 drops on. It dries instantly. No pain, fuss or trouble. The corn, callus or wart loosens and comes off. Millions use nothing else.

"GETS-IT!" is sold and recommended by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price, by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

FANNIE WARD IN

Having established herself as one of the most versatile actresses on the screen, Miss Fannie Ward, the beautiful Lasky star, will be seen at the Bijou on Friday, and Saturday of this week, in the Jesse L. Lasky production of "Each Pearl a Tear," written especially for her by Beatrice C. DeMille and Leighton Osmun, from the story by E. L. Shelton. It is a Paramount picture.

For a number of years Miss Ward has been popular as a comedienne in the spoken drama. When the Lasky company induced her to join their serious work, and this was given her in "The Cheat." In this sensational photodrama, she scored the greatest success of her career, and this she repeated in "Tennessee's Partner," in "For the Defense" and "The Gutter Magdalen," and it is said that "Each Pearl a Tear" is better than anything in which she has hitherto been seen.

The story of "Each Pearl a Tear" has to do with a young girl who is led to believe by an unscrupulous millionaire, that she has lost a valuable string of pearls. She is forced to work for him to repay this loss. How she discovers that he still has the pearls, and uses them to wreck him financially, at the same time bringing wealth to her sweet heart, is brought about in an unusual and striking manner.

COAL OPERATORS FOR SHORTAGE OF CARS

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Coal users here are hoping that the steady advance in the price of coal would be checked by the suits on file in federal court here Thursday, in which the Santa Fe and 141 other railroads are charged by twenty-eight coal companies with diverting and misusing coal cars and thereby preventing the rapid shipment of coal from the mines. An injunction is asked. It is said that the shortage of cars holds the price of coal up. Coal dealers predicted increases of 25 to 50 cents a ton shortly unless the situation is relieved.

SOCIETY HELP

CHARITY BALL TICKETS
Tickets for the Charity ball were issued yesterday, being sent not only to La Crosse citizens, but to Oshkosh, West Salem and Sparta people as well. It is the hope of the committee in charge that the ball will this year surpass in attendance as well as beauty any ball of past years. Local stores have had for the past few weeks special exhibits of party frocks, and the modistes of the city are being rushed to the limit to deliver Charity Ball gowns in time, all of which indicates unusual interest in the party this year.

The Halloween party given by the Brotherhood of American Yeomen was largely attended and greatly enjoyed by those present. The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion with corn stalks, pumpkins, Jack o'lanterns, skeletons, witches, etc., and the Yeomen orchestra furnished excellent music for the occasion. In the afternoon the Rowena circle entertained at cards. Prizes were awarded to Mesdames Sheets, Schaefer, Krueger, Welch, Drake and Fahb. Owing to the Charity Ball coming on the night set for the Yeomen class adoption and making it impossible for some of the candidates to be present, the class adoption has been postponed until Thursday, November 16.

THE MONTH IN MUSIC

CHRISTMAS CLASSIC

MAGNIFICENTLY

SUNG BY CARUSO

Other Masterpieces of Song, Hawaiian Guitar Duets, Brilliant Instrumental Pieces, Supreme Orchestral and Operatic Selections
Each nation has its distinctive Christmas music, England her carols and "Messiah," and Germany the simple hymns to the Christ-child. While France prefers noble songs of great composers, such as the superb "Holy Night" by Adolphe Adam, one of the foremost French writers. This timely feature of the new Victor Records for November is eminently suited to the glorious voice of Caruso, who sings with characteristic simplicity and dignity the beautiful and inspiring lines.
Three charming little French songs for children are sung by Emma Calve with such evident enjoyment, that in "Au Claire de la Lune" we can almost see Pierette at Pierrot's door asking for warmth and shelter. One of the few composers of saloon music who has achieved success without sacrifice of quality is Meyer-Helmund. His works find so appreciative an admirer in Emilio de Gogorza, that the distinguished singer now gives us one of the best of them, the "Magic Song," sometimes called "The Magic of Thy Voice."
Gluck and Zimbalist in "Sing Me to Sleep" offer an appealing presentation of the simple and natural melody that is so widely popular. The emotional effect of the soprano's touching rendition is heightened by the throbbing notes of Zimbalist's obligato. Remarkable skill in coloratura singing is evidenced in Mabel Garrison's rendering of the beautiful "Bell Song" from Delibes' romantic opera Lakme.
A new record of the favorite song "Where is My Boy Tonight" has been added by request to the Red Seal List. Needless to say, Louise Homer gives this loving cry of the bereaved mother, with new tenderness and beauty of expression. Encouraged by the great success of his "Caprice Viennoise" as a violin piece, Fritz Kreisler has arranged it as a "Cradle Song" for voice with piano accompaniment, and John McCormack sings it exquisitely.

Instrumental Favorites
For the violin, a notable solo is charmingly played by Maud Powell in "Guitarrero" by Franz Drda, with piano by Arthur Loesser. All the well-marked and ingratiating rhythm is brought out by our favorite American violinist. The second movement of Beethoven's splendid Fifth Symphony now follows the first of the series of four records on which this orchestral gem is to be interpreted. The melody which enriches this Andante is as beautiful as its expression of consolation and renewed faith in life is inspiring. Herold's opera comique, Zampa, is best known in America for its brilliant and tuneful overture. This is for the first time given in complete form by the New Symphony orchestra of London.
Conway's band has made a magnificent record of this appropriate number, and of the famous "Napoleon's Charge" based on the charge of the intrepid cuirassiers at Waterloo.

In order to encourage the national movement for general singing in the home, school and public gatherings, the Victor offers the first of a series of hand accompaniments to four well-known songs. "My Old Kentucky Home," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Believe Me If All Those Yearning Young Chords" and "Home Sweet Home" are especially arranged for use in schools, social organizations and fraternal societies where chorus singing is a part of the program. Two favorite old ballads which the Victor revives in instrumental form are "Sweet Genevieve" and "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," presented by the ever popular McKee Trio. To say that "The Moaning Saxophone Rag" made a hit last year is inadequately stating the case. So Brown Brothers Sextette give us another "moaning" record in "Saxophone Sobs," a lively fox trot as full of "sobs" as its name implies. It is accompanied by that big hit, "Walkin' the Dog."
Greatest favorite among Sousa marches and voicing the popular sentiment of the day is "Stars and Stripes Forever March." A splendid rendition of this, with the fine swing "Love's Power" on the reverse, is given by the Hurtado Brothers Ruyal Marimba band. This fascinating musical novelty is a unique Central American product, as unlike the usual conception of a "band" as its music surpasses in mellowness, richness and attractive beauty. The performance by Pietro of the "Poet and Peasant" and "Pique Dame" overtures are really virtuoso.

"On With the Dance"
Conway's band furnishes a large proportion of the month's dance music, and lively music it is. This comprises three new fox trots which are all the rage, "Under the Rambling Roses," "Bantam Step," "The Clown Dance," with a dreamy waltz, "Poet's Vision" by Deutsch. The Victor band contributes two attractive medleys.

Charming Songs: Old and New Marguerite Farrell's success in "Step This Way" will make exceedingly welcome another of her admired Irish songs, "You've Got Me Going With Your Irish Eyes," accompanied by a new Von Tilzer number which looks like a big hit.
Another of Tennyson's songs, composed by Nivins in "Blow Trumpet, for the World is White With May," whose martial spirit is well expressed by the unaccompanied male voices of the Orpheus Quartet. The other member of this double number is the "Bereave" from the opera "Jocelyn," sung by Olive Kilne. Marguerite Dunlop and Elizabeth Wheeler with Ello Chikato, in "Tommy Lad," "Reinald Werrenrath well depicts the tender emotions of the father who tells his hopes to his wee little "Tommy," and he is charmingly professed in Florence. Aylward's beautiful "The House of Memories," a setting of the Adcock verses of that name.

CHAMBER OUTLINES APPROVAL POLICY FOR SOLICITATION

Endorsement Will Be Withdrawn from Projects for Which Canvass Is Improper

SEVERAL PLANS APPROVED Chamber Declares Newspaper Advertising Is Essentially Legitimate and Outside of Its Regulation

Solicitations which are given the approval of the Chamber of Commerce must be conducted properly, according to the policy of the chamber which has been approved by the board of directors. Details of the chamber's policy in regard to solicitation were made public Thursday, together with announcement of the projects which have thus far been approved by the board.

These Endorsed
Official Chamber of Commerce O. K. have been attached to:
The Associated Charities.
The Charity Ball.
La Crosse Home for Women and Children.

The Rescue Mission.
Red Cross Seal Sale.
La Crosse Municipal Band.
The latter organization plans a canvass to raise money for uniforms. Newspaper advertising, the statement of policy declares, is regarded as essentially legitimate publicity, and the Chamber of Commerce does not consider that it has any function in regard to it. In this connection the Chamber of Commerce authorized the following statement:

"In La Crosse, as elsewhere throughout the country in instances where the Chamber of Commerce at all interests itself in such matters, advertising in local newspapers is recognized as the one legitimate form of advertising with which the Chamber of Commerce feels it is not called upon to interfere, and has no desire to do so."

No Obligation
There is no obligation upon members of the chamber to contribute to projects by the board of directors, it was explained. The cards of approval, which the chamber furnishes to approved solicitors indicate very distinctly that the project has been investigated and is deemed worthy of support. The chamber requests that all solicitors show their certificates upon all occasions, and that all persons require the exhibition of the card before contributing.

The statement of policy follows: "It will be the policy of the Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse to discourage all advertising schemes, where, in the opinion of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse they lack advertising value."

"It will also be the policy of the Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse to grant certificates of investigation for use only so long as soliciting is done in such manner as to insure that all contributions made by members of this organization are free gifts and not contributions forced by fear of discrimination to be practiced later by those soliciting contributions."

"In case soliciting is done in such manner as to gain the disapproval of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of La Crosse, such certificates of investigation shall at once be withdrawn."

C. ("Ikey") Karel of Milwaukee, a democratic leader of the state, and Mayor A. A. Bentley of La Crosse, will speak at Centennial hall.

There has been no greater show of spirit in any political meeting on either side in this campaign than that exhibited in three separate meetings in the county Wednesday night, members of the county committee declared Thursday.

At the Ten Mile House, C. L. Hood, candidate for district attorney, and A. C. Wolfe, addressed an audience of Mormon Cattle farmers, while in the Town of Burns town hall A. H. Dittman spoke to a large assemblage at Schroeder's Springs, town of Campbell.

Four of the leading speakers under the county committee were to speak down on the Town of Shelby Thursday evening—A. C. Wolfe, Joseph F. Schert, J. H. Carnahan and C. L. Hood. A. C. Wolfe was scheduled for Rhodessa hall, while Mayor Bentley and C. A. Dittman were to address a Concordia audience. A. C. Wolfe was to hold the fort at Seiler's hall.

A vigorous week-end campaign is scheduled, it follows:
Friday—J. H. Carnahan, Dell, Monroe county, and Bloomingdale, Vernon county, in the afternoon; Onalaska, evening. A. H. Schubert, Campbell hall.

Boyle's Place on French Island: Billy Boyle and P. W. Mahoney.
Saturday—Carnahan and Schubert at Holmen; Bentley and Karel at Centennial.

A. E. Martin of Chicago, is working vigorously in this territory. He speaks at Merrill Thursday evening and has several Jackson county speeches scheduled for Friday with a 100 meeting at Black River Falls on Friday night. Carnahan will work in Trempealeau county Monday.

Monica Dunn of La Crosse, invades Crawford county Saturday with talks at Lynxville, Seneca, Eastman and other towns during the day, ending up with a night meeting at Prairie du Chien.

UNIVERSALISTS ASK ILLINOIS PASTOR TO FILL PULPIT

A call to the pastorate of St. Paul's Universalist church was extended Rev. Leonard R. Blackmer, pastor of a thriving church at Avon, Ill., by members of the church meeting on Tuesday evening. If the Avon pastor accepts the post he will succeed Rev. George R. Longbrake, who tendered his resignation when he was called to serve as army chaplain of the Third Wisconsin Infantry on the Mexican border. Rev. Longbrake's resignation does not take effect until January 1.

"Is Any Girl Safe?"

IS THE TITLE OF A MOTION PICTURE.

It Sounds Lurid, Doesn't It? Well, It's Just As Lurid As It Sounds—and Purposely So.

The pictures were made by the Anti-Vice Motion Picture Co., to be used in stamping out the white slave traffic by educating the people—the fathers and mothers, sisters and brothers—to the actual existing evils of the plague.

The methods of the procurers are shown. (Lieut. Costigan of the New York police department said it was as true to life as it was possible for it to be done, but it didn't go far enough.) The picture has the endorsement of the Milwaukee board of censors, also of the New York censor board and that of Minneapolis, and of the Minneapolis newspapers. (The picture comes direct from the Shubert Theatre of Minneapolis.)

If you expect to be entertained by a crude appeal to your lower nature—don't come. But if you wish to learn the truth as it actually exists then come by all means.

READ THESE FACTS. The picture is in five reels. It will be shown Friday and Saturday. The admission will be twenty-five cents, and no one under sixteen years of age will be admitted.

The CASINO

EDUCATION NOT SOLE ASSET OF NORMAL TEACHER

The greatest development in the normal school system has been the change in the attitude of the presidents regarding the types of teachers desirable, according to President Fessett A. Cotton of the La Crosse normal school, in a speech on "A Decade of Progress in Wisconsin Normal Schools," delivered Thursday at the State Teachers' association meeting in Milwaukee. Teachers, declared President Cotton, must have more than a thorough knowledge of their subjects.

"In addition to university training, the teacher in a normal school should have professional training, and should have skill in the presentation of his subjects. This qualification should carry with it a sincere belief that there is a science of education; that there is a best way. It is no longer believed that just anybody with academic training can teach in a normal school. It is no longer merely needs to get full of his subject in the academic sense. I repeat, knowledge is indeed essential, but knowledge is of little avail without the ability to think it and use it."

"The teacher in a state normal school should have had experience. There is no place for tyros. Success in the work of public schools in the different phases should be the test. No one who has not had actual experience in the rural schools, in the grades, and in the high schools, should attempt to teach student teachers who are soon to fill such positions."

"But the supreme test must come in the personality of the teacher. No task master can succeed here. No grad-grind should have a place in a normal school faculty. Sarcasm, irony, anger, have no place here. In such a school, of all places, are needed genuine, many men, and womanly women who teach by their very presence."

MELROSE PACKS HALL TO HEAR JAMES THOMPSON

A rousing Hughes and La Follette meeting was held at the theater in Melrose Wednesday evening, James Thompson, of this city, being the speaker of the evening. Reports to the local republican headquarters are that the theater was packed and the result of the meeting highly satisfactory.

"Hughes," declared Mr. Thompson, "is a progressive. We, as progressive republicans, cannot withhold our support from him. He is our logical candidate."

GERMAN PLAYERS AT GERMANIA FOR TWO APPEARANCES

A German theater company with a strong cast will give two plays at the Germania hall next Friday and Sunday nights. The first play on Friday night will be "Stornenbender," a well known German-American comedy in four acts. From the opening to the end of the play, laughing will not stop. The Sunday play is the "Grosse Heimweh," which is considered a masterpiece. The characters of the piece are well drawn and true to nature, men and women of flesh and blood as seen in every day life. To this is added a strong dose of rich humor which produces irresistible laughter. The lines of both plays will be spoken in the German language.

—A vote for Wilson is a vote:
a—For international security.
b—For continuance of prosperity.
c—For government helping the people in their daily lives.
d—For the protection of the people against the selfish aggression of privileged classes.
e—For a real international neutrality.

f—For the preservation of neutral rights and of humanities by persistent persuasion, rather than by plenty of powder.

g—For escape from war horrors through honorable peace policies commanding world-wide respect.

h—A protest against "hot-headed utterances" and "hazard-of-war" policies.

i—For the proper recognition of an honest and faithful public service.

2—The day of selfish class rule is over; it could not fool all the people all of the time. They have learned that what the special interests want is just what they, the people, do not want. Henceforth, the people will run their governmental affairs through faithful servants and the old guard is going to be mustered out with a military record of "dishonorable service."

The big question in this campaign is not, has the present administration done the best that it could have done, although on this issue it has the strongest kind of a case, but rather, has it so far failed the people and their interests, that the control of government should be returned to the invisible powers that held it in 1912.

This question is essentially not a mere party question. It strikes at the root, the object of government being a control of the strong, in behalf of the weak. The rank and file of every party is necessarily honest, for a party organized in open dishonesty would have no more credit with the citizenship of a country than would a religion based on immorality. As, however, the activities of a party are controlled wholly by its leaders, a party as such is never more trustworthy than they, and any party, whatever its name, long entrenched in control of government, invites the exploitation of corrupt men, who through its leadership, may work out by mental control, advantages and privileges for themselves and their followers and friends against the mass of the people. Such a state of affairs was believed to exist in 1912 in the Republican party, and its indictment in this respect came from a majority, nearly four million of its own voters. They probably tried to purify their own party within. To that end, in the 1912 Chicago convention, they went to the honest and influential men of their party, charged the selfish action of the old guard, and the special interests, pointed out the policies of party action that the people needed, but which the old guard refused to apply, and asked assistance to remove the old guard from party control. In this they failed; wherefore they organized a new party to accomplish the same purpose. Well knowing that they could not elect their candidate, but that their recession would defeat the candidate of the old guard, they pronounced a verdict by which they decreed that the interests of the country demanded a transfer of governmental control, and it was in this wise, and by over half the voters of the old Republican party, that Woodrow Wilson was put in office, and he has never forgotten it. In New York, some months since, he said, "I am constantly compelled to remind myself that I am the servant of all the people, rather than of some of the people only."

The party platform, written in 1912 of these progressive or receding Republicans was then and by their chief candidate described as the "greatest public document ever written since the days of Abraham Lincoln." It contained the policies that the progressives believed represented the interests of the people. Some of those policies had been long before suggested by Progressive Democrats, for Mr. Hughes when campaigning for Mr. Taft in 1908 and speaking of the Income Tax Idea, and some others set forth in the progressive platform, referred to them as the "quack nostrum" of old Dr. Bryan.

Mindful of the responsibility that they assumed to these four million Republican voters and the people of the country at large, as well as Democracy itself, and mindful that the policies were really progressively Democratic, in the three and one-half years that they have administered this great trust, these men at Washington have put into law, ten of the principal demands in that platform, and have in process of legislation, consideration of all those demands save judicial recall. Among them are the tariff revision the tariff board, the federal reserve, the federal trade commission, the good roads, the income and inheritance taxes, the abolishment of the interstate commerce court, the granting of power to the interstate commerce commission to value railroads, to the end that the people may pay only equitable freight and passenger rates, a governmental owned railroad in Alaska, all of which were asked for by the progressives, a parcel post, child's labor, a workmen's compensation, and a rural credits act, and many others. Of them all, there has been no complaint, save against two, and this of itself is the best evidence of their inherent worth, of them collectively, it may be said that no such volume of practical legislation in aid of the citizen in his every day life, was ever passed before. The parcel post and the rural credits have forced private enterprises operating along the same lines in each instance, to meet the government standards, for it has come to my observation in Iowa, that within thirty days, circulars had been sent out by farm mortgage loan agencies announcing that they are prepared henceforth to negotiate farm loans on a twenty-year five per cent basis, with privilege of payments in installments of one hundred dollars or upwards in advance of maturity, which is exactly this scheme provided by the rural credits law; whereas the old method was five year loans upon an average of 7 1/2 per cent throughout the United States without privilege of advance installment payments.

Investigations.
Through the federal trade commission and the several district attorneys of the country, the "hot-headed utterances" and "hazard-of-war" policies, specifically as to bread, coal, etc. An inquiry begun about July 1st of this year as to the increased cost of gasoline, has resulted in a reduction of the cost of that commodity so generally throughout the country of between six and seven cents a gallon. News-print paper investigation, affecting paper on which newspapers of the country are printed, it is believed will account for the apparent scarcity and lower the present high price, which has recently caused a suppression of some country newspapers who have no long-time contracts for their supply.

The Lobby
Finding an organized opposition to the attempt to pass the federal reserve act in the very beginning of the administration, the president started a campaign of publicity, whereby he announced through the newspapers, the names of the men manipulating the organized lobbies, their officers, and the nature of their organization, with the result that it created such an alarm, that many of these men who had their trenches impassable around the congress, discharged their forces and closed their offices in the capitol city, and have not been heard of in the open since.

Prosperity
We may remember the dire prophecy of ruin uttered by the Republican leaders of the house of representatives on the floor in the summer of 1912 conditioned upon the Democrats coming into power. The contrasting result is so pronounced, that you would not find the prophet's picture in the country today, and demand seeking it with the prophesy in his hand, if you were to move from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, being unable to swim, would drown himself in the latter ocean before discovery. The unparalleled present prophesy is conceded. The deposits in all the banks of the country have so increased since the inauguration of Mr. Wilson, that if there were to be withdrawn from the present total of those deposits a sum equal to the aggregate resources of all banks of England, France, Spain, Switzerland, The Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, and the Imperial Bank of Japan, there would remain a larger volume of deposits than the same banks held at the first named date. In National banks alone this increase of deposits for the first three years of this administration has been four times what it was in the corresponding period of Mr. Roosevelt's last term, and three times that of a corresponding period in Mr. Taft's term. The operation of the Federal Reserve Act, and the issue of three hundred eighty-six millions of emergency currency under it after November 15th, 1914, which took up the relief forty millions loaned by the secretary of the treasury to New York banks immediately after the declaration of the European war and replaced the frightful money until it was put back into circulation, and which emergency currency was all called in and mostly destroyed before June, 1915, was a demonstration that the making for panics in this country has been forever removed from our commercial life. In the first year of the operation of this act, National banks earned on their capitalization, six per cent, just double what they had earned upon the same capitalization the year before it went into effect. In that first year it cut down the failures of national banks, so that their total liabilities of such failing banks were but three million eight hundred thousand, against ten times that amount of thirty-eight million nine hundred thousand dollars in the preceding year, and the estimated loss on those liabilities is fixed at a quarter of a million dollars or but one five-hundredth of one per cent of the total resources of the banks than engaged in active business. But it is said that this unparalleled prosperity is due to war. Examination of exports demonstrates that due doubtless to this mass of remedial legislation the business conditions of the country would have very materially improved had there been no war, but conceding that this prosperity is borne of the European war, none the less, it is true, that to have held it, we must have kept out of war.

Our Foreign Policies
Our international neutrality has been clear; Mr. Wilson's stand has been approved in Germany by Dr. Dernberg, who was here in Germany's interest during the early months of the war, and by Maximilian Hardin, the greatest economic writer of Germany and possibly of all Europe. Our treatment of the neutral powers, compared with the treatment of the allies, confirms our neutrality; of the former we asked the recall of Ambassador Dumba, and Attaches, Boy-Ed and Von Papen for objectionable interference. No one questioned the justice of this request which was complied with, and it is not an issue in the campaign. In addition, we demanded warning before sinking of submarines of merchant ships of belligerent powers, when those ships were carrying citizens of neutral countries. Of the allies, he indicted British agents recruiting for the allied armies in the United States, because such action was opposed to our laws. We administratively held against the allies in the inception of the steamer Appam case. We held against them in their claims as to the Deutschland, such claim being that although she was an unarmed submarine freight boat, she should be treated as a belligerent war ship and our note of August 31st last, first published the 11th of October on this submarine issue sent to England, France, Russia and Japan was couched in as vigorous a speech as any language ever used in any note sent on the other phase of the submarine issue to Germany. We received the U-Boat 53 submarine in our ports on October 7th, and finally we pressed against the seizure of our mails and cargoes by the allies, and have by the usual means, undertaken to compel a recognition of our asserted rights in that regard, and because the negotiations were not ended, congress just before adjournment, empowered the president in the event he should find it necessary to protect those rights to inaugurate retaliatory action even to embargo upon shipments if necessary. Our shipments of munitions and war supplies have been in strict accordance with the principles of international law, which obtained at the time of the commencement of the war, and it is a further rule of international law that those principles cannot be changed as between belligerents during the progress of a particular war, the reason of the rule being that each belligerent may have relief and probably rely on its rights to purchase such supplies and munitions from any neutral nation, and therefore made no preparation for their internal manufacture. The Deutschland case demonstrates that if sufficient volume of freight could be moved in the submarines, Germany would enjoy the privilege of purchasing of us as freely as have the allies by their control of the surface of the sea, and if in the great naval battle of July, off Jutland, Germany had been victorious and by destruction of the British fleet had herself gained control of the deep sea, the position would be reversed, and Germany today would receive war supplies and munitions from this country as freely as have the allied powers. The right to control such purchases was the normal prize belonging to the controller of the seas.

The Submarine Issue
In February, 1915, Germany first declared the war zone, and said that within its limits, she would sink it necessary without warning. As the leading neutral nation at the end of the same month, we answered this notice, advising that we would hold any nation to a strict accountability that so harmed American lives. On May 7, the Lusitania was sunk; not after action could restore the lives there lost. The second note sent by our government immediately thereafter in May was so strong that Mr. Bryan believed it would produce war if sent and resigned rather than sign it. Germany awakened to the humanities on September 1, 1915, and gave the assurance of warning, and on the day following the Chicago Tribune, the leading Republican paper of the middle west, spoke in terms of the highest commendation of this achievement of President Wilson, as did other Republican papers in this state as well as most of the independent papers of the country, while Mr. Bryan wired congratulations to the president telling him that he had not believed such a result was possible. The later sinkings of the Arabic, Sussex, etc., forced a resolution were introduced in congress in effect that they would be required the president's hands, and required Americans to keep off from merchant ships of belligerent powers. They were laid on the table by the entire vote of the Democrats and a very substantial supporting Republican vote. Had they been passed, the president's efforts to preserve the rights of neutrality would have gone for naught. Independent of our limited shipping facilities, he was speaking for other neutral nations, whose citizens would have no recourse but to travel on belligerent merchant ships or to stay at home, and to surrender would have meant an abandonment of the rights of Americans in that regard for all the years to come. A threat to sever diplomatic relations was made after the sinking of the Sussex, and on May 4, 1916, Germany's final assurance was given, and it has since been strictly observed. We had to either write or fight; if the latter, we must fight with human lives. Mr. Wilson wrote first and won out. How stands the case on the other side? Mr. Hughes approved Mr. Roosevelt's main speech, and its very utterances. He repeated his statements made at Syracuse, N. Y., two days after the sinking of the Lusitania, in which he said that had he been president, he would have declared war on Germany within 48 hours. Mr. Roosevelt recently at Battle Creek also said that he would have seized every German ship in her ports did not with Germany, and more than a year after she had entered on war with Austria. It would of itself have been an act of war.

In Louisville, Ky., about October 12, Mr. Hughes finally outlines his real view, showing that he was for a harsher policy than Mr. Wilson, and for a hazard-of-war policy. No sympathizers of Germany, who though once dissatisfied with Mr. Wilson's persistence for the rights of American citizens, and neutral nations, should vote for a man who now says, had he been president, he would have favored a harsher and war provoking policy and who upholds Mr. Roosevelt's ideas in that regard. Mr. Hughes admits that the first note was properly phrased, and the party to which he belongs after ridiculing the notes as a school teacher's pastime, now finds its logical leader standing for an additional note, and asserting that he could have prevented the sinking of the Lusitania merely by a note. It is said English sympathizers will vote for Mr. Wilson; in such an event somebody is going to be badly fooled. Roosevelt will wish to be the Warwick of the Hughes administration and in any event his forceful personality would be a bad influence for the country in these critical times. Senator Lodge, who is Mr. Roosevelt's warm friend, was the only substitute offered by Mr. Roosevelt to the Republican party for the nomination in Chicago in his own place, and Mr. Lodge would replace Senator Stone in the event of a Republican control of the senate on the senate foreign relations committee, the committee that has very largely to do with the questions arising on account of the European war.

Louisville Statement of Mr. Hughes
Not until Oct. 12, 1916, one year and five months after the Lusitania sank, and not until four months after his own nomination, does Mr. Hughes arrive at a conclusion as to what he would have done.

The Republicans have been criticizing Wilson as a note writer; Mr. Hughes says he would have written one more note than did Mr. Wilson; and though they say notes were idle, a school teacher's pastime—Mr. Hughes now claims that by a note he could have prevented the sinking of the ship.

Their own candidate then believes in the efficiency of notes, and in plenty of them.

Also he concedes that the words used in the first note "strict accountability" were just the words to have used at that time.

For when asked by one of the audience, what he would have done when the Lusitania was sunk, he never did say what he would have done if it had been sunk, he did say:

1. He would have kept an impression abroad of strength in his dealings with Mexico.

2. He would have organized the State Department that words "strict accountability" would have had more meaning.

3. He would have made the published newspaper warning of Bernstorff, the occasion of another note to Germany, warning her that if Americans on the Lusitania were hurt, we would break off diplomatic relations with her and

4. Then (he says) the Lusitania would not have been sunk.

Let us examine this postmortem method developed only after a year and half's incubation, and with the aid of all the other events criticism and discussion.

As to No. 1.
—Prior to July 25th, 1914 no man in the United States even imagined that a European war was at hand—much less that anything we might do as to Mexico would later have any bearing on our neutrality with warring Europe.

—Nevertheless it happens that under ample provocation from followers of Huerta we had taken Vera Cruz—a forceful act indicating a capacity for iron purpose; and of which Republicans have said it was an unjustified forceful invasion of a neighbor country.

—C—All during the first half of the year 1915, and particularly during the period between February when the German War Zone proclamation was issued, and May 7, when the Lusitania was sunk, Villa and Carranza were battling wholly on Mexican soil, and nothing occurred that would have given excuse for any positive action on our part.

—D—Nothing that might then have been done as to Mexico could have had the remotest effect on the German submarine policy; and a postmortem guess that it might, is of no value.

—E—He does not indicate what he would have done under the conditions existing either then or at any time after the European war began.

As to No. 2 supra—
—It is vague. He might as well have said he would have reorganized the whole government. He does not say how he would have changed to get the desired result.

—B—The same general organization of trained subordinates had existed through previous administrations. Many hold places under civil service. Changes in subordinates would manifestly have produced no result as desired. He must refer to the head.

—C—Mr. Bryan signed the first note, which he says was a proper note, and in all respects was space with the situation until his dread of war made him clash with the second note as too harsh. This after the sinking.

Any change in the head would have been idle, however, for Mr. Bryan in fact withdrew, and yet neither the second note nor the fact of withdrawal moved Germany from its purpose of ruthless submarine warfare to intimidate her foes. It took a third note and until Sept. 1, to induce Germany to accept the humane idea.

—D—The whole force of the U. S. was behind the first note, and under any other organization of the state department, its words could, and would have had no more force than that behind them.

—E—No one has ever hitherto suggested that a reorganization of the state department (whatever it means) would have added any force whatever to the meeting of the note.

As to No. 3 supra—
—A—The Bernstorff newspaper notice was signed personally and unofficially (?) and was addressed to private persons who might be intending to take passage on a foreign ship. It was not from the German government or to our government. To have treated it as such when it plainly was not, would have been an act unprecedented in national intercourse, and warranting the inference that we wanted excuse for war.

—B—After the "strict accountability" note we would have but weakened our position by volunteering another note, when Germany had neither said nor done anything since the first. After telling a man you will hold him strictly accountable for a threatened action, you don't add force to the threat by coming back and telling him if he does it you will never speak to him again, any more than you would be telling him you would "slap him on the wrist."

—C—No one then really believed such a steamer would be torpedoed without warning. Also it was not believed that they would sink it hit—at least not until there was ample time to get away. Moreover it was believed and even her captain boasted that he could outrun a submarine and that a torpedo could never reach his steamer. Men like Elbert Hubbard were because they really felt, there was no risk.

—D—When the Bernstorff notice was published no living soul then suggested that any official notice should be taken of it or especially that any such note should have been sent.

—E—It would have been useless—First—Because the Von Tirpitz element then in control had persuaded Germany to a submarine warfare of horror as essential to their national life. Nothing short of the horror with which the civilized world viewed it, would have given it pause. Even Bryan's resignation and the second (war) note when sent did not have that effect. Also a notice of that very tenor was sent in April, 1916, and it is now piled up on top of the Bryan's resignation and all the notes. Germany's need is so desperate that a large element is now agitating withdrawing their promise of warning and resuming the original ruthless method. Though the performance of the U-53 should prove to them that maximum of efficiency in destruction can be gotten after ample warning, and persuade them that the other plan of horror is not necessary.

—Second—We know now that secret orders to so act must have been probably outstanding in the hands of the detailed submarines and after consideration of any note that our government might have sent after the publication of the Bernstorff notice, any directions countermanding them, could not have reached her commanders in time.

—But let us suppose that the communication had been official and many people at the time clamoring for such a note as Mr. Hughes now suggests and so it had been sent, then what?

He cannot now dispose of the matter as he does by now assuming that Germany would not have sunk the ship, any more than he could have assumed that as the sole possible event at this time when he was considering the wisdom of sending the note. He must work it out so as to show that it would have been the best course, no matter whether Germany sunk the ship or not. And even yet he has not said what he would have done if the ship had been in fact sunk after his note. But let us see for him. Having made the threat he would of course have had to make good or lost all credit with the world. Then diplomatic relations would have ceased, and there could have been no further exchanges. Grant that Germany would not have declared war. None the less she would have gone on and, also sunk the "Arabic" and other ships as fast as she could; and then what would Mr. Hughes have done. He would then either have been forced to submit or declared war on the sinking of the Arabic. Either way the sharks would have gotten thousands of human bodies. And in the former event the nation would have been discredited; while in the latter event we would be still enjoying all the horrors of war, without any hope of securing warning before sinking until the war should end, and perhaps not even then, dependent on which of the powers prevailed. On the other hand by the Wilson plan of keeping open the channel of communication he brought Germany to see the humanities in just 115 days after the ship was sunk. Mr. Hughes now turns up in the open as a harsh policy of "chance of war" man. Will the German, because perhaps dissatisfied with the patient persistence of Wilson for American rights, vote for a man who now says, had he been in his place, he would have pursued a harsher and war provoking policy.

The Lesson of U-53
—It demonstrates that Mr. Wilson's contention that effective submarine warfare, after warnings, is entirely practicable. Six merchant ships sunk in a single day is proof conclusive, and ought to quiet the agitation now pending in Germany for a recall of the warning promise, and the assumption of the original method of submarine warfare, out of which agitation there might come further peril for our foreign relations.

—It demonstrates an unexpected peril to our coast and our shipping should we be involved in war, for two years ago, the oldest admiral of our navy insisted that the time now would come when battle ships would be in danger from the submarines, because the latter would never be able to take the deep sea, or to cross the Atlantic.

—The 220 human lives rescued on Sunday, Oct. 8th by our torpedo boat destroyer, but for Mr. Wilson's policy would have been shark food. Those people would not be living today had Roosevelt's and Hughes' policies been put into effect and 1,000 of other lives would have been simply sacrificed.

Mexico
Here the criticism is that our policy was weak. This is a glittering generality. We asked for a bill of particulars. It was then said that we should have recognized Huerta—that we should not have entered Vera Cruz until our flag was saluted.

—As to the recognition of Huerta—Madero was called a murderer by Huerta's order. Huerta, a former officer in Diaz's army, professed to change of Diaz's and won the confidence of Madero and was given by him a high place in the army, though Carranza protested against it. Huerta's wire to President Taft the night after the death or killing of Madero—"I have overthrown the government, peace and quiet will reign hereafter"—was a confession of the assassination. Mr. Taft properly refused to commit the United States to a recognition of a government organized by the assassin. Mr. Wilson simply followed the same policy, and it was the correct policy. Had Guitierrez been an army officer when he assassinated Garfield, and had he seized control of the government through his armed power, what would we have thought of Germany or Great Britain had they then recognized the assassin Guitierrez as the head of our government?

Desiring to undo the Mexican factions under him, Huerta sought to that end to provoke a war with the United States and by his direction, our marines and officers in uniform were seized and marched through batoning crowds to prison in Vera Cruz. They were released later on demand of our admiral and unsatisfactory explanation attempted by the officers in charge of the city. It was determined that though Huerta was not recognized, and although the act was his, the insult required atonement by saluting the flag. How much longer would those who at times insisted that Mr. Wilson failed to protect the national honor and the honor of the flag, wish him to wait before finding sufficient cause in this action to enter Vera Cruz? If he had been advised by Mr. Hughes before acting, to pursue a bolder policy, and had accordingly entered the city, he might have been told by his advisor a few days later that when advising him to be bold, he meant that he should first determine the sufficiency of the cause, and that there being no sufficient cause, he should have boldly determined to stay out of Vera Cruz. As to the surrender of the city, we gave it back to Carranza and Villa on Nov. 23, 1914. Some months before the men whose insult had provoked the entry, had fled from Mexico on July 7. No assault of the flag remained. For international purposes, Huerta was officially dead. Villa and Carranza had refused his request to join with him in expelling us from Vera Cruz. The Mexican people had been submissive to his rule; it was not their rule. Would you sit on a dead man because he had insulted you a few moments before, on discovering that the man under you was dead of heart failure in the hope that he would revive and apologize, or would you get up and go your way, and help give him a decent burial? We not only surrendered Vera Cruz, but we returned nearly $200,000 of customs collected in the ports, thereby demonstrating to the Mexicans that we had no greed of conquest, and were not highwaymen, and assuring for ourselves the lasting confidence of the Latin-American republic to the south. Despite the crucial moment in June, when the Carrizal incident occurred, we have so far kept out of war to the southward. The investors wanted it, the soldiers of fortune wanted it. Mr. Fairbanks, Republican candidate for vice president, so stated in 1913 when approving Taft and Wilson policies in Mexico. These investors would never have shared profits with the American people, but would have fought for the investment, because of their special interests, they were required by law to become members of the first troops to be used in intervention, the talk would soon stop. Had Mr. Wilson's policy plunged us into war with Mexico then it would be a subject of legitimate criticism. At present it is not a vital moment to us, the thing is that we have kept out of war.

A letter from a life-long Republican passed three score and ten, now living in the state of Washington, says under date of June 22 last: "War with Mexico not only seemed inevitable, but actually at hand, and yet Mr. Wilson's diplomacy, a courteous and firm diplomacy, as to those already offered an actual declaration. I have no patience with narrow minded men who put my own party who attempt to criticize him and his policy, and who if Christ were on earth, and a candidate for the pettiest office on the Democratic ticket, would repeat his crucifixion and nail him to the cross, or with other interludes who have no care or thought for anybody or anything except those and such as will aid in piling up the future more millions to their past ill-gotten hoards. Woodrow Wilson is making history and is carrying a greater burden and showing a greater comprehension of, and ability to handle the task before him, than has any other president since the time when Lincoln carried through his Herculean task, and it will be one of the most pleasurable acts that fall to cast my first Democratic ballot for president of the United States; my maiden vote was cast in 1860 for the saintly Lincoln."

The Railroad Strike
Here the condition and the result and danger had been, some time known. The great war protests of the railroads had indeed been employed to seek of right grievances, the great increase in the number of trains operating with single crews, nearly two and one-half times the tonnage of some years before, had resulted in slower movement over the division and in longer hours and slower earnings. They believed that the time had come to right this situation. The managers representing their owners, the stockholders, whose dividends must be paid, insisted it could not be done with justice to the properties. The managers and men differed as to the cost of the concessions as between $20,000,000 and $100,000,000. They came to an impasse at New York and the national railroad strike seemed imminent. The interests of the public were forgotten in the acute controversy between the men and the managers. Mr. Wilson owned no duty under the law, and had no power to protect the large interests of the public. The railroads were engaged in a public service, and because thereof, they have the right to compel the farmer to surrender his lands for right of way, not at the price he may fix, but at a price fixed in behalf of the roads to take private property for public use. The state's power is exercised because it is interested in having railroads built. Surely not built merely to be looked at, but above all, to be operated. The state then is vitally interested in the operation of the roads, and in this aspect, representing 10,000,000 people of the country, Mr. Wilson felt morally bound to prevent the dynamiting of industry, that would ensue from such a strike. Mr. Hughes remained 100 per cent a candidate, indulged in watchful waiting. Although the logical head of his party and although the matter was in the air from the time of his nomination, he offered no explanation, made no helpful suggestions, and pointed out no possible harm, even during the 15 days when the President's program was under consideration. Mr. Wilson was one per cent a candidate, and he proved himself 99 per cent a servant of the people, he stayed on the job, threw his political fortunes to the wind, and got immediately busy in their behalf to avert a nationwide disaster. He heard both sides, examined carefully all the statistics of the labor department, as to the history of the eight-hour legislation in the last quarter of a century and finally called them together and disclosed to both sides his own plan which was neither the plan of the men nor the managers. The men acquiesced, the managers refused. Had he been weak, he would have yielded in this stage; he did nothing of the sort; he went to Congress and earnestly proceeded to secure such relief as they could offer. The men asked nothing of Congress, the pursued their course as before. The Adamson bill commanded the support of the majority of the Republicans voting in the House, including Uncle Joe Cannon, who says, however, that they put one over on Uncle Joe, but neither Senator Lodge nor Mr. Hughes or Mr. Roosevelt had any explanation or suggestion to offer. The Adamson bill averted the strike, and a nationwide disaster. No other substitute for it was suggested. At Philadelphia, during the consideration of the problem, the president said: "My plan is the best, plain only, and some one else shows me a better, and some ever he does, I will lay aside mine and take his." It is now claimed that the subject should have been thoroughly studied before acting. The critics of Mr. Wilson did certainly study thoroughly and apparently they are yet engaged in that interesting occupation. With a business block ablaze, they would study before sending for the fire engine to learn the cause of the fire. We can on the other hand, get the fire out, save the building, and will then study how to keep it from setting afire again. It is needless to point that this strike would have been disastrous to all concerned, to the owners in great loss of earnings, to the men in enforced idleness and suffering, and to the public in the inability to move raw materials to manufacturing products to the markets and to obtain food supplies for the large cities of the country, and our valued property might have gone up in smoke.

Mr. Hughes' first utterance on September 2 was cryptic and general, "never surrender principle to force." The scribbles who sent it through the country were compelled to guess its relation to Mr. Wilson's strike action. Called for an interview on the strike situation that day, he declined both before and after his St. Louis address as he had repeatedly declined before. This was an undesirable sort of watchful waiting. On Sept. 19th he first pointed out what seemed to him the alleged dangers of the course taken, if he saw them so soon, why did he not tell the country in time? Later, he qualified by saying that he was for an eight-hour day, but that the Adamson bill was merely a device to raise wages. "Wages is inevitably associated with any paid day's work. Whether the Adamson bill be yielded as a time of labor limit law, because of the overtime penalty, or as a measure fixing a wage for eight hours work, it is none the less a step towards an eight-hour day, and if the latter is right, and it is rumored that circulars are outstanding purporting to be from republican headquarters, promising a limit of labor eight hour day to trainmen, why not go part way

The War On Rats

He Destroys Property by Thousands of Dollars Worth Yearly and Spreads Disease—Swat the Rat.

By Frederic J. Haskin
WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 2.
The women's municipal league of Boston recently started a campaign for the extermination of rats in that city. Posters setting forth the peculiarities of the rat, together with a long list of his crimes against man, were placed throughout every district; the children were set to work hunting rat holes and the men to distributing poison, while the women hovered nervously in the background and gave directions from authoritative pamphlets. Since then, thousands of rats have been destroyed, but the women have not relaxed their vigilance. Swatting the rat has become a permanent occupation in Boston. Now women's clubs all over the country have taken up the campaign, and the rat is being pursued relentlessly from one stronghold to another. Prizes are awarded in many towns to the person with the greatest number of dead rats to his credit, and in several cities rat days have been established when the whole community mobilizes for a wholesale slaughter. "We are going to awaken this town to the danger of the rat menace as it has never been awakened before," wrote the secretary of a southwestern woman's club recently to the women's league in Boston, "and would appreciate the use of your posters."

The city of New Orleans has for some time been one of the most active in the country in the war on rats. Now, Orleans is still killing them at the rate of 8,000 a day. It is estimated that rats cost the United States $182,000,000 annually. They destroy our crops, steal our poultry, infest our warehouses, and tunnel under the foundations of our cities, protected by our carelessness and multiplying in incredible numbers. The possible increase of a pair of rats in five years is over 940,000,000,000.
In addition to destroying property, the rat is guilty of a much worse evil—the spread of loathsome diseases, such as a trichinosis and bubonic plague. To the average person, bubonic plague is associated with the Middle Ages or some period equally remote, but to the officers stationed at United States ports it is a very real and ever-present menace. Cases are constantly being reported in Ceylon, Chile, China, Ecuador, Egypt, India, Java, South Africa and a few European ports.

One rat authority also accuses the rodent of the spread of typhoid fever, malarial fevers, diphtheria and other diseases that may be conveyed from drains; for the rat is an enthusiastic admirer of drains where traffic is uncongested and dignified progress is safe. The recent contention that the rat may be to blame for the epidemic of infantile paralysis occurring during the past summer has not been established, but in view of his known character and habits, the suggestion is well within the bounds of possibility.
What is needed in combating the rat is concerted action. There are three things that the rat must have in order to live and propagate his species, and they are food, water and nesting place. Fortunately for him, these have always been forthcoming. People leave their food scattered about in various accessible places; they place their garbage where the rat can get at it; they drop their lunches around office buildings, and they proceed to build up outdoor piles of rubbish, wood piles and plant walks by the thousand that afford admirable nesting facilities. Now, in addition to setting traps and distributing poison, everybody would stop supporting rats, their numbers could be effectively reduced.
As for annihilating the species completely, it seems to be out of the question. Perhaps, if every community and farm and hamlet in the United States joined the campaign against rodents and acted simultaneously it might be done, but, of course, this would be impracticable and even so the rat authorities are doubtful. The rat is an intelligent and resourceful animal. He usually knows a trap when he sees it, and seems to have a mysterious way of imparting his knowledge to future generations; furthermore, you can rarely fool a rat colony the second time on poison. If some of our tribes die from eating a certain kind of cheese or lozenge, the rest of the members stay carefully away from it. While the rat is usually a cannibal, eating the weaker or maimed of his species at every opportunity, he will not touch a poisoned rat. And, what is more, if the trapping and poisoning occur too persistently he devours his young and helpless offspring as a matter of convenience and departs for the next nearest shelter, often to some nearby town.

Many accounts are given by naturalists who have observed whole colonies of rats traveling swiftly by night, crossing roads and ditches and rivers—anything that came in their way—until they reached a place that appeared to be satisfactory. Then they would suddenly disappear and be seen only individually and at long intervals scrambling over the fields or gnawing at a pile of rubbish. It is also asserted by many authorities that by some subtle instinct the rat is made aware of coming events and always migrates in large numbers before an earthquake or a flood. On one of these nocturnal flights the brown rat, which is the principal rodent villain, is supposed to have crossed from Asia to Europe, bringing the plague with him. Here he encountered the smaller and less ferocious black rat, destroying it and usurping its province, while some of his multitudinous offspring continued to migrate in the holds of vessels to America.

Throughout the ages, various measures have been taken to get rid of the brown rat, but nothing has ever proved permanently efficacious. In the first place, man made his first mistake in killing off the enemies of the rat such as mink, weasels, hawks, skunks and especially owls. The cat is generally too well fed to be dangerous to resourceful rats. Occasionally, a lean cat may be found which preys effectively upon rats, but the modern cat as a rule is too well fed to work for a living.
Snakes make excellent rat-catchers, and the black snake which is killed so often on American farms is one of the rats' worst enemies. In tropical countries boa-constrictors and other snakes are kept in the fruit warehouses as a protection against rats, and sometimes a snake is carried in the hold of a vessel carrying food that would otherwise be damaged by rats.
One old captain whose ship has been infested with rats conceived a unique plan for getting rid of them. Every six months he trapped a dog or so rats and separated the males and females. The males he starved and when they were good and hungry fed the females to them. This experiment was repeated for a couple of weeks until he had about seven ferocious male rats with a strong appetite for ratflesh. Then he opened the door of the cage, let them loose and, beginning with the young rats, they cleared the vessel in short order. This plan was no doubt effective enough, but it is singularly unattractive.

Trapping rats is an effective method of destruction, but it requires a great deal of skill. According to Dr. David E. Lantz, who is the rat expert of the Biological Survey, "the improved modern traps with a wire released by a baited trigger and driven on by a coiled spring" are the best type of rat trap in use. With these a department store in Washington caught 136 during the first twenty nights they were set. For bait, small pieces of sausage and bacon were used, but other excellent baits are grain, oatmeal, toasted cheese, toasted bread, fish, raw meat, pine nuts, apples, carrots, and sunflower squash or pumpkin seeds. Broken fresh eggs will also attract the animals, and fresh vegetables are especially tempting to them during the winter.

Poison, of course, offers the simplest solution in getting rid of rodent pests, but the rats have a bad habit of dying wherever it is most convenient, which makes the method impracticable for occupied houses. Outdoors, however, and in barns, sheds and stables, etc., poison may be used with no disastrous results other than the death of an occasional valuable animal of some sort which has eaten the rat poison. Barium carbonate, strychnine, arsenic and phosphorus are all excellent rat poisons when cleverly hidden in attractive bait, but owing to the inflammable nature of phosphorus the Biological Survey does not recommend its use. Arsenic is often resisted by rats and must be used in large quantities, and strychnine is too rapid in action to make it practicable for home use. On the whole, barium carbonate is the best poison. It has no taste or smell, and in the small quantities fed to rats has little effect on domestic animals, while its slow action usually permits the rat to leave the house in search of water before death overtakes him.
Thus there are many ways of getting rid of rats if one is clever in baiting and trapping. The rat used to be a much-needed scavenger before the sanitation era, but this usefulness has long been a thing of the past. Yet the rat population of the United States is as large as the human population, and the women's clubs of the nation are compelled to work hard in order to arouse their communities to the ever-present menace.

ALL WRONG

The Mistake is Made by Many La Crosse Citizens.
Look for the cause of backache. To be cured you must know the cause.
If it's weak kidneys you must see the kidneys working right.
A La Crosse resident tells you how. L. L. Brown, 403 S. Eighth St., La Crosse, says: "I suffered from a lame back for quite awhile. I had a constant, dull ache across my loins and rubbing with liniments didn't help me. I made inquiries about a kidney medicine and a druggist recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. I got some and they cured me completely. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills before and I am glad to do so again. They are reliable and have my highest endorsement."

SAY CLEVELAND LOSES

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 2.—Cleveland is falling behind Detroit in the population race if an estimate of the Cleveland Telephone company's public Wednesday is correct. This company's twenty-five field agents who have completed a five-month survey, say Cleveland has only 770,000 population. Detroit claims 820,000. Cleveland's estimate, based on the school census, is 832,000.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or ludanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, ludanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses causes stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Made His Profit

A long-waisted man, with the nose of a fox and an eye full of speculation, walked up to a second-hand clothes dealer and said: "See that overcoat hanging out down on the street there?" "Of course," "Well, I've taken a fancy to it. It's rather cheery to ask you to go down there, but I'll make it an object. I won't give but eight dollars for the coat, but I'll give you one dollar to buy it for me. You are also a Jew, and know how to beat them down. Here are nine dollars." The dealer took the money and started off, and in five minutes was back with the coat. "Good," chuckled the other. "I reckoned you'd lay him out. How much did you make for your share?" "Well, ask dot is my pranch store, and I only ask six dollar for de goat. I was more as tree dollar ahead!"

SO WONDERFULLY HELPED BY TANLAC HASTENS TO RECOMMEND IT TO FRIENDS

"I took Tanlac mainly for my kidneys and back," said J. J. Green, living at 364 Forest Ave., Fond du Lac, to the Tanlac representative the other day while in Bechud's Drug Store, where Tanlac is sold.

Mr. Green is employed in the large concern, Sweet's Machine Shop, as a machinist and is well liked by his co-workers. "You know," he continued, "Tanlac did me so much good right from the start that I began to brag about it and tell all my friends about it, consequently several of them have followed my example and are now praising Tanlac with me."

"I had a sort of cold and lumbago in my back that would hurt me, I gave a sudden twist or move. I had no appetite, although my stomach did not bother me much. I was just not hungry. I was dreadfully nervous and my sleep was very broken and restless."

"I first read about Tanlac in the papers, that is the way I commenced to take it, and it certainly has helped me. Whenever I hear any one complaining about feeling badly I always say, 'Take Tanlac,' and if they take my advice they are never sorry, but grateful to me for the suggestion."

"I have taken five bottles, so you see I went at it earnestly and sincerely, and have not regretted it one bit. My back and kidneys feel very much better and I have a splendid appetite now. I can sleep better than I have for a long time."

Tanlac can be obtained here only at C. A. Begun's Drug Store in the Majestic Building, where J. C. Henderson, the Tanlac man, is telling the public more about Tanlac.

Tanlac can also be obtained from Geo. H. Seidel at Sparta.

hoping to complete the journal later on. For any one who believes in an eight hour day, there was no surrender of principle. If the Adamson bill had proposed an eleven hour standard instead of eight, it would then have been going the wrong way for those who believe in an eight hour day. The simple question presented is should a starving man receive a slice of bread, because he is denied at once the whole loaf, which he may believe himself entitled to, and recently when asked if he would repeal the Adamson bill, Mr. Hughes responded with this generality, that a surrender can never be repeated. An astonishing position for one who says that principle should never have been surrendered; he now says, because there has been a surrender, those who believe that the legislation is wrong, and that it never should have been passed must submit rather than undertake to repeal. This seems like inconsistency and an evasion of a difficult question.

Mr. Hughes' Record as Governor

He failed to make headway against the old guard in New York. After three years and nine months' service, and a struggle against them, which was greatly to his credit, and during which probably because of that struggle he was unable to secure much constructive legislation, he gave up the fight and resigned and left politics. Can he control, or overcome, or make headway against the same interests now any more than then? He opposed the income tax amendment to the United States constitution, because as he said the language, from whatever source derived, would in his judgment authorize the tax on income derived from state bonds of New York held by private persons. At the same time, he declared himself in favor of an income tax, but if every other governor in every state of the Union had taken the same stand, that he did, and the legislatures of each of the other states had been moved as was New York to adopt that view, the present income tax amendment would not be in the constitution of the United States, and the income tax act passed by the present administration in October 1913 under which we derived in the first three quarters of the year $42,000,000 of revenue and in the second year $80,000,000 of revenue, and under which there is promised $120,000,000 of revenue for the current year, would not have been in existence for only because of the amendment which he protested against as governor was the act of congress upheld finally by the supreme court of the United States. This was done while he was a member of that court, and he concurred in the opinion. Brushaber vs. U. Pac. Railroad.

He opposed the two cent fare bill for railroads in New York and yet such laws are operating effectively and satisfactorily in many states of the Union at the present time. His stand on the teachers' equal pay bill was that if women were equalized in respect to one occupation with men that they should be as to all, that that principle should be seriously debated before being applied. The next legislature enacted the measure giving equal pay to teachers alone, a Democratic Governor Dix approved it, and the state of New York has experienced no disaster or social shock by reason of the fact that it applied to the single occupation of teaching.

Application of the like principle to the question of suffrage, a matter of voting alone would have resulted in there being no women's suffrage at this time in the United States, for it was a state by state development, in one place at one time, in another, another, and limited to that one single right.

The Coney Island five cent fare bill—it was vetoed with the statement that the legislature seemed to think that it could fix five cents as the proper rate of fare. It was well known of course that the legislature could only fix it in the first instance, but it required a legislative declaration with gubernatorial approval before the question of whether the rate was fair and reasonable could be tested. As a result of the veto, it never has been tested, and never can be until some such law shall be passed. The fare to Coney Island and back is 10c, under the bill it would have been 5c. On July 4th around a quarter of a million people, largely poor people of New York, visited that beach. They paid the roads $50,000, under the bill they would have paid $25,000 for the one day. Coney Island operations alone during the season would represent a difference to the people of New York of several millions of dollars.

The Consolidated Gas case applies here as well as to the railroad situation. The supreme court of the United States told the Gas companies to go back to the proposed rate which was established by the legislature of the state of New York upon a bill approved by the governor, try it out, and see how it worked, and if they suffered hardship under it, to return to court. The Gas companies would never have had to apply the rate, or made the test, which demonstrates that it was an advantage, rather than an injury to them, if the bill fixing the 80c rate per 1,000 feet for gas had not been passed by the legislature, and approved by the governor.

The case this fall is of peculiar interest to the people. How the government shall be run in the next year or so may turn the question of life or death for many of our citizens, according as many of our citizens will depend in large degree the prices obtained by our people for the products of the soil. The people are interested, they are patient in their attention to facts. They want not adjectives or oratory. Their reason must be appealed to, not their passions or their impulses. The great silent mind of the country grows with the problem as it never studied it before; it recognizes the critical situation now impending. It recognizes, or will recognize the value to the people of honesty and faithful service, and with the knowledge of this service impressed upon the people, there ought to be little to fear as to what their verdict will be.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin oc-asionally keeps the stomach regulated and they eat their favorite food.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is astonishing. Please don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.
